A HERO OF THE WAR

The great war claimed another victim here last Friday night when Medrie M. Greer, veteran of Argonne Forest, where he was shell shocked and gassed, passed out on the long trail, dying from injuries inflicted in moments of frenzy. Medrie M. Greer was just as much a hero as the man who fell within the tragic forest itself and his countrymen should so honor him.

The case of the young ex-service man was particularly sad. That old heartbroken grandfather came here to take his boy home, only to find him dead. The grandfather raised Medrie. The two had been comrades. But the blow was borne as by a patriarch. The grandfather, now retired, was for a number of years a missionary of the Unitarian church to Washington territory.

The great war left much life wreckage that will drift away in the next few years. Let us be on guard that none of it is carried out on a tide so pitifully sad as the circumstances of Medrie Greer's death here last week.

How violent have been the swings of the pendulum in the past few years! It seems but a few months ago when the nation was crying for men. There were tasks on every hand. Today one of the most important problems is that of finding work for the unemployed. The situation is a by-product of the war, one of the things that has been left in the lap of all nations. It has resulted from characteristics of human nature. Young men volunteered or were selected by the draft rules to fight the country's battles. If some means could have been devised for such draft of all the needed resources of our country as a supplement to the volunteering of such resources, then America would have lighted a beacon torch of patriotism that would indeed have flashed around the globe. We are now paying for the greed of war days. Capital and labor alike battled for first place in line to pick up profits. The country's crisis was made an asset. Much of the burdens of today result from a tendency to swing on to easy times. It is difficult for capital or labor to give up the desire to draw heavy revenue. The bad habits formed cannot be broken overnight. But a co-operation between the two vital elements of industry will go far toward bringing about a reduction, a lowering of prices and making available a job for every man who wants to work.

"Buy your apples now," says a railroad president—but he has a salary of $50,000 a year.—Fruit Trade Journal. We wonder how such editorial comment affects the grower of apples. As we have said on former occasions, apple growers would not be aroused to complaints about the comparatively low prices of apples this season, if the fruit would reach the ultimate consumer without, apparently, the addition of too numerous high profits on the fruit as it travels from his orchard to the mouth of those who eat it.

In Oregon onslaughts on the Ku Klux Klan are but attacks on windmills or men of straw, for there appears to be no Klan in this sensible state. It has died of inanition, if it ever existed. But Oregon's status may be taken as an example for other states, where perverted ideas of human rights are strutting up bloodshed and riot.

If the ultimate consumer is forced, this year, to pay the old, extreme high prices for apples the growers will have just cause to rise up in anger and demand a housecleaning of the elements that stand between the orchards and the families that eat apples.

We note that barrel apples are going to move out of the west this year, if plans of eastern shippers come to maturity. Those growers who help to initiate such a policy may find in years to come that they are selling their birthright for a mess of pottage.

It is the wheel that squeaks that gets the grease. There is probably some truth in the old adage, and no doubt the concerted complaint of apple shippers here resulted in the stimulation of delivery of refrigerator cars.

Adequate hospital facilities are needed by every community. Hood River is no exception to the rule. If we set about with a strong, unselfish desire on the part of every family, we can attain our needs and secure a hospital.

The mid-Columbia has never enjoyed a more beneficent Indian summer. Every apple grower and every one of his harvest crews has something to be thankful for.

The apples will be pretty well off the trees by the end of the week, and most of the trees will be coated with Bordeaux. Then let it rain.

The frost is coming.

Mother Nature has been busy with her paint brush in the mid-Columbia, and never before have the copse and hillsides presented more resplendent coloring.

RESTAURANT INSTEAD OF A CAFETERIA

Instead of a cafeteria, was originally planned, Chas. Gunn and Wing Lee, who have taken over the old Lotus Grille, will operate a restaurant. The place will be open continuously from 11 a. m. until 12 p. m.

GOWN WORN BY JOHN WESLEY

English Wesleyan Body Receives Gift of Robe That Belonged to Founder of Methodism.

The Wesleyan Methodist Connection has just received from one of its leading laymen a gown that belonged to the founder of Methodism, according to the London Daily News. John Wesley died in 1791, so that the garment is more than 130 years old.

Time has, of course, left its marks upon the gown. Some parts are discolored and others are worn and patched. The material is heavy, and upon it, worked in black, are flowers and prancing horses. As the great preacher was a little man, the gown must have hung about his heels.

It is claimed that the gown was a preaching gown, but it is very dissimilar to the ecclesiastical garment that, according to authentic records, John Wesley wore in the pulpit. This one possesses an ordinary sleeve, and, generally speaking, it seems to accord with the style of a black study-gown. The donor of the gown has also presented a pair of slippers belonging to Wesley. These are in good condition, and are of the kind that he would wear in his study.

Wesley, of course, traveled throughout Great Britain and Ireland in all weathers on his preaching tours, and it was suggested that he wore this heavy gown as a protection against atmospheric conditions.

The Wesley museum contains a large number of interesting relics of John and Charles Wesley. It possesses the study chair of John, and presently, as a gift from the donor of the gown, Charles Wesley's study chair will be placed there.

A large proportion of the visitors to the museum come from the overseas dominions and the United States, where the interest in all that relates to the early history of Methodism is very keen.

BLACKBIRD IN THRUSH'S NEST

Correspondent of Scottish Newspaper Calls Attention to Remarkable Incident He Has Observed.

Last week I discovered in the ivy on a sunk wall in my garden a nest which had all the characteristics of a thrush's nest, with plastered lining only, and which contained two eggs, pale blue with small black spots—the eggs of a song thrush, writes a correspondent. Later on I noticed a bird sitting on the nest. Only the head was visible, but it appeared to me that the bird was a hen blackbird and not a thrush. It was some days before I found the bird off the nest, when on looking in, I discovered that the plastered lining of the nest had been slightly covered with dried grasses, and that the nest contained four blackbird's eggs—bluish green with mottled ends. The two thrush's eggs had disappeared. They could not be found at the foot of the wall below the nest, but there was found on a green above the wall the broken egg of a song thrush. When I discovered the nest part of its outer wall was slightly torn, as if a cat had climbed up the ivy and endeavored to claw out the bird then sitting. Is it possible that the thrush may have been scared away and the nest taken over by a blackbird and adapted to her requirements? None of my friends, versed in the habits of birds, ever heard of a similar case.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

People Generous With Tips.

New York likes to refer to its spendthrift millionaires. The head waiter of a magnificent eatery told me that for the thoughtful gratuity he preferred the visiting sod-buster to the son of a millionaire. The young man from Hoboken having his annual fling has read so much about huge tips that he thinks anything under a $10 bill will be tossed back at him. The information volunteered by the head waiter came after a well-known spendthrift had departed with two young ladies. His dinner check came to $25 and he gave the waiter $2—the head waiter nothing. "And," continued the head waiter, "see that young fellow over there in the green suit with a large Adam's apple. He has been shucking off $5 bills to every waiter in the place. And he gave me a half century note. I'm afraid his keeper will be along soon and make us give it back."—Exchange.

See Eve as Idealistic Woman.

Most Italian women if they had their choice to be anything they wished in their sex, would rather be Eve, according to results of a vote recently taken by one of the Roman papers.

The argument advanced for being Eve was that she, of all women, had no competition. Her husband was never away from home and there was no other woman on whom he might cast an alluring glance.

Those who did not choose to be Eve chose for the most part to be Mary Magdalene, because, after being allowed to enjoy all the sins of the world, she was forgiven and afterward became a saint, thereby enjoying all joys of heaven.
