Loomis Finds Apples Fine

Robert P. Loomis, New York City apple merchant, who spends the summers annually here on his Lava, Red Orchard place in the Upper alley, just back with his small son from a tour of the Wenatchee apple district, says he has never seen the indications better for a large crop of clean, good sized apples in the Northwest than this season.

"The growers of all the Wenatchee sections," said Mr. Loomis, "have sprayed their orchards well and they have really spent time and money in thinning this season. The quality of Northwestern apples this season will be of a high standard."

Motorist Has Narrow Escape

J. E. Stillwell, of The Dalles, escaped without a scratch Monday when his steering gear went wrong and his car, crashing through the wooden railing of the approach to the Columbia River Highway bridge over Hood river, plunged down 20 feet. The machine struck on its nose. It was prevented from turning entirely over when the rear was caught by a telephone pole. This probably saved Mr. Stillwell from severe injury or death.

STAGE AND SCREEN

The gray walls of San Quentin, California's penitentiary, had added to the sullenness of the Gas Pipe Kid's morbid disposition. He was paroled pending his good behavior, but he got into trouble on his second day away from prison.

He escaped from a night police court and disappeared in the midst of a Halloween festival. He was still a crook at heart, but the thought of going back to prison sickened him, and he forsook his old life and turned to professional baseball—the only good thing he learned in prison—and it made a man of him.

Rockliffe Fellows, as the Gas Pipe Kid in "Trifling With Honor," a Universal-Jewel production at the Rialto tomorrow and Saturday, plays with much feeling this role of dramatic human interest.

It would seem, if the movies' conception is true, that the lives of prima donnas are fully as hectic as those of the stars of the screen themselves.

Certainly Clara Kimball Young's newest and most excellent photoplay, "Enter Madame," holds one breathless with its depiction of the vicissitudes of the vocal heroine.

One can understand after witnessing this Metro picture at the Rialto next Sunday, why the play upon which it was founded (written by Gilda Varesi and Dolly Byrne) packed New York theaters and it made a man of it.

The story is novel, splendidly told and engrossing from beginning to end; and Miss Young's art has never been so exactly tested and triumphant.

Fully up to the standard of the other elements in this Harry Garson production is the cast, in which Elliott Dexter and Louise Dresser are prominent.

Frank Beresford's scenario is one that combines feeling with dramatic "devisiveness" and Wallace Worsley's direction impeccable. The photography is accredited to, and a credit to, L. William O'Connell.

Larry Semon's newest comedy, "The Midnight Cabaret," which will be shown at the Rialto theatre next Monday and Tuesday, is one of the most lavish productions this comedian has produced for release through Vitaphone.

It is richly dressed and is a real Broadway show transferred to the screen with the added attraction of Semon's ingenious comedy stunts. It promises to afford a laugh in every foot for the patrons of the Rialto.

The biggest of the several bears which play with Nell Shipman in "The Grubstake" at the Rialto theatre next Monday and Tuesday, is "Brownie" and, says the star, she is as nearly human as it is possible for an animal to be. Brownie loves Nell to distraction and the bear and the actress have a language all their own, though their favorite topic is their love for each other.

When Brownie is hungry she licks her paw and mumbles, and when her feelings are hurt she makes a sound that is mighty like swearing, relates the star.

Walter Hiers, in his first Paramount comedy, "Mr. Billings Spends His Dime," which comes to the Rialto theatre next Wednesday and Thursday, has an excellent supporting cast.

Featured in the support is Jacqueline Logan. Others are George Fawcett, Robert McKim, Patricia Palmer, Guy Oliver, Joseph Swickard, Edward Patrick, Clarence Burton, George Field and Lucien Littlefield.

FINS, FURS AND FEATHERS

A two months' old pet kitten belonging to Alva Rath leaped for the well curb and missing it fell 75 feet, striking the water with an awful splash. Alva was let down on a rope just in time to grab it before it was too chilled and exhausted to swim. It was soon warmed back to life by the fire and although weak, seems otherwise as well as ever.—White Salmon Enterprise.
