WHITE SALMON
(By Will S. Bates)
J. L. Greene and family were Hood River visitors Saturday, while on their way to Portland to close up some business interests in St. Johns.
Mr. Greene owned the largest transfer business at that point, which he traded for the O. B. Ramey orchard on Burdoin mountain. Oldtimers will remember this place as the Bushong ranch; the latter, who moved to Portland to enter the hotel business, is now manager of The Mallory, a large residential hotel in Portland.

The snow on Burdoin is melting rapidly in protected spots, while open fields are practically denuded of snow.
Green grass is again in evidence.
Gardeners will soon be on the job.

Some dissatisfaction has been expressed by residents along the Lyle and Snowden roads by the lax methods displayed by those in charge of road maintenance in the district lying northeast of Locke hill. As a result, road meetings for the purpose of electing a new foreman to serve this year were called to take place at Mountain Brook and Laws Corner.
A petition has been circulated favoring Cecil Miller to succeed Daniel Perry as road foreman. The latter has worked hard under adverse circumstances.

August Lauterbach, former White Salmon butcher, now located at Fuyallup, Wash., returned Wednesday, after a short visit with his parents here.

Owing to a breakdown in the plant of the Nordby box factory at Bingen, it was necessary to shut down for a few days to make repairs.

Miss Bethel Breedlove is numbered among the pneumonia victims here.
There are but few cases in this district.

Jack Wright and Glyn Knutson, who were here for the holidays, have returned to the University of Washington. Jack is the grandson of J.
D. Morris, Burdoin mountain rancher and radio fan, who is now enjoying a well earned pension from the Western Union Telegraph Co. He is famous as a rapid fire Associated Press man, one of the few left who could handle press work with a stick, as telegraphers term it. The present day telegrapher of the younger generation would not last long under the grilling work.

The Trout Lake grange installation of new officers took place Friday.
Trout Lake reports all ice houses well filled with quality ice, enough to last through the coming season.

The little cold snap, which came all in one bunch this winter, was sufficiently heavy to put the Trout Lake Electric Co. out of commission temporarily. The water systems were a trifle inconvenienced also, but the live wires are getting back to normality in that grand country out there.

Mrs. Jerry Zwynen, of White Salmon, will start a class in French lessons next Thursday. Mrs. Jerry is a native of Belgium and is very popular in the younger set here.

Dr. W. H. Warner performed an operation for appendicitis upon R. H.
Hazelton, a resident of Underwood, recently.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. F. Holcomb are now residing in Seattle. Mr. Holcomb owns an orchard in the North White Salmon district.

The famous Jewett Farm Resort, owned by Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Jewett, who gained such popularity years ago among eastern people who made periodical visits to the resort, hangery for splendid meals, rest and recreation, is coming back. This huge, slightly tract on the top of the Columbia bluff is now much sought after for residential sites for home builders. The tract has been subdivided and new homes are in evidence. A few years ago the Jewetts had an offer of $75,000 for their place, but refused to consider the proposition which, if a large hotel were built on ground so dear to them, would probably mean "liquor on the premises." Now the popular couple are about to realize something more substantial in the coming of new home builders in this era of prosperity that is persistently forcing itself upon us.

The dedication of the fine, new union high school Friday evening was one to be remembered. The address given by Dr. Black, of the Ellensburg Normal school, was masterly and was keenly enjoyed. The members of the high school glee clubs rendered some beautiful and appropriate music. The school directors were also much in evidence. The ladies of the White Salmon-Pleasant View school district served bountiful refreshments, which assumed proportions of a real banquet. The domestic science department ably assisted.

The local basketball team of the White Salmon Athletic association is lined up for games with Goldendale, Canas, Cheney Normal, the Lincoln Legions of Portland and last but not least, Captain Billy's Whiz-Bangs of Minneapolis. The first game of the season was played a week ago Saturday, which resulted in victory for the home team in a game with the Mosler American Legion team.
The White Salmon team has some wonderful material in their midst.

H. W. Hamlin has accepted a berth with a pre-cooling plant at Medford and will move his family there in the near future. He was formerly connected with the famous Mount Adams Farm, in the Gilmer district, where the pears grow commercially, and later was manager of the Underwood Fruit & Warehouse Co. pre-cooling plant and warehouse at Underwood.
Both the Underwood and White Salmon districts will feel his loss keenly, as he was the right man in the right place.

Noah Frade, the Indian, says: "No spring on Mountain Saturday; come snow, wind, rain. You no good, mebbe! You ask Noah too much! I shoudl worry! Good day! Giddyap!" We hope the wiley old scout is off on his prognostication.

HOOD RIVER HAS DE-VOTED MAN AND DOG

An example of the peculiar devotion that springs up between man and his dog is found in the case of Harry Saunders, aged 70, and his water spaniel, Nellie. Saunders is alone in the world. Friends have urged that he repair to some home, where he may receive care and live in comfort the remainder of his days.
"I'll never go to any such place," the old man always responds. "For they'll not take Nellie. She and I have been friends too many years now for me to turn her down."

The old water spaniel is known as one of the smartest dogs in Hood River. She apparently knows every word her master utters to her, and she is always eager to do his bidding.
Nellie has been the mother of 50 fine puppies. Her sons and daughters have won note in many parts of the state.

Mr. Saunders, who lives in a small but well constructed shack up Hood river near the plant of the Pacific Power & Light Co., is now convalescing from a recent serious illness.
Members of the city police force and those of the power company crew have been watching out for his comforts. During his illness the old dog, a worry note and action, has been constantly by his bedside.

Davidson Goes for Cattle

W. B. Davidson left last Saturday for the Shell Rock mountain district east of the Loop highway on the east side of Mount Hood, to bring in a herd of Swiss cattle that had been left in the highland forests for pasturing. It was feared that the snowstorm which began Saturday night reach such proportions as to isolate the cattle and exterminate them. The cattle belong to ranchers of Wasco county.
