Delayed Dormant Spray Due Now (By Leroy Childs)

The delayed dormant spray consisting of lime sulphur, 1-30 and black leaf 40 at the rate of a pint and three-quarters to the 200-gallon tank should be applied during the present week if best results are to be obtained. Growers who have used the oil spray will not find it necessary to make this application. This spray will be quite important, due to the fact that brown aphid is quite prevalent this season, and aphid at this time is the only one that can be applied effectively. It is also suggested that a pound or a pound and a half of calcium caseinate spreader be added to each 200-gallon tank. This will increase the effectiveness of the black leaf.

Boy Charged With Reckless Driving

Authorities the first of the week were seeking Franklin Peeler, charged with reckless driving and causing the wreck Sunday of an automobile driven by Oscar Emery, of The Dalles. Mr. Emery, who was accompanied by his sister, Mrs. J. L. Mrs. Roberts sustained injured hips and is suffering from shock, it is stated. She has been taken to her home at The Dalles.

Justice of the Peace Onthank Tuesday fined Jack Davis and Melvin Leo Stinson $10 each on a charge of driving an automobile without a license. The men, according to Traffic Officer Murray, loaded furniture on a light truck up the valley and started to Oregon City. Later, it is said, they secured dealers' license plates from a local garage and sought to make their way over the Columbia River Highway with the dealers' plates. They were stopped at Wyeth by Mr. Murray, who told their car there and removed the license plates.

Young Peeler was taken before Judge Onthank Tuesday at noon. The latter assessed a fine of $25, deprived the boy of his driver's permit for 20 days and sentenced him to 30 days in jail. The jail sentence was suspended. Judge Onthank, however, declared that a further offense would result in severe punishment.

EXTRA TRAVELS FAR TO SEE HIMSELF ACT

It was night. In his cutting room Erich von Stroheim was busy reducing "Foolish Wives," the feature to be at the Rialto Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, to screen proportions. His assistants silently worked on their various tasks and only the ticking of a French clock punctuated the stillness.

Suddenly there appeared in the doorway the best figure of a little old man enveloped in the loose folds of an overcoat much too large for him. He peered about him uncertainly, his sharp, black eyes gradually growing accustomed to the light.

"Are you the feller they call von Stroheim?" he inquired.

"That's the name to which I answer," agreed the star-director.

"Well, then you're the man I'm looking for," said the old man. "I've come down here from Monterey to see that play of yours called 'Foolish Wives,' and I can't find it at the theatre nowhere. I asked some folks about it and they said it wasn't done yet."

"That's right," agreed von Stroheim, "it doesn't come to Los Angeles until later—perhaps some time in January."

"Yes, but I can't wait that long—it ain't safe," replied the little man. "My heart ain't what it used to be and I'm gettin' on eighty. I want to see that picture."

"And why are you so interested in 'Foolish Wives'?" questioned von Stroheim.

"Because I'm in it," declared the old man with a little grin. "I'm the old feller that you stopped on the road that day near Carmel and told one of your men to make up for atmosphere."

"To that picture you can't miss me: I've got on a bandanna handkerchief around my head and I'm out in front of the pigeon shoot on your set at Point Lobos. It was a lot of trouble for me to get neighbors to look after my chickens and horses and cows, while I stayed up there and worked in the movies—but it was good fun and if I wasn't so old, I'd be an actor yet."

"I can wait till January to see the picture—it ain't safe—so there ought to be something you could do about it."

There was. Mr. von Stroheim made arrangements for the man to see the preview of "Foolish Wives" shown for the censors on their visit as the guests of Carl Laemmle to Universal City and Los Angeles, after which the old fellow went back to his cows and chickens, satisfied with his fling at high life in Monte Carlo.
