BAND PLAYS ON HOOD SNOWLINE

The Knights of Pythias band set a new precedent Sunday when its members gave a concert at the snowline of Mount Hood. It was the first time in history that a full musical organization has ever played on the peak.

The band accompanied members of the Progressive Business Men's Association, who made the junket as an outing feature and in order that their members might acquire first hand information and thus be in position to answer authentically the many inquiries of motor tourists.

Including outside recreationists a total of more than 300 motored to the mile high hostelry, the largest crowd ever reported for any one day on the north snowline of Hood.

The trip Sunday was taken by many to be prophetic of an ever increasing number of such parties in the future, as the snowpeak becomes each month more available.

The band boys were for the most part carried to the high resort in a truck furnished for the occasion by the Emory Lumber Co. The high altitude, the band members say rendered the work for those who blew wind instruments exceedingly difficult.

Robert Perigo and a party had climbed to the top of Cooper's Spur, arrived at the mountain early, and listened to the mile high band concert from there. They declared that they could hear the music very plainly, although 23 miles away.

At Bend Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Allen and son, Cortley, and the latter's family are residing. The younger Mr. Allen is operating a prosperous business as a tinsmith. J. E. Anderson is engaged there in the automobile business.

Richard Yates has just arrived at Bend to take charge of the plant of the central Oregon farmers' dairy association.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin C. Eberly, who operate a flourishing variety store at Bend, are prospering and are held in high esteem by the city's business folk and their patrons. Geo. W. Stokoe, whose wife is a daughter of Mr. E. Noble, is in charge of the lines of the end telephone company.

Harold, Jr., 4-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Fuhrman, of the Oak Grove district, was burned to death yesterday in a small rubber house which he and a small neighboring girl had fired while playing with matches. The little girl, who gave the alarm, was painfully burned. The child's body was terribly charred.

Mr. Fuhrman and family moved here from White Swan, Wash., in March. The 15-month old son of H. Watanuki, pioneer Upper Valley Japanese orchardist, was drowned Tuesday in a shallow spring in the back yard. It is presumed that the child had fallen on its face while trying to get a drink.

The body of Miss Clara Heald, aged 40, who died Tuesday night at the Cottage Hospital, was shipped to Portland yesterday by C. C. Anderson for interment. Miss Heald went to Parkdale a month ago for her health. Suffering a relapse she was brought here. Her brother, Ernest Heald, was with her at the end.

Brothers Hold Reunion Harrison Wade, of Los Angeles, who arrived here last week in search of a brother, W. Wade, whom he had not seen for 21 years, was on the point of leaving after searching the tax roll and not finding his brother's name, when he learned that a man named Wade was residing on a farm 23 miles west of the city. He immediately made inquiries that led to a happy reunion between the two brothers. The California brother recently learned in a letter from his old home in Kentucky of the residence of the local man. He thought that he had purchased a place here, but the place was merely occupied under lease.

Walter P. Eaton Sees Valley Walter Pritchard Eaton, eastern dramatic critic and newspaper man, who with Mrs. Eaton was returning to Portland from a tour of central Oregon with Fred Kiser and family, spent a few hours seeing the Hood River valley yesterday. The party visited the Oak Grove home of C. E. Graves for lunch.

Originally Mr. Kiser had planned to take Mr. Eaton to the top of Mount Hood, but the latter declared that he secured enough mountain climbing to last him for all time on an attempt to climb Mount Jefferson.

HOOD FOLK THRIVE IN CENTRAL OREGON

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Moe, accompanied by Joe D. Thomson, motored to Bend, leaving here last Thursday, to attend the annual convention of the Oregon State Editorial Association.

The party camped Thursday night in Hay creek canyon, 120 miles from home. The latter returned home Sunday by train, while Mr. and Mrs. Moe arrived Monday evening by car.

Friday morning a stop of an hour and a half was made at Redmond. A number of former Hood River folk reside in this prosperous central Oregon agricultural section. John W. Allen is assistant to the manager of the National Bank of Redmond. The party called on him and Mrs. Allen and their fine three-month old daughter, the latter, in development and healthfulness, an advertisement of the health features of the central Oregon country. Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Warren reside at Redmond, where Mr. Warren has established a tire shop. Although he has been there less than a year, Mr. Warren has developed one of the most popular businesses of his kind in that district and he is vulcanizing tires and affording service for motorists form many outlying sections. Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Cornelius, accompanied by Mrs. H. L. Goyette, Mrs. Cornelius' mother, and Miss Henrietta Goyette, her sister, are spending their summer on their alfalfa ranch. Mr. and Mrs. Moe called on them Sunday on their return home. Dr. Scobee and A. S. Keit own large stock and hay ranches in the same neighborhood.

MARKETING TALKS

Talk No. 3—The Universal Law of Trading

Orchards are bought and sold at a definite price. The orchard product should be similarly sold. Our selling method is based on these principles. The price definitely agreed upon is the whole thing.

We sell only at outright prices before the product is shipped. The grower should know what the price is. As we actually represent him, he does know. He is the principal in the deal.

We sell either for CASH f.o.b. shipping point, or F.O.B. cars shipping point, inspection on arrival at destination. Control of the product remains with the grower inflexibly until actually paid for.

Who challenges this method of selling at outright prices challenges the universal law of trading.

Our growers have the alternative of accepting orders based on cash f.o.b. shipping point, or f.o.b. based on inspection at destination.

The Malboeuf-Kimball Company will not buy a single box of apples for its own account. Our duty is to sell our grower's product.

Why consign your apples to any market, or through any source if you don't know what price they are going to bring?

MALBOEUF-KIMBALL COMPANY

Warehouses at Odell and Hood River.

ATTENTION

To Auto Owners

When your car needs Top, Curtain or any repair work, see the Top Man for lowest prices possible at the Highway Auto Co. Do it now.

This department has a good equipment for its purpose. Times are slow and unless I am able to procure sufficient patronage, I will be obliged to relinquish this section of my business.

HOLMAN AROUSES LOCAL AUTHORITIES

Local authorities express resentment at charges made by Multnomah County Commissioner Rufus C. Holman at a conference of Lower Columbia River Highway citizens and Portlanders at the Chamber of Commerce in Portland Monday. Mr. Holman, who stated that the arrest privilege of officers had reached the point of a nuisance on the Highway, cited that a woman had recently been fined $15 for stopping on the Highway near here recently with two wheels of the car resting on the pavement. He suggested that more warnings and less arrests be made.
