3 MAZAMAS SCALE OLD MOUNT HOOD

A party of three Mazamas, Robert Osborn, Fred Stadter and Ray Con-way, climbed to the top of Mount Hood Saturday, slept in the rangers' cabin there Saturday night and climbed back down again Monday. It was the first ascent of 1924 and was made to place the Mazama registra-tion book in the lookout station.

The only complaint made was that a 12-mile hike was necessary before they could begin to climb. Friday they had to snowshoe it four miles into Camp Blossom, where they found the cabin drifted up to the eaves in snow. They entered through a trap door in the peak. At midnight they found that it was cloudy and threatening, but at 4 a. m. the clouds had disappeared and the moon was shin-ing. At 7 a. m. Saturday they started with the sun shining so brightly that they were comfortable in their shirt sleeves. They climbed without mishap to Crater rock, where they cooked be responsible only for bills that have west windows and the upper part of the cabin was full of snow. They spent two hours digging through the drift before they effected an entrance. and with warm sleeping equipment. They spent a comfortable night in the cabin.

BLACKMAN CHARGES NOT SUBSTANTIATED

Judge Duby, chairman of the state highway commission, was here Mon-day and Tuesday with Division Highway Engineer Wanser, of The Dalles. investigating charges preferred by A.
I. Mason and Edw. Hawkes, East Side orchardists, against F. H. Blackman, supervisor of maintenance of the valley trunk of the Mount Hood Loop highway. The impression had been given that the charges had been laid by the valley grangers, but the inves-tigation developed that members of the organization resented having it laid at their door. Judge Duby con-ferred with various city and county citizens, who told him that Mr. Blackman was the victim of personal spite

The charge had attacked the com-petency of Mr. Blackman, but it was declared that Mr. Blackman was comby his neighbors, and it developed that he was entirely satisfactory to the engineering corps of the highway de-
