What Are We Doing to Interest the

In answer to the above question, w will have to say that just at present we are doing next to nothing. Several indred visitors from all states of the every day, and we are sitting talkatively by and doing nothing to interest them in the Hood River Valley. We use that word, "talkatively," advisedly. We have spent much energy in voluble discussion the past few months in telling each other what we should do to keep the tourist in the valley, and we are letting the season draw to a close without doing anything. We wonder if 10 per cent of those who motor through Hood River get a ests around Mount Hood? And why? or place of protection. Simply because we haven't shown enough enterprise or energy to tell them the story of the valley and the scenery around Mount Hood. Hood River is known as one of the most progressive towns in the Northwest. And yet we have a lot to learn.

We wish to suggest that by the time another tourist season rolls around, the Chamber of Commerce build a neat miniature bungalow to occupy the side of Second street, either on the Oak street intersection, and equip this each year. They are returning home bungalow as a tourist information each year using superlative adjectives bungalow as a tourist information each year office.
