ANNUAL CONVENTION WAS SUCCESS

Citizens of "The Land of Cheese, Trees and Ocean Breeze" Display Royal Hospitality

Tillamook cheese is known as far and as widely through the United States as Hood River apples. Most of the people of the Hood River valley know the name Tillamook, and they pronounce it when they visit the grover or give a telephone call for cheese. Indeed, the fame of the practical cooperation effected by the dairymen of the fertile Tillamook region has spread here in this apple section, where cooperation among fruit growers has been advanced further than any other large apple producing section. Hood River, in fact, has put into effect in a limited way cooperation for bringing into being a successful creamery plant. And pursuit of the big business by Tillamook has helped to make this section prosperous during a season of apple marketing depression. Cream checks for Hood River cow owners are regular, and they are welcome.

Hood River growers can in a measure comprehend the Tillamook country when it is cited that cows are as thick as apple trees here. It is a land of green pastures, luscious grass, fat sleek cows and huge barns. Mile on mile, in every direction, the visiting motorist passes between fields where cows, their udders in the late afternoon huge with stored up cream of milk, graze. It is a land of modest farms and huge barns. Cheese factories dot the landscape like community packing houses here. The Tillamook country has 25 cheese factories, manufacturing for the world a quality of cheese that heads the list in America.

This vaingard of dairymen countries didn't just happen. It has resulted from the concerted effort of the 734 dairies of the region, which market their produce through factories of the Tillamook County Creamery Association, to turn out a milk of uniform quality. There are 18 other dairies in the district, supplying the region with fresh milk and cream. Tillamook county has 13,880 cows. Of these 734 are purebred and registered. The district has 630 sires, of which 440 are registered.

But with all this effort to bring about a standardization of healthy cows, and cheese factories that lead the world for efficiency and the uniformity of the high quality product they turn out, Tillamook would never have reached its importance in the front but for the decision of the creamery association to tell their story to the consuming public through advertising. This campaign has resulted in Tillamook cheese bringing a premium of six cents per pound over the market price.

Credit belongs to E. W. Christensen, inspector for the Tillamook County Creamery Association, who has been identified with the cheese industry of the county for 25 years, for the wide reputation Tillamook cheese has obtained, for superior quality. To show what precautions are taken to insure pure, wholesome cheese, all dairy farms are inspected frequently by a deputy dairy and food commissioner. Should conditions about the barn be found unsatisfactory, the dairymen is not permitted to take his milk to the cheese factory. This, to a large extent, eliminates impure milk being used in the making of cheese. Another precaution, all dairy cows in the county have to be tested every year for tuberculosis. Out of 12,742 cows tested in 1921 by the government, less than one per cent reacted, which shows that the dairy herds of the county are exceedingly healthy and the milk pure and free from unhealthy contamination. Cheese manufactured in other parts are subject to the same sanitary conditions as those in Tillamook county, consequently there is more or less wholesome, impure cheese on the market. Tillamook on the rim stands for something more than high grade cheese; it stands for purity as a dairy product.

D. R. Tinnerstet, deputy dairy and food commissioner, in his report for 1921, says: "In the county we have 29 cheese factories, 27 making American cheese and two Swiss and Limburger. Of these 25 are operated under the supervision of the Tillamook County Creamery Association, the other four being private concerns where one or two dairymen make up their own product. These factories are, for the most part, in modern buildings and are clean and neat. One of these plants, completed in the past year, is considered one of the most modern factories on the coast.

The average score (as per score card) which includes all equipment in and around the dairy, and methods, is 63.2, the highest being 92 and the lowest 24.9.

The following figures show in a striking way some of the interesting results for the year 1921, compiled by Carl Haberlach, secretary, salesman of the Tillamook County Creamery Association: Twenty-five factories affiliated with the association received during 1921 a total of 59,952,123 pounds of milk, against 55,309,190 pounds during 1920. This shows a gain of 4,642,933 pounds or about 7 1/2 per cent. There were manufactured 6,722,883 pounds of cheese; $1,550,331.15 was realized from the sale of cheese; 23.04 cents was the average price realized per pound cheese; 2,481,282 pounds of butterfat in milk; average test, 4.13 per cent.

The man who has never been to Tillamook, thinks merely of cheese when the name is mentioned. But Tillamook would soon be famous, even though it had no cows, because of the excellence of the summer climate. It is, but little warmer in the summer months than in the winter season and the allure of its wonderful roads, through primeval forests of fir, hemlock and spruce, its deep pools and cascading streams, where trout abound, its pasture forests where deer grow bigger and fatter than any place in the state. The motoring world has just found the Tillamook country a Good motor highway connection were completed there at a comparatively recent date. Already that road from McMinnville down by way of Sheridan and Willamina to Tillamook is overcrowded. The Tillamook beaches are among the most popular in the state this year. A stream of campers is constantly going and coming along the big wide highway. Already the need has made itself apparent that more adequate highway facilities must be made available. The Tillamook citizens are appealing for a shorter route to the lower Willamette valley and Portland by way of Wilson and Trask river. The need of such connections with the outside world was obvious to every editor who toured by automobile to the convention city, and most of them made the journey that way. The convention adopted a resolution in support of activities that are seeking to secure a shorter route for industrial and tourist traffic from Tillamook to the upper Willamette.

The ride out from Portland over Terwilliger boulevard and thence down through the wonderful grain area of the west side of the Willamette, with here and there a top ranch, a field of Loganberries or raspberries and an occasional prune orchard, is appealing to the resident of eastern Oregon. For a Hood River family, bound on a seasonal vacation, there are no places that can be more highly recommended than the beaches of Tillamook county.

It is a big county, having an area of 1,125 square miles. Only 50 of these are under cultivation. The county has a sea front of more than 60 miles on the Pacific ocean, consequently it has many wonderfully interesting beaches, bays, rocks, cliffs and majestic mountains, overlooking the ocean. One of the crowning features of this extensive length of coastline is the Columbia Gorge.

AD CLUB TO DEDICATE GORGE LIGHTS

Golfers are now displaying a keen interest in an obstacle course, with nine holes, just established on a big lawn in front of the Columbia Gorge Hotel. The best players of Portland and mid-Columbia points, who frequently make the Oak Grove course and Portland courses below 40, have not been able to make the obstacle course under 78. On the obstacle course, the first ever established on the Pacific coast, the players have to pass through a maze of small painted picket posts. The ball has to be sent up a trough, through a hoop over a bridge and put through various other stunts.

The obstacle course is as popular in the evening as during the daylight hours. The grounds of the resort hotel have been well lighted. Fluorescent lights from the tower of the hotel and other high places shower down brilliant illumination. The grounds of the hotel have been equipped with various forms of athletic entertainment for guests. Seated beneath the picturesque oaks are swings and hammocks for the children. One lawn is given over entirely to croquet playing. The tennis courts attract many players.

ELOQUENT SPEAKERS FOR BAR MEETING

The mid-Columbia has never been given promise of such a taste of eloquence as is scheduled for the annual convention of the British Columbia Bar Association, to be held September 19 and 20, in The Dalles and here, Judge Fred W. Wilson, of The Dalles, president of the bar association, leaves here Monday for an equity term of court, stated that the following speakers will deliver addresses at the meetings at The Dalles: Hon. F. G. T. Lucas, of Vancouver, B. C., president of the British Columbia Bar Association; Judge Chas. E. Wadsworth, of the federal court in Portland, who is now at London attending an international meeting of attorneys and who will give a recital of his observations; Judge J. Stanley Webster, of the United States district court at Spokane, and Judge C. M. Thomas, of Jackson county, who is just back from Philadelphia, where he attended the meeting of the American Bar Association, the activities of which he will report.

Two matters of major importance which the bar association will consider at this year's convention, Judge Wilson states, will be the raising of standards for admission and the adoption of measures that will put the association on a more substantial basis for disciplining members who fail to live up to the ethics of their profession.

The formal sessions of the convention will close Saturday evening, September 20, with a banquet at the Columbia Gorge hotel. A large number of the members of the Washington bar will be present for the convention. Sunday the visitors will be taken on a motor tour of the Mount Hood Loop highway. The local bar has suggested a picnic lunch for the visitors at some wooded spot in the highland forests.

VALLEY HAS GOOD CROP

HOOD RIVER APPLES ARE PROMISING

This District Weathered Spring Frosts and Subsequent Drouth Better Than Other Sections

No apple district of the Northwest will approach closer to the tonnage of boxed apples of last year than Hood River. Indeed, numerous prominent shippers and growers in their forecasts of the crop predict that tonnage will reach that of last year and say that an approximate 3,000 cars will roll from the Hood River valley this season. Others say that the tonnage will be about 20 per cent less than a year ago. Weather conditions between now and harvest time it is likely, are going to have considerable to do with proving which is right. It must be remembered that the drouth that is now prevailing far more serious in all parts of the Northwest. This may cause a diminution in size over last year. In this case the tonnage, although there may be as many individual apples, may be considerably less than last year's.

There is no question as to Hood River having as many apples as a year ago. Many orchardists have binched their ill luck at huge thinning bills. Many districts have never had to engage in thinning as this season.

Reports from every section of Hood River valley indicate that the fruit is in fine condition. While all growers were alarmed, early in the season over possible forecasts of drouth, the weather has since been cooler than the average summer and worm injury will be minimized. So far irrigation water has been plentiful, and all Hood River valley orchards are in a very thriving condition.

Discussing the 1924 apple prospects A. F. S. Steele says: "It is rather early to cast an apple horoscope at this time. Information we have from the United Kingdom is that the crop is patchy and very light. Crops of other fruits in the United Kingdom are also light, due to inclement weather—cold and excessive rains.

"The crop of barreled apples in the eastern states will be heavy on some varieties and light on others, but the general crop average will approximate that of last year. The Northwest crop will be considerably smaller than last year, Washington and Oregon.

There will probably be less cars from the Northwest this year than last season. From the best information we can obtain the grades in Washington will be lower than last year—many apples going into fancy C-grade and cookers, owing to frost marks. This will include Wine-saps particularly, and also Jonathans. The delicious crop will be very short over the entire Northwest.

"The fruit of the Hood River valley continues to increase in size and has every indication of being a very clean crop. There have been practice

HARDTIMES PARTY NEXT TUESDAY NIGHT

The women of the Hood River Golf and Country Club will be hostesses at a "hardtimes" dancing social at the Mt. Hood Community hall, located 12 miles south of the city on the Loop highway next Tuesday evening. Mrs. V. R. Abraham is chairman of the committee preparing for the event. The social affair, the third of a series the women have been giving. The first, a dancing party, was held in June at the Columbia Gorge hotel. The second was a mah jongg and bridge party held on the grounds of the club in Oak Grove.

The new community hall, recently started by J. C. Devin and son, Kellise, formerly eastern Oregon residents, has proven increasingly popular with local folk. Dances, held there weekly on Friday nights, attract many local folk.

The general public is invited to attend the event of next Tuesday evening. It is urged that no one appear "dressed up" if they do come in such garb a fine will be assessed at the door. Howard's Aces of Melody orchestra, which has made a hit with those attending the regular Community hall-dances, will render the music for the golf and country club party.

CHAMBER SPONSORS K. OF P. BAND DANCE

It is anticipated that a dance to be given next Wednesday evening at the Pythian temple for the Knights of Pythias band will draw the largest attendance ever presented at a social affair in Hood River. The band, noted throughout the Northwest for the excellence of its music and for the unique Indian costumes, first worn at the national convention of the D. O. K. in Portland, will soon go to Vancouver, B. C. to attend an international convention of the order. Recently the Chamber of Commerce offered to raise funds for financing the trip, but the members of the band preferred to raise the money through a dance or concert. The organization's management prides itself on never having asked the city for contributions.
