INQUEST HOLDS
GUARD TO JURY

Charles Burnett, native Australian and attendant at the receiving ward of the Pendleton Insane asylum was held here in jail last week to await grand jury investigation as the result of a verdict rendered by a coroner's jury investigation last Thursday night. The jury's verdict stated that Louis Topick, insane laborer, who was being escorted from Portland to Pendleton, in charge of Burnett died in this county, and recommended that Burnett be held for grand jury action.

The verdict did not specifically state that Burnett's acts, although Roy E. Thomas, a brakeman of the O. & W. & N. Co., who was aboard the train carrying the two, swore that the attendant repeatedly kicked the patient, caused death, and for this reason, attorneys speculating over the case expressed the opinion that the verdict would be unable to hold him should habeas corpus proceedings be brought. Members of the jury expressed themselves as dissatisfied with the hearing inasmuch as corroborative testimony was not presented to sustain the story of Thomas.

R. H. Lee, a foreman of the rail line, who was on the train, was to have been called but was unable to come here from Portland. Dr. V. R. Abraham, who testified before the jury, stated that an examination of Topick's abdomen showed that he had sustained a rupture and had bled to death. He declared that in his opinion no fall of the man would have caused such an injury. Topick's body was said to have been covered with bruises. A deep cut on the side of his neck created some speculation. This, however, it was stated, might have been explained by the man having fallen against a trunk corner.

Burnett in his own behalf was unable to explain how Topick could have injured his abdomen. He declared, however, that he had used no extreme violence.

"I am a humane man," he said, explaining that he was in charge of the receiving ward at the hospital because of his temperament and his ability to quell newly received violent patients. While he did not state so at the trial, he explained how he had been sent to Portland for Topick because the regular guard, accustomed to such duty, had been incapacitated the day before in an encounter with another violent patient. The other case, peculiarly had occurred in Hood River county as the train left this city for The Dalles.

In his testimony Burnett declared that the hospital had made a mistake in sending him to Pendleton in handling violent men on the road, for Topick. He had telegraphed to Pendleton to have two guards meet him at the train. The message was dropped off almost immediately was called by the death of the man.

Thomas was very strong in his statements against Burnett, and his story was one depicting gross cruelty. He stated that he had noticed that the patient showed violence on entering the smoking car in Portland. To avoid disturbance of other passengers, he had the guard take the man to the baggage car. Thomas stated that Topick's arms were fastened in handcuffs and so strapped to his body that he couldn't raise them above his waist.

Thomas stated that he advised Burnett to strap his patient to a stretcher in the baggage car but that the man had declined to do so. The patient, according to his story, was tied with a rope which the guard held. Thomas asserted that he returned to the car several times from his work to find Burnett kicking his prisoner's patient. He characterized the treatment such as one might accord a dumb brute. Burnett interrupted at this point to declare that he wouldn't treat a dumb brute unkindly.

"I wouldn't kick a dog," he said. "Well, from what I saw of you," replied Thomas with some heat, "I wouldn't trust a dog to you." Coroner Sifton reported to the grand jury that he had talked with the superintendent of the hospital by telephone. The latter, he said, gave Burnett a high recommendation, stating that he was a very dependable man. The superintendent had offered to come here and attend the hearing.

The members of the coroner's jury were: C. G. Cornelius, Mark Cameron, C. Dethman, Walter Walters, E. E. Brett and Walter McDougal.

Burnett was bound over to the grand jury Friday on a charge of manslaughter, the complaint alleging that he used such violence in handling the insane patient, as to cause the later's death. Burnett's arraignment was in the court of Justice of the Peace Ordway. Bail was fixed at $1,000. Assistant Superintendent Plamondon, of the Pendleton hospital, here in behalf of Burnett, who, he declares, was one of the most trustworthy attendants at the hospital, will attempt to raise bail.

Joseph H. Jones, of Portland, was here in the interest of the dead man's widow and three small children. The man, he says, was a native of Austria.

Mayerdale Apples Are Displayed

One of the most interesting fruit displays recently seen in Portland was that placed on exhibit at one of the big windows of Lipman & Wolfe Co. by the Mayerdale Orchard Co., of Mosier, owned by Mark A. Mayer. Mr. Mayer showed selected boxes of his main varieties, and plate displays of the fine fruit, as produced on the banner place of the neighboring district, made the mouths of window shoppers water.

A box of Arkansas Blacks, large and well colored, probably created more interest than any other variety. Mr. Mayer says the Arkansas Black, if it had the flavor of some of the other varieties, would make fortunes for north-western growers.

Chamberlain's Tablets Have Done Her A World of Good

"Chamberlain's Tablets have done me a world of good," writes Mrs. Ella L. Button, Kirkville, N. Y. "I have recommended them to a number of my friends and all who have used them praise them highly." When troubled with indigestion or constipation, give them a trial and realize for yourself what an excellent medicine it is.

SENATOR STANFIELD OFFERS FREE SEEDS

United States Senator Robert N. Stanfield will forward to any Oregon constituent who requests them flower and vegetable seeds made available under the congressional free seed distribution act. He writes to local newspapers:

"The congress and the government have often been criticised for the policy of distributing vegetable seeds free. Upon investigation and the actual cost to the government is $360,000. The department of agriculture estimates the products grown from the seed at $140,000,000 each year.

"Whether the policy is wise or not I have been allotted for distribution a quantity of vegetable and a few flower seeds. In that the government is spending good money for the seeds I do not wish to see them wasted and therefore do not want to distribute them indiscriminately but shall be glad to send them to anyone in Oregon desiring them for use."

Underwood Gets Snow

Mid-Columbia snowfall last week began creeping toward the lower levels. Accompanying a steady rain on the valley floor orchards, heavy snow was deposited Friday on Underwood mountain just opposite here. The eminence was last covered with snow last spring April 29.

Renew Your Motor's Vitality

That old expression of workmen, whose accomplishments on your wares or your machines make them like new again, to use their own expression, is much overworked. But it is a fact that the reboring of cylinders of automobile motors restores them to their normal power. The little increase in the size of the rebored motors does not increase the power, but the fact that the motors are put in the condition in which, presumably, they left the factory, often accounts for what owners justly claim to be a noticeable increase in power. We have the most up-to-date facilities for reboring your cylinders.
