

CHILDREN SHINE IN HUMAN HEARTS

The Empire Players, augmented by more than a score of children of the city schools, pleased the big audience at the Rialto theatre Tuesday night, the closing night for the stock company. There were many laughs and some tears in the Empire Players rendition of the oldtime favorite, "Human Hearts." Dick Hyland was the life of the show in the tramp comedy part. Shirley McDonald played well the villainess. The little folks of Hood River will never think well of him again. Honors Devers displayed a histrionic ability in the hard part of the deceitful wife of Tom Logan. Patricia Westcott was the old blind mother, an impressive old blind mother. No one Dudder played to perfection the street wench and a mountain neighbor girl in love with Tom. Others of the Empire Players were: Don Austin, Ray Bell and Jack Chartres.

Although their time for rehearsal had been limited, the children rendered their parts well. Little Miss Thomas Patton, as the small daughter of Tom Logan and the wife who deserted him, was sweet in her neat white dress. The audience was all attention when she knelt and in her clear voice said, "I Lay Me Down to Sleep." Musical dancing acts were given by Iola Caldwell, Pearl Engstrom, Theima Pearson and Goss-Master Nolan Mc Kinnon recited The American's Creed. Mae Smith in a sweet voice sang several selections.

LUNCH CLUB WILL ENTERTAIN KIWANIS

The Tuesday Lunch Club is planning an early return of courtesies to the Kiwanis Club of The Dalles. The local organization, whose members and their wives were entertained at a dinner party last spring, plans on an evening entertainment for The Dalles clubmen and their wives.
