

Boy Scouts

Whether you have a boy of your own or not, you should be interested in the approaching campaign to establish more thoroughly a Boy Scout organization throughout the mid-Oregon.

Recently we have observed numerous small boys at play with air rifles on the streets. Others have been noticed with cartridges of small rifles. It is a dangerous pastime. Some children are liable to lose an eye or have a finger or hand mangled.

Hood River valley pickles may become as famous as Hood River apples. A salting plant is in prospect. Some ranchers may be seen cultivating small tracts of cucumbers. Here in Hood River they grow to perfection.

How is the street improvement program coming on? Citizens and councilmen should get together on a constructive and economic program that will lead to an early permanent improvement of arterial thoroughfares.

The visiting motorist will be well cared for this year. Have you noticed the activity of the service station folk from one side of the town to the other?

Get your flower beds ready. Make Hood River known far and wide this year for its flowers.

PROF. HENDERSON TO STUDY JOHN DAY

Louis F. Henderson, veteran scientist and one of the foremost botanists in the country, is working on botanical studies and special research which will prove of great value to Oregon and to the entire country.

With his work in the herbarium of Oregon's botanical school completed, Prof. Henderson plans to start making a careful investigation of the John Day region for eastern species. Other work which he is now occupied with includes a complete recording of the fauna of the Hood River district.

At one time Prof. Henderson possessed one of the finest and most complete herbariums in the west. Part of this collection is now in the herbarium at Eugene.

He has been connected with educational institutions in the west from the time the old Portland high school was opened. Prof. Henderson was born in Boston and received his education at Cornell university.

He has a fruit farm in the Hood River valley, where he takes care of his acreage and is actively engaged in scientific research.

Farm Pointers

Dry Rot Has Cause Dry rot, to which apples are peculiarly susceptible, has been nearly always connected with lack of moisture in the late autumn. In Oregon there is sufficient moisture in the soil in the spring to develop a good growth on the trees.

It is important not only that economical production in Oregon be attained through the use of economical methods, but that high producing cows be kept in large enough units to keep down overhead expense, states Prof. P. M. Brandt, chief of the dairy husbandry department at the state agricultural college.

Use the brooder house only while chicks are being brooded, advises H. E. Crosby, poultry specialist for the O. A. C. extension service.
