"Old Homes Made New"

By James Finson, Carefree
Fourteen-year-old High School Boy

WHEN you first came here, and this house was empty, you saw that styles have changed since then, from this old fashioned...

To the pretty small house, where mother's like to sit and sew, And not only a home, a place to live and grow, But a place of joy, and comfort, and beauty, too; Such as we might have, if the old home were made new.

I HAVE a simple plan, that I have studied in a book. This shows how to take from home that old-fashioned look. And how to add convenience, comfort, and beauty, and joy. Which makes it easy for mother, and nice for "Dad" and we boys.

We'd get more air and sunshine, and the place would seem more like...

I AM just a plain old man, my boy, but I can see your right, I know how happy mother'd be, if the old home were made new.

And we had a cozy room, a place for the rainy day, And the kid had a nice new perch on which to romp and play. So where is the book you spoke of? Let me see it, too, And we'll get together, my boy, and make the old home new.

H. M. DEXTER FINDS CONDITIONS GOOD

H. M. Dexter, of the sales department of the Apple Growers Association, just back from seven weeks spent in studying market conditions in the larger eastern cities, says he finds general industrial activities good. "Factories are operating in all the larger manufacturing cities," said Mr. Dexter, "and it appears that we are facing a good year. The apple trade, I find, is coming to learn how to choose certain varieties by districts. They have learned that Hood River Newtowns and Spitzburgs are unappreciated. The trade is coming in many instances to favor the Newtown instead of the Wispap for late sales. The Newtown is gaining in popularity in many markets.

Mr. Dexter visited in the following cities: Omaha, Chicago, Detroit, New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Washington and Minneapolis. He was in Washington during Easter, and the crowd of visitors was so great, he said, that he found it difficult to secure a hotel room. Mrs. Dexter, who visited her parents at Colville, Wash., while her husband was away, has returned home.

Mr. Dexter has visited in the New York Watch Co. have worn since through, before he had it replaced with the present case. DEATH CALLS

CHAS. A. BELL

PROBBER MAN STRICKEN SUDDENLY

Passing of One of Town's First Citizens Leaves Impression on All the Valley

A stranger here early last Thursday would have sensed that some calamity had befallen the town. As merchants arrived in the business section to open their stores and shops, word was passed that Charles A. Bell, a citizen and one of the town's first citizens, had died suddenly the night before, and men were seen in little hushed groups and business men, and street walking alike, talking of the death.

Mr. Bell, native of New Brunswick, N. J., came to Hood River 35 years ago to engage in logging operations. At an earlier period he had been associated with S. Benson, former chairman of the Oregon State Highway Commission, in logging operations, and the latter was wont to come here frequently, when he was active in Oregon road affairs, and counsel with him. He also advised with Mr. Bell before he built the Columbia Gorge hotel.

Mr. Bell retired from logging to purchase the Mt. Hood hotel, in 1902, which he improved and operated until his death. While he had not been actively engaged in growing fruit for many years, through his association with a group of planters in developing the valley's first irrigation system, he was recognized as one of the founders of the strawberry and apple industry, which received their greatest stimulus following the delivery of water to the soil.

Mr. Bell was known statewide as a good roads booster. He was one of the leaders in securing the Mount Hood Loop Highway, and was a member of the Mt. Hood Development Association, engaged in promoting a tourist hostel for the mountain.

LUNCH CLUB MEMBERS EAT AT AUTO PARK

The Tuesday Lunch Club had an interesting guest this week when they assembled for their weekly luncheon at the community home of the municipal auto park. It was Victor Morel, noted tenor and grand opera singer of Buenos Aires, Argentina, and Madame Morel, who are on a motor tour of the United States.

Mr. Morel touched on the auto camp system as found in this country. He declared that it furnished accommodations for those who really wish to get out and see the country. This is the class that communities wish to cater to, he declared, instead of the man, with a big cigar in his mouth, who goes to the hotels to associate with lounge lizards. He praised the manager of the local park, characterizing him as a man capable of understanding human nature and thus knowing how to cater to the traveling public.
