STAGE AND SCREEN

Erville Alderson, who plays the role of an old Polish school teacher in D. W. Griffith's new film, "Isn't Life Wonderful," which comes to the Rialto theatre Friday and Saturday...

When cast for the role of the teacher in the new Griffith play, Alderson secured the only tinsy in existence of his old German friend, long since dead, and used it as the model for his make-up.

One of the problems which confronted the producers of Betty Compson's latest starring vehicle, "Ramshackle House," which comes to the Rialto theatre Sunday, was to secure a house in a sufficiently dilapidated condition to live up to the name.

Entertainment of an original sort is promised in "Salvation Hunters," the picture of new dramatic revelations that comes to the Rialto Monday and Tuesday.

There is a film made by a scenery known director with the most brilliant Hollywood "extras" who were devoted more to opportunity than to pay.

A scene of powerful dramatic runs through "Salvation Hunters." The theme is submerged hope coming up out of the slush into the sunlight.
