OREGON GROWERS MAY REORGANIZE

A comprehensive plan for reorganization of the Oregon Growers' Cooperative Association, affecting directly or indirectly fruit and nut growers of Oregon, was announced last week by K. C. Miller, of Sheridan, president of the association, upon his return from Salem, where the plan was introduced by the board of directors. Mr. Miller declares it augurs a forward step in the horticultural development of Oregon.

The plan is to be referred to the growers of the state immediately following the rush of the harvest season, and will be modified according to constructive criticism. The successful California cooperatives have been followed in the tentative draft of reorganization.

It was emphatically pointed out that the final draft will be as the growers themselves wish it. Mr. Miller frankly admitted that some of the association as now constituted, but vigorously praised its stability, as evidenced by the fact that it was started in the deflation period following the war and successfully weathered the storm of financial difficulties as well as the constant criticism of interests opposed to the cooperative movement.

The association was heralded by Mr. Miller as the pioneer in the state-wide fruit cooperative movement. This pioneering in the state-wide cooperative movement for fruit in Oregon when the volume of tonnage any one grower could handle was so small made it necessary to take in several varieties of fruit in order that the overhead would not be excessive, said Mr. Miller in explanation of the plan of reorganization.

"The board of directors, realizing that many mistakes have been made, both in form and operation of the organization, have thought it necessary to reorganize, and with that idea in mind, has appointed a committee of directors to work with the attorney in drawing up a new form of contract for reorganization. This contract will be drawn up according to the wishes of the growers themselves, and not only will there be corrected the mistakes which have been clearly recognized, but also there will be embodied all the best of the California cooperatives. Especially will the form of organization of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange and the California walnut growers be used just as far as they are applicable to our conditions. These two organizations are recognized as top-notchers in the California cooperative movement, and their form of organization appeals to all growers from Oregon who have made a study of the California cooperatives.

"The form of organization contracts, etc., will be put before the growers in Oregon for their consideration, constructive criticism, approval or disapproval, just as soon as the rush of harvest is over.

"The association has built up a sales organization, established a brand name for its products, and has spent a lot of money in advertising.

"Owing to limited volume, the association advertising has been restricted to districts where their sales were largest, but the results have been paying in repeat business, particularly in carton goods. For this reason it is anticipated that a much larger sum will be spent for advertising this coming year, and the fear is felt about being able to move the association tonnage of prunes and loganberries. The form for organization will probably be based on the unit plan allowing for local ownership of plants.

"This local ownership may take the form of single community ownership or county unit ownership. This matter, however, as well as all other forms of the reorganization, will be submitted to the growers in the different districts and the final form will be governed by their wishes. This refers particularly to the packing organization.

"The sales organization will remain under one head.

In 1919 when the association was being formed, cooperation was not thoroughly understood by most growers. Now, however, it is a different story.

Both directors and growers have been through a very serious course of education which has cost them a lot of money; they are, therefore, in a position to realize and decide what form of a cooperative organization they want for the conduct of their future business.

LOCAL CARAVAN MAY GO TO OLYMPIA

Hood River may participate in the Oregon motor caravan that will go to Olympia, Wash., to participate in the celebration in commemoration of completion of paving on the Pacific Highway from Canada to the California line. C. A. Bell, who had just returned from a trip to Rainier National Park, where he attended a hotel men's convention, said the people of Washington were eager to have Hood River represented in the caravan. Mr. Bell Thursday night at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce asked for Hood River participation.

After ceremonies at Olympia, with Governor Hart participating, the caravan, accompanied by delegations from various Washington cities, will proceed through Portland to Salem, where a meeting will be held, and thence many of the motorists will go on to the California line.

LAST week we told you that the average outer garment yielded one half pound of dirt in the dry cleaning process. To a great extent this foreign matter, is a menace to your health. It is a menace to your clothes and their good appearance. It is the foreign matter which takes the life out of your clothes; which imparts that unsightly shine; which actually is responsible in a great measure for their wearing out. For your health's sake and for most satisfactory service, clothes should be cleaned frequently—at least three or four times a year.
