beach is Neah-Kah-Nie mountain, the highest peak in Tillamook county, directly on the sea shore. This inspiring mountain rises to a height of nearly 1,800 feet and concentrates nearly every feature of mountain grandeur and beauty—grassy and wooded slopes, springs and creeks, rugged gorges, high pinnacles, and awesome cliffs overhanging the ocean. South of Neah-Kah-Nie Inn is a very pretty, clean beach, with accommodations to be had at Manzanita and Clatsop Beach.
Garibaldi Beach includes that portion of the coast between the mouth of Nehalem and Tillamook bays, and is one of the most popular and accessible of the Tillamook county beaches, being directly on the railroad.
Bayocean, situated on Tillamook Bay, is destined to become a most popular resort on account of the large amount of money that was expended there for improvements. It is built on a peninsula, overlooking Tillamook Bay on the east. A large and commodious hotel and a large sanatorium are built there, also a bungalow city, consisting of a number of one-story bungalows, located in a most charming nook. Bayocean has more modern bungalows than any other beach resort.
South of Bayocean is Cape Meares light station, built on a high, rugged prominence, several hundred yards above the sea level. It is reached from Bayocean and Netarts.
Netarts beach, somewhat resembles Neah-Kah-Nie, and it is hard to decide which has the most charming and interesting attractions for those who delight to investigate the mysteries of the mighty ocean and the rocks and caves that are to be found at Oceanside. Jutting out into the ocean is Maxwell point and it is from that commanding position that some wonderful scenery is seen that cannot be duplicated anywhere. Directly in front of Maxwell point are the Three Arch Rocks, commonly known as the Seal Rocks, just off shore, which form a government bird
