SMALL GIRL GOES UP TO LOOKOUT

Margaret, the 16-month old daughter of W. G. Peters, engineer for the Bureau of Public Roads in charge of constructing the Mount Hood Loop Highway in the Oregon National Forest, is the youngest person ever to have ascended to the top of Lookout mountain, a peak which rises 6,450 feet off to the east of Mount Hood. The little girl, accompanying her father and an older sister by horseback, journeyed the 9 1/2-mile distance from the Peters camp on the East Fork of Hood river last Sunday. As the crew files the distance to Lookout mountain from the road camp is less than four miles, but the trail zigzags in making the heavy grade. The little girl stood the trip well. Considerable snow still covers the top of the mountain around the forest service lookout house. Mrs. Peters and two children are spending the entire summer at the road camp, in a heavy grove of young firs along the new highway. The children secure their milk supply from Lily, a maternally milk goat. Mrs. Peters spent a part of last summer in camp with her husband. Mr. Peters planned to take a cow into the remote mountain district but found that it would be no small task to supply provisions for the animal. He solved the milk problem by purchasing Lily. The milk goat seemed lonesome last year, so a young cow was purchased. Engineer Peters and taken along for company. The camp's household message also includes a kitten. In the evenings, as Mr. Peters returns home from excursions over the highway, he is met by his wife, the two children, two goats and the kitten. The camp is characterized by beautiful happiness.

NEW MARKET ROAD OPEN TO TRAFFIC

A mile of new concrete market road, an extension of a mile laid last year on the West Side just south of the city, was opened for traffic last week. The road, constructed by Lindstrom & Carlson, contractors of Portland, is 18 feet wide. Its cost was approximately $25,000.

The contractors won the praise of orchardists for their dispatch in building the road. It was completed in 30 days after they had assembled their men and equipment. Delays in the construction of the mile of pavement last summer inconvenienced orchardists in the movement of their early apple tonnage.

Sales Changes Are Announced

The Apple Growers Association sales department last week announced that offices formerly maintained in New York City and Omaha, Neb., will be closed, and a new sales headquarters will be opened at Chicago with C. M. Furry, Inc. Mr. Furry the past two years was in charge of the Omaha office of the sales organization. The New York office was eliminated through the appointment of Simpson, French, New York City apple dealers, as exclusive agents for the metropolitan, Boston and all the New England states. This concern, which will continue to handle the cooperative export tonnage, has been in charge of export shipments for the past four years.

MOUNT HOOD LOOP IS NOW BARRICADED

Saturday night, according to announcements of officials of the Bureau of Public Roads, a railroad iron and chain barricade, attached by a strong lock, was placed on the Mount Hood Loop Highway where the boards of the Oregon National Forest on the bridge over the East Fork of Hood river. The action was necessitated, it was stated, because of the heavy influx of fishermen and motor sightseers, who have so crowded the road to seriously bother the trucks of surfacing crews.
