MR. COPPLE BUYS
PEDIGREED COW

C. E. Copple recently purchased from C. L. Mulkey, of Medsavinville, the yearling Jersey heifer, Daisy's Lass of Larchester. This good heifer is a daughter of Mr. Mulkey's sire, Little Pauline's Lass, a son of the medal of merit bull, Bunde Lass, and the great cow, Lady Little Pauline, 936 pounds of fat, class AA. Her dam, Fern's Lass of Larchester, has a junior two-year-old record of 12,471 pounds of milk and 641 pounds of butterfat. She produced 230 pounds more fat her last five months than her first five. She produced 121 pounds of milk her last four days, which were the best four days of the lactation. It is a silver medal record. Lass having calved 32 days after the test was finished. A year ago Mrs. Copple got a heifer from Mr. Mulkey and she was so satisfactory this late sale resulted. She is by the gold and silver medal bull, Daisy's Golden Poppy, and out of Nancy of Larchester, 433 pounds of fat in 305 days. Mrs. Copple is a breeder of White Leghorn chickens and paid $250 for one cockerel to get what she wanted. During all the extreme cold spell of this winter the Copple flock gave a good output of eggs, which indicates the money for the cockerel may have been well spent.

W. H. GALLIGAN HAS FIRST BERRY BLOOMS

W. H. Galligan, owner of a strawberry ranch at Hood, Wash., here last week reported that his plants were blooming. The ranch is located in a protected cove on the Washington side of the Columbia canyon, and, barring frosts, Mr. Galligan said he expected to pick ripe strawberries by May 1.

Annually Mr. Galligan markets the first Clark Seedling strawberries from the mid-Columbia.

She Rolled Her Oyn

This was an actual happening in Pendleton. A smiling old lady in the eighties was visiting at the home of a small boy about six years of age, who took a very strong liking to her. He felt that he must make her Christmas present, so taking all of his earthly wealth from his savings bank he went down town and bought a set of cheap dice with the caption on the box, "Roll your own." He couldn't wait until Christmas to make the presentation, so gave them to her. With smiles and many thanks she said that was just what she wanted. Life income is just what you want. You have the advantages of an assured monthly income, while you can enjoy it yourself—an immediate estate should you die without obligation. Consult F. W. Woolley, District Manager, Massachusetts Mutual Life.

Pine Grove Forum Launched

The Pine Grove Methodist church Sunday night launched an open forum, which will hold a series of meetings at frequent dates to discuss timely topics. Sunday night the discussion centered around the proposed union high school, on which the electors of seven Lower Valley school districts will vote April 3. County School Superintendent Critchley, City School Director Reed and City Clerk Chesney were present to outline plans of the proposed school.

While A. L. Mason declared himself favorable to the proposed union high school, he said he would oppose the voting of bonds for the institution.

Insurance Available

It might be of interest to the farmers of the valley to know that after May 28, the date the new law goes into effect, farmers and other employers may secure accident insurance through the State Industrial Accident Commission.

HORSES DRAW DR.
WELCH TO HIS GRAVE

To gratify the wish of a man, who during his life was possessed of a love for horses, they were turned back some 15 years in Hood River last Friday afternoon, and an antiquated harness was brought from its storage by S. E. Bartness and a team secured from the Emory Lumber & Fuel Co., and the harness of the olden day equipment was taken from a closet, where it had been stored for years while mold encrusted it to W. G. Weber, veteran harnessmaker and a friend of the deceased, who spent the day before the funeral oiling and polishing it. John Evans, master of the lumber company team for his first and perhaps last time, drove a harness horse drawn by a team of four, and the pioneer veterinarian, Dr. Welch, was in the first time in their lives, heard great interest. To the elders of the community it seemed like a page from the book of memory. Scores of children saw horses drawing a hearse for the first time in their lives.

The pioneer chapel was crowded by the families of pioneers and business folk of the city. Dr. Welch was one of the most picturesque characters who ever lived here. He was the family doctor for the community's livestock. Although a man of brusque speech, no mid-Columbian was characterized by a bigger heart than Dr. Welch, or "Dr. Mike," as he was familiarly known. He was of impulsive temperament and generous to a fault. His friends tell a story that was characteristic of the man. A number of years ago a remote rancher had become indebted to him for professional services. As there was nothing unusual about that, for many men have owed Dr. Welch money and were not pressed for payment. But in this particular case the veterinarian had been led to believe that he was being imposed upon, and he was irked. One day the rancher drove into town to the livery stable, where Dr. Welch had his office, and the latter saw him. He accosted him roughly. The rancher, it appeared, had just driven his wife to the local hospital for a serious operation. He explained this to Dr. Welch and told of other misfortunes that had befallen his family.

The pioneer veterinarian was seen to reach for his pocketbook, and as he brusquely berated the rancher for not having informed him of the unfortunate events, he said, as he proffered him a $10 bill.

"You don't owe me a cent," Dr. Welch's knowledge of the pedigreed horses of the world was nothing less than phenomenal. It is likely that no man of the Pacific coast knew the records of so many famous racers, dams or sires, as he.

The horse was at his hey-day in Hood River 15 years ago, and the Fashion Stables, where Dr. Welch had his office, maintained a string of 60 animals. With the coming of the automobile the animals were decreased. Five years ago they were all disposed of except one, "Old Dan." He was kept in order that Dr. Welch might have a horse which would answer his calls. Although he might have gone on with his work in greater comfort and more convenience, he never utilized an automobile. Through his knowledge of snow-bearing wind or snow upon a benign summer sun, he drove his horse along Hood River's highways, and so it was befitting that he might pay his last tribute to the horse by having them draw him to his last rest.

Funeral services were held at the Bartness chapel, the Episcopal service being read by Rev. L. H. Miller. Songs were rendered by Mrs. Frank Gilbert. Dr. Welch is survived by wife and three sons, Frank, Welch, a publisher of Stillwater, Minn., and Michael, Jr.

BATCHELDER SAYS
MANY CARS COMING

"I predict that we will have registered in this state this year more than double the 40,000 automobiles of California who came here last year," said J. F. Batchelder, who with Mrs. Batchelder returned last week from Long Beach, where he spent the winter.

Mr. Batchelder said he talked with hundreds of southern Californians who said they were coming here for their summer vacation. He said that many will seek homes in the north. Several Californians, he said, will come here this summer with the expectation of purchasing Hood River orchards.

Mr. Batchelder has highest praise for the management of Long Beach. The affairs of which are administered by a city manager. The city council merely sits as an advisory body, he says.

Members of the American Legion Post, who accompanied their wives have made pilgrimages to the snow-fields of Mount Hood the past winter, are doing much to popularize the region for winter sports. A party of legionnaires and their wives journeyed to Homestead over a recent week end and were guests of J. O. Hannum, who was up from Portland.

The recreationists returned declaring the thrill of skiing and tobogganing more alluring than mountaineering in the summer months. They predict that the great sloping snow fields are due in the future to draw as many recreationists during the winter months as in summer. Those in the party were:

Mr. and Mrs. Kent Shoemaker, Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hershner, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Y. Morrison, Mr. and Mrs. Van W. Gladden, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Davis, William Cochran and J. O. Hannum.
