HOW THEY DID IT 15 YEARS AGO

Shades of Hood River boom days were presented the other day when Geo. T. Prather brought to town a copy of "The American Progress Magazine," a booster publication of Portland of that period. A page of the November, 1910, edition of the magazine carried pen and ink sketches of some score of the leading Hood River citizens of the day. They were grouped in front of a display of Hood River apples at the Oregon Apple Show in Portland. There were big boosters, but not a little one in the bunch. The pictures were of lawyers, doctors, bankers and real estate men—more real estate men than of any other profession.

Indeed, those days of 1910 were days when the realtor was in his glory. He dominated all of us, and woe be unto the individual who dared to voice the least criticism of an apple of the Hood River valley or an inch of soil. Nor did one dare to find favor with fruit of another district. To do so branded him as a traitor. Aye, those were days when we all blew bubbles. But the bubbles were pricked by the coming of adversity, and some 12 years ago we entered into a veritable slough of despond.

It is interesting to peruse such a publication as "The American Progress Magazine" here in the Hood River valley during the year 1925, when the goose has again been caught and is hanging high. Some of the selfsame boosters of the boom days are still here. They have boosted and grinned with an optimism through all the years in between. They are still boosting. But they are not blowing bubbles today. Experience has taught them the value of conservative and constructive criticism. Hood River has passed through the boom days and has arisen from the period of depression, that inevitably followed.

If Hood River today can believe as thoroughly in the opportunities offered by the development of the scenic resource, and there is no reason why she shouldn't, as she did 15 years ago in the apple, and proceed as enthusiastically to tell the world about these scenic attractions, she will reap benefits from such optimistic activity.

WE REVIVE AN OLD ONE

Saturday evening a bunch of the fellows who had attended the Portland automobile show were lunching and talking over their buys at the Hood River Drug Co. store. Every man was boasting of his car and its unexcelled abilities. Twenty years ago men talked likewise of the prowess, speed and endurance of their horses. Finally a newcomer spake:

"You fellows haven't got anything but kettles. I've got the real car. I just came from Portland in an hour and 30 minutes."

And then a small individual, with a serious twinkle in his eye, stepped in front of the boaster.

"Who are you?" asked the little fellow.

"What the devil difference does that make to you?" queried the newcomer in response, as he noted grins on the faces all around.

"I'm the Hood River traffic officer," said the short one. It was none other than "Shorty" Morrison.

"Well," said the erstwhile braggart, whose car had soared from Portland, "since you really want to know who I am I'll tell you. I'm the biggest liar in Hood River county."

HE INSPIRED US

Hood River has never listened to a more touching eloquence than that of Irving E. Vining, here Monday night to address the Chamber of Commerce. No one was present who was not inspired by the word pictures of the head of the Oregon State Chamber of Commerce. It was one of the longest addresses ever delivered in Hood River, but the chamber members sat rapt and in silence. They left in thought, and they'll think about that talk for many days. One member was so absorbed in Mr. Vining's talk that he walked several blocks to his home, forgetting his automobile. Newspaper reporters, listening, forgot to take notes.

Some refer to Mr. Vining as an old fashioned orator. Let's have more old fashioned orators. He intersperses his practical advice to the state's businessmen with an eloquence. He makes of business and a state's development something of a romance. His is a kind of practical idealism. We wish that all Hood River had heard him Monday night.

THE EDDY EDUCATIONAL BILL

An analysis of the so-called Eddy bill, which proposes the compulsory teaching of arithmetic, spelling and writing, will, we believe, show it to be ill-advised. The courses of Oregon high schools are shaped not only on the experience of high school teachers but the needs of students as evidenced on their entrance to colleges and universities. The courses of study to a great degree are specified by the institutions of higher education.

Legislative tinkering with the department of education is dangerous. If the legislature every two years is going to upset the educational system, we may well expect a retarding of its progress.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

This is his birthday. He is a saint of secular history. His was a greatness like that of Christ. He was humbly born, with a nature characterized by gentleness and humility. There was a bond of sympathy between him and little children and dumb animals. And yet his will was of a strength invincible, armored by the consciousness of right. And because, then as once before, men, their minds perverted by misunderstanding, know not what they do, he was a martyr.

State Prohibition Director Cleaver may be possessed of all the honest attributes ascribed to him by Governor Pierce, and we'll admit the same of Dr. Herwig, adviser from the Anti-Saloon League, but they have certainly failed in the task of practical enforcement of the prohibition law. Their misapplied zeal has even been such as to menace the department. Our country today is overburdened with rules and regulations that soon become unenforceable when an attempt is made to apply to them impractical zeal. If Governor Pierce had heeded the call of common, horse sense, he would have discharged Cleaver long ago. He never has and never will be an asset to prohibition enforcement.

Thomas W. Lawson died last week, and press reports of his passing were meagre. There was something pitiful in the decline of the once nationally known figure, who wrote "Frenzied Finance" and whose sensational actions when he bearded Wall street made great copy. Lawson passed across the stage of human events, his burst of egotism flaring in the sky with meteoric brilliance, and then he sputtered out and fell into oblivion as speedily as any meteor. Like the pitcher that went too often to the well, Lawson challenged Wall street one too many times.

Col. Henry E. Dosch was known throughout Oregon for his patriotic participation in various activities. He was best known to early fruitgrowers, those who were the pioneers in the northwestern apple industry, for the interest he took in horticulture. He was an authority on this phase of Oregon industry. Col. Dosch's was a life yorthy of emulation.

The Legion Drum and Bugle Corps is going to be one of Hood River's banner organizations. You are going to hear from them when they begin to make merry noises about over the state. The corps, however, needs funds to pay for instruments and instruction. Help by attending their benefit show at the Rialto theatre tonight.

Hood River county and the Mosier precinct of Wasco county have secured much needed livestock control bills from the legislature. The bills are similar in their provisions and cattle will not be permitted to run at large. Such measures are especially needed in communities that specialize in orcharding.

Hood River's next organization, we predict, will be a band of merry mountaineers, wearing goggles and eating apples, their faces streaked with grease paint. They'll march in Rose Festival parades and advertise the recreational lure of old Mount Hood.

Have you been approached about investments of the money you have received from your apple crop? If not yet, you probably will. Do not take a chance on some alluring scheme. Ask your banker. Act on his advice and you'll be safe.

It may be necessary to appoint a new committee to investigate and bring in a report on the report of the Cleaver legislative investigation committee.

Masonic Dances Planned

The dance committee of the Masonic lodge has arranged with Manager Tremblay, of the Columbia Gorge hotel for a series of parties at the popular hostelry, beginning as soon as it is open for the season about March 15. The Masonic dances formed pleasant social events for mid-Columbia members of the lodge last winter. The dance committee is composed of Harold Hershner, Kent Shoemaker and Ray Lee.

Word of Appreciation

In announcing the sale of the Mt. Hood Meat Market to Beaudoin & Taylor, I wish to express to the people of Hood River my thanks for their patronage for the past year. The business relations that have existed between my patrons and myself will form pleasant memories. Let me commend to you the new management of the market and bespeak for it a full share of your patronage.

Stevenson Paper is Sold

The Skamania County Pioneer, official paper for Skamania county, published at Stevenson, Wash., has changed hands. W. W. Mokler, who has been the owner and editor since May, 1920, has sold the paper to P. F. Willoughby, who already has taken possession and published his first edition this week. A special issue of the Pioneer will be published soon in the interest of the Skamania County Chamber of Commerce.

Mulkens-Pullen

The wedding of Lynn B. Mulkens, of The Dalles, where he is employed at the tie treating plant of the O.-W. R. & N. Co., and Miss Beulah Leota Pullen occurred Monday at the home of Rev. H. C. Clark, who officiated. The young couple were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Jackson. Mrs. Jackson is a sister of the bride.

Talk with Young.

HOOD DEBATERS VICTORS AND LOSERS

In a triangular debate with Bend and The Dalles high schools Tuesday, the Hood River affirmative team, Clifton Emmel and Lois Jean Sinclair, defeated the Bend negative, Mary Bennett and Maurice Hoover, here by unanimous decision. The Hood River negative, Roger Woodyard and Harriett Fuller, lost at The Dalles by a 2 to 1 vote of the judges.

The debaters discussed United States ownership and control of coal mines.

METHODIST ENDOWMENT FUND ASKED

The Oregon conference of the Methodist Episcopal church is now in a campaign to raise $250,000 endowment fund for the retired ministers. The canvass is now being carried on in Hood River, Odell and Pine Grove. No cause could be more worthy than that of the pioneer circuit riders who helped carve Oregon's civilization out of a wilderness. Anyone wishing to help may confer with any Methodist pastor in the county.

Smith Sells Drug Store Interest

Ernest J. Smith, who came here year before last from Medford, yesterday sold his interest in the Hood River Drug Co. to his his associates in the business, John F. McLean, C. H. Castner and Dr. H. D. W. Pineo. Mr. Smith will go to Portland or some point in southern Oregon, he stated.

Card of Thanks

I wish to express sincere thanks to my neighbors and friends for their kind words of sympathy and aid during my bereavement attendant on the sickness and death of my beloved wife. Especially do I wish to thank those who presented floral tributes. Their ministrations will be held in sacred memory. A. Leroux.

FINS, FURS AND FEATHERS

Mrs. M. B. Harvey, wife of the proprietor of a silver fox farm near Cascade Locks, has an alligator three years old, which has survived the cold winter of snow and ice at the very foot of the Cascade mountains. He is in the dormant state now and lies in a box in the Harvey living room. He has eaten nothing for weeks, but once a week he is placed in a tub of tepid water, but is apparently unconscious of this attention.

Mrs. Harvey, who formerly lived in Louisiana, brought the alligator from there to Oregon. Mrs. Harvey expects to have several more shipped to her this spring. In the planning of the grounds at the fox farm an alligator pond has been included in the plot.

Arthur Eade, superintendent of McGowan & Sons, who operate large fisheries in the vicinity of Cascade Locks, while here Monday said that the Columbia's winter freshet was an aid to the concern in improving the fishing grounds near Stevenson on the Washington side of the stream. The high water enables the company to get gravel scows well out to the shore where seines will be operated this summer.

The bottom of the river at this point is naturally muddy and a gravel surface is being applied, in order to make the operation of the seines easier. Several thousand dollars is being spent in improving the fishing grounds. The McGowans operate the picturesque fish wheels viewed near Cascade Locks from the Columbia River highway.

President Fredricy and Secretary Day, of the Hood River Game Protective Association, Saturday distributed through the valley 48 Hungarian partridges, received from the Pendleton state game farm. They were the first birds ever received here from the eastern Oregon farm. Mr. Fredricy says that conditions here are ideal for propagating the beautiful partridges, which seek brushy copses, such as surrounding valley orchard sections. The game association is expecting a shipment of Bob Whites at at early date.

Rev. A. S. Hisey, of Gresham, superintendent of the M. E. church, was here Tuesday evening to confer with the pastors and representatives of the Hood River county Methodist churches.
