OREGON, WE SALUTE YOU

CONSTITUTION WEEK, the sixty-seventh anniversary of the success that crowned your sixteen years' struggle for constitutional organization, reveals achievements that should stir the pride, the admiration, the enthusiasm of every Oregonian.

Yet, while your progress has been truly marvelous, you possess in natural advantages and resources a reserve through which you are destined to lead all states in rapid growth.

As Oregon's promise of the future lies in the resources she has in reserve, so it is with every individual. We each build our own promise of the future in our reserve fund—our bank account—here's hoping you have one constantly growing in the

Getting Down to Business

What with swimming, golf, vacation and moving into the new building, our Ad man has been trying to keep his nose away from the grindstone, but he knows now that it's time to get back to work.

Carlisle puts it in this way:

"Blessed is the man who has found his work; let him ask no other blessedness. Know thy work and do it; and work at it like Hercules. One monster there is in the world, the idle man."

BAR BANQUET NEXT SATURDAY

ATTORNEYS OF STATE TO MEET HERE

Annual Convention, to Begin at the Dalles, Will End at the Columbia Gorge Hotel

It is anticipated that the meeting of the Oregon State Bar Association, to be held Saturday afternoon at the Columbia Gorge hotel, and the annual banquet, which will be held there Saturday evening, will be characterized by a record eloquence for a Hood River gathering.

The members of the state's bar association will meet Friday at the Dalles. They will convene here Saturday afternoon. The members of the local bar will attend the Dalles sessions.

As a means of elevating the bar of the state to the highest level of integrity a bill to establish the Oregon Bar Association as a special body possessing wide powers over its members is to be introduced at the next session of the legislature.

If the bill is enacted into law the association will have greater authority than at present to set the educational standard for admission to the bar. One of the objects will be that of raising such standards. To date, three states have enacted the special law which the Oregon association is fostering.

Two important meetings at which the proposed bill and its ramifications are to be discussed have been arranged and the text of the measure has been printed and distributed to all members of the existing association. So important is the contemplated step regarded that Herbert Harley, secretary of the American Bar Association, has promised to come from the society's headquarters at Chicago to attend the meetings. This society, which is an endowed organization, is engaged chiefly in just this work of elevating standards of the bar throughout the United States.

Next Friday at the Dalles the first of the two meetings is to be held. An address in the evening by Mr. Harley is to be one of the chief features. Another will be the annual address of Judge Fred W. Wilson, of the Dalles, president of the Oregon Bar Association. J. E. Kavanaugh, of Portland, ex-judge of the circuit court, will deliver an address on the constitution, this being called for jointly by the association executive committee and the constitution day committee of Wasco county.

Judge C. M. Thomas, of Medford, will report on the meeting of the American bar at Philadelphia held during July. Charles E. Carpenter, of the University of Oregon Law School, will give an address on "Re-statement of the Law," as proposed by the American Law Institute.

At the Saturday session at the Columbia Gorge hotel, P. B. Lucas, of Vancouver, B. C., has promised to be present and speak upon the subject, "Foreign Trade Contracts." Mr. Lucas is president of the British Columbia Law Society. S. R. L. Penrose, president of the Oregon Law Association, has promised to give an address on "The Interpretation of the Statute." He has only recently returned from attending the international meeting of the bar at London.

The banquet will especially honor Judges Wolverson and Beahm of the federal court, both of whom have served on the bench the greater part of half a century.

In sending out announcements of the meetings and the speakers, Albert B. Ridgway, secretary of the Oregon Bar Association, enclosed copies of the bill, which would transform the association into one of special powers delegated directly by legislative enactment. The purpose of this plan is stated in the proposed act as follows:

"Recognizing that the practice of the legal profession is a privilege granted by the state, and not a natural right of the individual; it is deemed necessary as a matter of business policy, and in the interests of the public, to provide laws and provisions covering the granting of that privilege and its subsequent use, control and regulation; to the end that the public shall be properly protected against unprofessional, improper and unauthorized practice of law, and unprofessional conduct of the members of the bar."

The bill would give the association greater powers not only pertaining to admission of candidates to the bar, but with respect to discipline and disbarment. The measure proposes that only active attorneys and judges may be members. This is said to be a blow at surrogate attorneys, who perhaps give most of their attention to selling real estate or other lines of activity.

Another new proposal is thus set forth in the letter of Secretary Ridgway:

"The plan proposes that every active practitioner in the state shall, by reason of being such practitioner, become a member of the state bar association, and shall pay an annual license fee, which payment shall be made to and for the benefit of the state association, thus enabling the state association to have funds sufficient for the employment of a paid secretary, and for the carrying on of constructive work as is now being done in those states which have adopted this plan."

NED BALDWIN GIVES CONSTITUTION TALK

"Let the children of the nation be taught that the flag is the symbol of our Constitution, and that the Constitution is the soul of the government," said Ned Baldwin, former member of the staff of the United States attorney's office in Portland and a member of the National Press club at Washington, in an address on the Constitution to members of the Tuesday Lunch club at the Columbia Gorge hotel Tuesday.

Mr. Baldwin for a number of years has given special attention to a study of the Constitution, and his address was the most masterly presentation of the subject ever heard here. J. H. Hazlett, who is in charge of Constitution week activities here, who was chairman of the meeting, characterized the address as the best the Lunch club has ever heard.

Mr. Baldwin traced the development of the Constitution by the fathers of the country in the days after the Revolutionary war. He cited how it brought stability among the 13 colonies which had been in chaos following their victory over England. He read letters from Washington to Madison and David Humphreys, showing how the great Father of His Country considered as vital the governmental foundation.

"The Constitution," said Mr. Baldwin, "was the most momentous political event in history, the greatest occasion for summing back upon the birth of Christ. It was an American New Year's resolution. It was a chapter of a new nation, just born, emanating from the evils of their fathers."

Mr. Baldwin read excerpts from statements of foreign countries, whose admiration it aroused—Burke, James Bryce and Gladstone.

"The framers," he said, "with a foresight into the future, grasped two things: To protect the people against ambitious rulers and to protect the government against the people themselves."

He quoted Thomas Jefferson, who said, "Bind them from mischief by the chains of the Constitution." The framers of the great document, he stated, remembered the lack of checks and bounds of the Greeks. It seemed as though they had looked back upon the French Revolution and that of Lenin and Trotsky in Russia, neither of which had occurred.

Mr. Baldwin cited the Bill of Rights, which Emma Goldman and others of her anarchistic trend sought to tear down in their public utterances. Yet those same men and women, as Mr. Baldwin cited, when arrested, cried louder than any others for protection under the Bill of Rights.

"Today," said the speaker, "we have two kinds of attacks on the Constitution. One that is open and is in that much American. In this attack the proponents would include new socialisms that would annul the effectiveness of the document. Another attack is underhanded, secretive and vicious. It is sponsored by foreign bolshevism and aided by men and women in America, trying to poison the source and fountain head of government."

Setting forth the wisdom of the Constitution in its checks on legislation, he characterized the United States Senate as "the stop look" of the first line of defense against hasty legislation. This second line, he said, was the presidential veto, which has been attacked. The third line, Mr. Baldwin said, is the interpretation of the Constitution by the courts. He declared that the attack against the electoral college is an attack on the Constitutional form of government. The electoral college, he said, provides for an equal distribution of power among the industrial centers, heavily populated, and the more sparsely settled agricultural domain.

He cited the wisdom of the dual system of government, which leaves to the states the administration of local affairs. Massachusetts and New York, he said, have developed courts which have won the highest esteem. In the former the judiciary are appointed for life and in the latter state-elected for 28 years. He cited the power of injunction, which is attacked, and this attack, he said, is an attack on the Constitution.

An effort is being made, Mr. Baldwin said, to provide for the constitutionality of any law, even though the United States supreme court shall declare it unconstitutional, if congress a second time adopts it. He prophesied that such an end in a single hectic winter might bring Washington to chaos.

Mr. Baldwin said the lack of

NOTED EDUCATOR TO TALK SUNDAY NIGHT

A union mass meeting of the members of all churches will be held at the First Baptist church at 7:30 o'clock Sunday evening, when the chief address will be delivered by Dr. A. N. Locker, field secretary for the International Council of Religious Education, who will make nine addresses in the state of Oregon. The organization with which Dr. Locker is now affiliated, was formerly the International Sunday School Association.

Dr. Locker is one of the best known authorities of the time on the subject he will discuss. He was secured for Hood River through the efforts of Rev. L. H. Miller. All interested in religious education as a part of the times are urged to be present Sunday night.

OLD COE FLAG TO RETURN TO CITY

The first flag ever flown over Hood River will soon be placed in the city hall. The relic, which for many years has been held at the quarters of the Oregon Historical Society in Portland, is the gift of Capt. H. C. Coe, pioneer steamship man and son of Nathaniel Coe, Hood River's first settler.

The flag was made in Portland in 1807 by Coriath Stearns, daughter of County Clerk W. C. Magdy. Nathaniel Coe made a special trip down the river to secure it for the first Fourth of July celebration, which was held in a grove near where the Park Street school today stands. The city council will place the flag in a glass case on the wall of the city hall.

STUDENTS ON TRIP TO ALEM

SCHOOL FAIR WINNERS ANNOUNCED

Event of Last Saturday Celebrated as Best Ever Held Here—Much Livestock is Exhibited

Because of the merit of their exhibits at the 14th annual school fair held at the high school last Saturday, the following boys and girls will be given free trips to the state fair at Salem next week: Hilda Johnson, of Odell; Julia Ann Beaton, of Barrett; Kenneth Canning, of Oak Grove; Eugene Senter, of Hood River; Harold Forden, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Forden, won the $75 Union Pacific scholarship at the Oregon Agricultural College.

J. C. Seymour and Miss Helen Cowgill, of the Oregon Agricultural College, here to judge the exhibits, had the highest praise for the fair, declared the best ever held here. Prof. L. B. Gibson, who recently retired as county school superintendent, in order to become principal of the high school, bestowed credit for the work of the students.

An outstanding feature of the fair this year was the many displays of pigs and calves and the large number of poultry, sheep, and goats. The best charge of a calf club, the members of which presented entries that aroused the interest of adults, the community exhibits from Barrett, Odell, Parkdale, Mount Hood and Frankton kept the big crowd present for the fair interested throughout the day. There was every species of vegetable imaginable. Pies, cakes and bread were on display by the dozen lots. It was all of a high quality. Good flowers and women could not have provided a more alluring lot of articles.

Robert Beal, of Parkdale, had an exhibit of perfect potatoes. In June, 1923, he has taken first place and has won blue ribbons at the state fair and Pacific Livestock show. His small brother, George, Saturday walked away with first award in open juvenile contest on potatoes.

Tashihara Yabuta, a Japanese student of Parkdale, with applause for his exhibits of oil paintings.

All of the booths of the community exhibits were brightly and appealingly decorated. Fall flowers were used in profusion.

Many of the schools showed work of school children. The stage of the high school was filled with exhibits of the children of the city. And here was a gorgeous display of the dahlias from the garden of J. G. Ruggles. Mrs. Ruggles and her daughter, Margaret, Jackson and her son, were in the morning of the fair brought over a wondrous lot of the handsome blooms, many of which Mr. Ruggles himself has propagated.

A full list of the premium winners will be made available by Prof. Gibson for next week's Glacier.

HOW THE ELECTRIC SURVEY WAS BEGUN

A query was recently asked as to who would pay for the rural electrical survey, now in progress here, the Pacific Power & Light Co., aiding the Oregon Experiment Station in securing data that will determine the extent to which electric energy is used in the orchard section. The query intimated that the public would be called on to pay for a survey that was of benefit to the power concerns.

The fact is just opposite. The plans of the survey originated with the electric engineering department of the Oregon Agricultural College, who by the information gained expect to be able to aid rural communities in their economic application of electrical energy. The Pacific Power & Light Co. is being put to considerable expense in aiding the experiment station in collecting the data.

The meeting for organization of an Oregon committee on Relation of Electricity to Agriculture was called by President Kerr, of O. A. C. The late Director Jardine, took an active interest in the plans. The organization of a similar committee in the state of Washington is under consideration.

Agriculture, the electric light and power industry and the state college are represented on this committee. As is the case with the other eight state committees at work on this problem, the objectives are to find and make available for public use facts as contrasted to ideas or opinions. It is the consensus of those primarily interested in this movement that the principal problems to be met are first, the collection of all information relating to rural electrification, and second, the development of sound public relations as between agriculture and the electric light and power industry based upon a mutual understanding of common problems.

COLUMBIA GORGE IS ADDING FEATURES

Manager Geo. B. Tremblay has announced that work has been started for the development of an automobile park by the Columbia Gorge hotel. The park will occupy a wooded area on the bluffs of the Columbia river just west of the tourist hotel. "We will also start work soon," said Mr. Tremblay, "on the construction of a large number of cottages of appealing design. We will double our capacity before another season. We have found the past summer that we have far too few rooms for guests and many times have been forced to turn away those seeking accommodations. We expect a record business next year. With 23 big convalescent cottages at Portland, we will have a large number of out-of-state patrons throughout the season."
