Norman P. Coleman, president of the Loyal Legion of Loggers and Lumbermen, in an address before the Sunday Evening Club of Riverside church Sunday on "The Greatness of the Bible," declared that people too often take quotations from the Holy Book and apply them erroneously, not considering their context in the original or their background. Mr. Coleman declared the Bible one of the greatest volumes from a literary standpoint in existence, in that it showed the progression of a moral consciousness.

The program was made entertaining by the appearance of students of the city schools, who under the direction of Mrs. C. H. Henney, rendered a number of delightful songs.

These are days of scientific study of our system of carrying merchandise from producer to consumer, and one of the most important activities of organized retail merchants is in giving the smaller as well as the larger merchants the benefits of study and research work toward reducing the costs of distribution and improving efficiency so that the retailers can, by more scientific methods, give the public better values for less money.

"A great deal of this work is national in its scope. Then there are organization functions that are statewide or limited to the state and then again certain functions of organization are purely local in character.

"Organized credit and collection activities, for example, are primarily local functions but become state-wide through cooperation between the different local chapters of our state association.

"These activities are very much in the public interest and for the benefit of the public, because it is easy to understand that the retail merchants who lose little or no money are able consequently to operate their stores successfully on narrower margins of profit.

"That is one of several ways of working toward the desired end of giving the people more and better merchandise for their money.

"Perhaps the public is not aware that it owes to retailers' organizations a great deal of legislation for the protection of the public. The pure food and honest weight and measure laws have been put on the statute books of most states through the activity of retail merchants' organizations.

"Such laws protect the public and

MERCHANTS PLAN NEW ORGANIZATION

Merchants of Hood River will hold a meeting at the Hotel Oregon next Wednesday evening when a Hood River chapter of the Oregon State Retail Merchants' Association will be organized. A committee, composed of Harry Conaway, Earl H. Shank, C. O. Huelat and R. B. Perigo, is in charge of preparations. Speakers scheduled for the meeting are: L. L. Thomas, of Marshfield, president of the state organization; W. W. Hill, of Portland, chairman of the executive board; Dr. W. J. Hundley, of Seattle, secretary of the Washington state organization; and Edward A. MacLean, of Portland, secretary of the Oregon association.

also protect the honest merchants from the meanest kind of competition—the competition of the dishonest retailers who, fortunately, are becoming very few and far between nowadays.

"We have heard a lot of talk about profiteering but anyone who will stop to consider the matter reasonably will realize that profiteering by retailers is practically impossible. Competition makes it impossible. There is not a retail merchant anywhere who would like anything better than for a competitor to undertake to get unreasonable profits, for it would give him the finest chance in the world to take that competitor's customers away from him.

"If anyone would try to find profiteering he will have to pass the retailers and go higher up.

"The Harvard Bureau of Research is doing a great work in getting at facts along this line. Their report shows, for example, that the retail jeweler of the United States, broadly speaking did not make a cent last year—that is, the jeweler generally all lost money instead of making a single dollar last year.

"And the retail grocer sells about 45 per cent of his goods at cost or below cost throughout the United States—that is, taking the cost of the goods and adding also the cost of doing business, such as rent, clerk hire, delivery, insurance and so forth.

"One of the surprising things revealed by modern scientific study of merchandising is the high cost of doing business of mail order houses and chain stores. It appears that the greatest economy and efficiency is found where an individual proprietor of a store is personally on the job, looking after the interests of his customers and watching everything connected with the business. The biggest organization and the best employee, it seems can never equal the individual storekeeper in efficiency and economy of operation."
