Director JARDINE TELLS OF STATION
Director James T. Jardine, of the Oregon Experiment Station, last week delivered an address to members of Hood River County Farmers' Union in session as guests of the O'Neil Grange. Director Jardine cited that the main station in collaboration with the branches at Burns, Moro, Talent, Astoria and Eugene was doing the agricultural interests of the state to increase their earnings by the thousands of dollars.
Director Jardine told how the main station maintained laboratories for chemical and other forms of analysis. Practically all of such analytical work, bacteriological and plant-breed work, he stated, is conducted at the Corvallis station. Director Jardine told the growers that the work of the station in improving strains of grain had made hundreds of thousands of dollars annually for the state.
Oregon experimental work, Mr. Jardine declared, has gained worldwide note through the success of the Talent station in propagating pear stocks that are blight resistant. The Talent station, in charge of Director Reimer, has assembled the largest collection of pear varieties on the globe. Mr. Jardine cited how the Astoria station is specializing on dairy stock and types of forage crops.
Mr. Jardine praised the work of the Hood River station highly. He declared that Director Childs, through his experiments with spray applications, had taken a lead throughout the nation in such work.
At Harrogate, Director Jardine said, the only station specializing in certain phases of irrigation work is maintained. Through work of this station, it has been found that irrigation water can be cut from 9 to 14 feet annually. The lower amount, properly applied, is more efficient in crop production, and it has also made possible development of land in the arid country where water is at a premium.
