FOREIGN NEWS ON THE APPLE MARKET

(From a bulletin of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Washington, D. C.)

Stockholm, Oslo (formerly Christiania) and Bergen complete the list of Scandinavian cities providing important markets for American apples. Stockholm is the most important from all viewpoints with its population of 500,000.

Purchasing from New York through agents appears to be the most popular method of securing supplies. Some supplies are secured by direct order from shippers in New York, either by outright purchase or on consignment.

More Tyrolean apples are to be seen in the Stockholm shops in mid-winter than Canadian and American apples combined. During the autumn, supplies from southern Europe are augmented by domestic fruit, and by apples from The Netherlands and Denmark.

It appears that Stockholm takes about equal weights of boxed and unpacked apples at the present time. This is somewhat characteristic of Sweden as a whole, although in the long run the country probably uses a slightly heavier tonnage of American apples in barrels than of boxed fruit.

The city of Stockholm provides cold storage in connection with its market and some importers lease space by the year. Such space is used principally for pears and other soft fruits. Practically no cold storage is used for apples, which are purchased for the most part on "hand-to-mouth" deals and stored in the rooms of the importers.

Ole has a population of 260,000 and distributes American apples and other imported fruits to all of southern Norway. Two steamship lines give direct service from New York and numerous boats make frequent trips to and from Copenhagen, and to British ports via Bergen and Gothenburg.

Ole does not have the good rail connections that Gothenburg and Stockholm have for importing apples from southern Europe. However, these fruits feature in competition with American apples to a smaller extent in Norway.

Barreled apples from the United States have been coming into Norway for many years, but boxed apples did not make their appearance until about 1909. The duty has curtailed consumption, however, and has had the same general effect on barreled apples as in other markets.

Several of these firms have leased warehouse space in a large central warehouse building called "Kontorhuset" (Kontorhuset Port Warehouse), situated at the quay-side and convenient to rail connections. This is a corporate warehousing business that was built during the flush of war expansion. Space is available in this building for dry storage and storage conditions were found to be suitable as is generally found in buildings not designed for apples.

Bergen, one of the oldest trading cities of northern Europe, now has a population of about 100,000. Of the American apples imported at this point it is estimated that about two-thirds are for local consumption. The balance is reshipped to the northern part of Norway, Bergen being the distributing center for supplies going to all of the seaport towns along the north coast.

The port is served by a line which has sailings from New York about every three weeks. Some apples arrive on the slower freighters and to those who are acquainted with shipping these ships are a means of reducing freight costs. The liners make Bergen a port of call and therefore discharge cargo during a minimum of time and at a higher cost than is necessary for discharging from the regular freighters.

Ordering American apples from American firms is on about the same basis as in Gothenburg, Stockholm and Oslo. The largest importers are looking to the agents of American firms for their regular source of supply.

The statements regarding Oslo apply to Bergen, Bergen, however, is nearer the Hardanger valley and no doubt feels the influence of the competition of Norwegian apples more than is the case with Oslo.

Tyrolean apples were very much in evidence in the Bergen retail shops in January and were shown in quantities about equal to those of American apples.

Following is the weather report for April: Mean maximum 6.7, mean minimum 35.4, mean 48.7, maximum 97 degrees on 8th, 9th and 10th, minimum 27 degrees on 26th, G. A number of local fishermen went to Kikkittat to fish last week. Mrs. Bader's mother is visiting at the "Walton" ranch. W. F. Gibbs is having a two-room addition built onto his home.

Monday Frank Hubbard and wife, of Portland, purchased from J. E. Ford the five acres adjoining E. W. Whittaker. They will commence clearing at once and expect to make this their home.

The Hartleys have installed a new electric player piano in their home. Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Ford are visiting with their daughter, Mrs. L. F. Farber.

Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Stahler spent the week end with Mrs. Stahler's mother, Mrs. Van Aist, in Portland. Gerald Cassing drove up from Portland in his new Buick coupe returning Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Catherwood were hosts to the Fortnightly Club Saturday night. The evening was enjoyably spent with cards and music followed by a delicious supper.

Mrs. Mary Campbell returned Wednesday from a sort visit with her daughter, Mrs. Hayes Dickford, of Pine Grove. Miss Whittaker is to have a meeting with our health committee this morning at 10:30 at Mrs. M. R. Catherwood's.

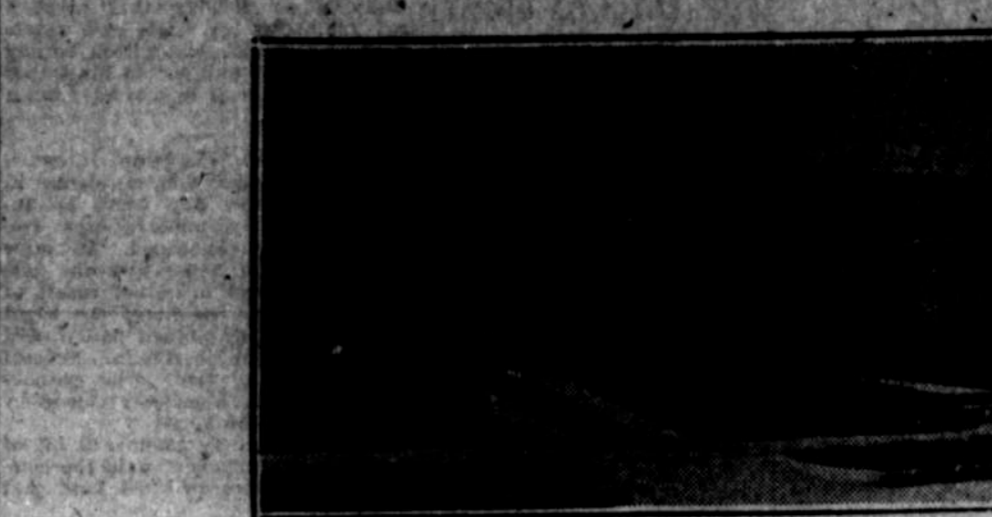

Dance Friday evening, May 8, Pine Grove grange hall. Aces of Melody. The Oregon City Golf Club will come here next Sunday with a 20-man team, 30 women and five boys to participate in a tournament with the Hood River Country Club.

May will be a busy month for local golfers. May 17, a return game will be played with teams of men and women of The Dallas Country Club. May 24 the Portland Golf Club's women's team will play local women, and on that day a one-club tournament will be held by the men of the local club.

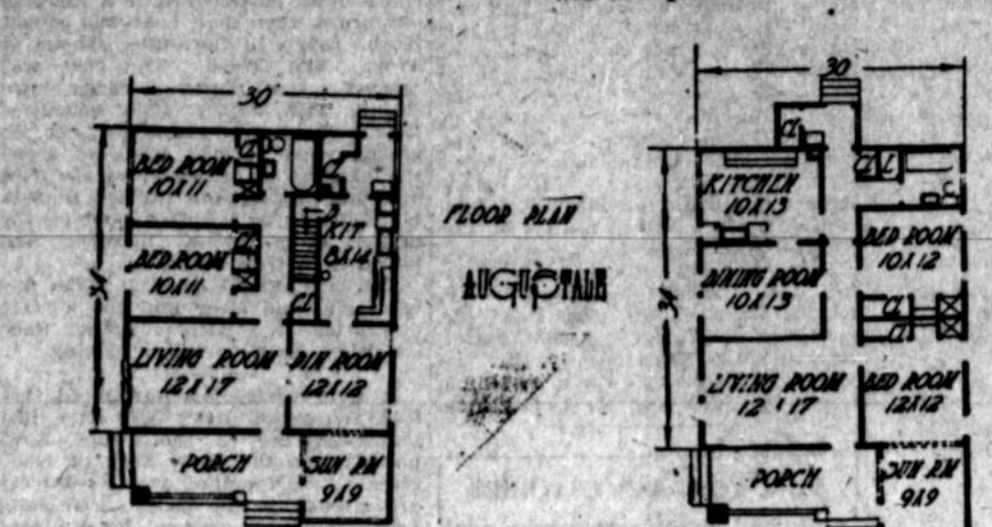

May 30 a handicap flag tournament for men and women will be held, and Sunday, May 31, a tournament will be played with visitors from the Vancouver, Wash., club. In the match play last Sunday morning when the visiting Portland golf celebrities participated with local players, C. C. Anderson made the lowest score of any local man. He made the course 18 1/2.

With the largest gallery ever seen on the Oak Grove links of the Hood River Golf and Country Club, Bill Hanly and Fred Dolp, of the Alderwood golf club in Portland, Sunday beat Mel and Russell Smith, of the Waverly club in what was declared one of the most sensational golf matches ever played in Oregon. Hanly made 68 and Dolp's score was 68. Mel Smith made 74 and Russell Smith, 60. Russell Smith, Hanly and Dolp each made the nine holes in 33. The former record for the course, a 35, was held by Dr. O. F. Willing.

Curfew in Force Again
Curfew, which has not been observed here for some time, was inaugurated again Tuesday night. The city council resurrected an old ordinance, requiring the sounding of curfew bell at 9 p. m., at the appeal of the W. C. T. U. The city night marshal will ring by hand the old fire bell. The fire department, however, objected to this use of the electric siren, and the city night marshal will ring by hand the old fire bell. The Portland Telegram, Hood River agent, Carroll Day. MOTHERS' DAY, SUNDAY, MAY 10TH

More and more each year this sacred day is being observed. Not publicly only, but in the homes where it becomes a personal and individual expression of love and appreciation. There has grown up a custom of relieving Mother on that day of every possible worry and burden, and bestowing on her a gift to commemorate the occasion. Let such gifts measure up well to the lofty thoughts which prompt the giving.

De FOREST RADIO TUBES

To get the full beauty of tone and volume use De Forest Tubes. They are remarkably free from interfering noises. They are uniform in construction and performance and can be used both as detectors and amplifiers. They are saving of battery current and have unusually long life. They are sponsored by Dr. Lee De Forest, whose three-electrode vacuum tube in 1907 made possible modern radio.
