H. R. IRRIGATION IS COMPLIMENTED

(From the Portland Journal) Oregon irrigation bonds at par and eagerly sought, is a status on Hood River projects.

"These bonds are all in demand," said a Hood River banker. "We have frequent calls for them, and there are always investors ready to take them over at par whenever any are offered for sale."

This means that safe and sane irrigation in Oregon is a stable and dependable branch of agricultural industry. It was the orgy of wildcat irrigation, with enormous sums for bond-buyers, huge fees for lawyers and engineers, and settlers on the projects mercilessly plundered in advance, that brought irrigation in Oregon into ill-repute and forced the state to assume or pay the obligations on irrigation bonds now totaling nearly $2,000,000.

In Hood River county, the Middle Fork project of 8,000 acres, the Dee project of 3,900 acres and the East Fork project of 11,000 acres, all organized under the state law, are highly successful and their outstanding bonds a gilt-edged security.

The first two were taken out of private ownership and reorganized 18 months ago, while the East Fork project has been operating under a state organization by the farmers for several years. Another highly successful project is that of the Fanning Irrigation Company, one of the largest of the county. It is owned, controlled and operated by the farmers themselves.

U. of O. Plays Fine Football Despite the 6 to 0 defeat administered to Oregon by the Multnomah Athletic club, of Portland, Thanksgiving day, the university completed a successful football year. The season's play demonstrated Coach Maddock's ability to take in hand a new eleven, train the men in a new system of play, and then make an extraordinary showing.

The alumni, students, and other backers of the Oregon team must be entirely satisfied with the showing made by the team, which defeated both the University of Washington, one of the strongest teams in the Pacific Coast conference and the Oregon Agricultural College. Both games were won by scores of 7 to 3. In each contest, Oregon played brainy football, and at crucial moments the line held like the Rock of Gibraltar.

Oregon held the heavy W. S. C. team to a score, vanquished Whitman by a big score. The team lost to Stanford and Idaho. Stanford tied for the Pacific Coast championship and Idaho took first honors in the Northwest conference.

Coach Maddock, who learned his football at Michigan under Yost and who turned out championship teams at the University of Utah for five years, lived up to his advance reputation as a winner.

Idaho Cherry Growers Cooperate Cherry growers of Lewiston, Ida., have joined with Wasco county orchardists in the fight for a protective tariff on marachino fruit.

L. D. Beard, manager of the Dalles-Cooperative Growers' Association, has received a letter from H. S. Russell, manager of the Lewiston association of orchardists, in which it is stated that a mass meeting had been called. Mr. Beard will arrange for a date at Lewiston upon his return from California, and will speak to the cherry growers of that district along the same lines he has addressed the Wasco county orchardists. He left for California last week and upon returning to Oregon will meet with Willamette valley cherry growers.

Loose Wires Always Dangerous No matter how innocent looking a wire dangling in the street may be, says the Oregon Public Utility information bureau, it is nevertheless a potential death hazard, and should be avoided as one would avoid poison or smallpox.

Only a short time ago, two Seattle boys were electrocuted while trying to hoist a garbage can to the top of a light pole on a Halloween prank. Numerous fatal accidents have recently been recorded where boys and grown ups have attempted to string radio aerials across live wires of high voltage, or to attach them to light poles. These high tension lines carry almost certain death at all times, and sometimes even a "dead" wire swinging in the wind strikes a "live" wire and becomes an instrument of death.

Therefore the best policy is to consider all loose wires as being deadly, and keep as far away from them as possible.

Many Autos Are Wrecked Many automobiles were wrecked along the highway last Thursday and Friday because of the glare of front and rear headlights. No serious injuries were sustained west of here.

H. B. Anderson, of Moro, died in a hospital at The Dalles from injuries sustained when his car skidded over a grade east of The Dalles. Motorists who came up from Portland Friday reported that wrecked cars were sighted every few miles.

W. O. W. Celebrate Tonight The Woodmen of the World lodge will celebrate the opening of a new lodge room in the First National Bank building this evening, with a housewarming. Members of the lodges of White Salmon and The Dalles will be here for the event.

The Woodmen formerly met at the old K. P. hall, which was burned two months ago. Palmiers Call at White House George A. Palmier, master of the Oregon state grange, with Mrs. Palmier, was a caller at Senator McNary's office Monday of last week and later at the White House. Mr. Palmier has been attending the national grange session at Atlantic City.

Circle Theatre is 12 Years Old The Circle theatre in Portland will celebrate its 12th anniversary this week. The theatre management is forwarding to friends and patrons many complimentary tickets in commemoration of the event. Hood River folk have received tickets from Harry Duck for many years a member of the Circle staff. Col. Woodlaw is founder of the Circle. Every employe, however, is owner of stock.

LAURNELL MARKET DISPLAY APPEALING

The Thanksgiving display at the Laurnell Market last week was one of the best ever seen here. Floyd Arnold and R. E. Steele erected a unique rack on the side of the market, and here were hung meats for a feast for kings.

The center of the rack was occupied by cuts of the blue ribbon prize-winning steer of the recent Pacific International Livestock show in Portland. Around the edges were cuts of lamb, veal, turkey, geese, ducks and chickens. It was indeed, a display that might arouse longings on the part of epicures and trenchermen.

Thanksgiving Was Quiet Thanksgiving for mid-Columbia folk was characterized by a day of radiant brilliance. The sky was cloudless. Hood and Adams were as clear as canvas to the view of the scores who gained an appetite for reunion meals on motor jaunts. The links of the Hood River Golf and Country club were popular.

A union service was held at Asbury Methodist Episcopal church, Dr. Jas. A. Fraser, pastor of Riverside Community church, giving the sermon. Many celebrated the cloudless day by a flight in the airplane engaged in taking passengers over the mid-Columbia.

Brooke's House Burns The residence on the Summit place of Alex B. Brooke burned to the ground about 8.30 Saturday night, destroying the contents. The fire was thought to have started from a defective flue.
