Whooping Cough

Whooping cough has made its appearance in Hood River after being in the valley for several weeks, and it behooves everyone to give this contagious disease proper consideration.

The article following is issued from the office of the Oregon State Board of Health:

Whooping cough ranks third in fatalities among the communicable diseases of early childhood. This statement is made as a refutation of the prevalent belief that whooping cough is a disease of mild character and of little importance.

Scarlet fever has resulted in less than half as many fatalities as whooping cough in the state of Oregon during the last 10 years. Not only is whooping cough serious in itself but not infrequently pulmonary tuberculosis follows in its wake.

Whooping cough is prevented with the greatest difficulty. Typhoid fever, smallpox, diphtheria and scarlet fever have been conquered and measures are available for their complete control.

We know that whooping cough is caused by a definite germ and we know how it spreads. But just as long as parents keep on thinking that the disease is a mild disorder and hence maintain indifference to the efforts of health officials to check its spread, just so long will epidemics continue to exact their toll of young lives.

Another reason for lack of control is that often the disease is not recognized for the well known "whoop" may not occur until a week or even two weeks after the onset.

In the meantime the child is spreading the infection all over the neighborhood, for it is during this period that the disease is most contagious. This fact emphasizes the necessity to keep a child, suffering with what may seem to be just an ordinary cold, at home and away from other children.

A cold may be the first sign of whooping cough or it may mark the beginning of any one of several infectious diseases.

Whooping cough is spread only through contact with the fresh secretions of the nose and mouth of another person suffering with the disease.

The prevention of whooping cough consists in keeping all children with colds away from other children. This is a matter solely within the control of parents. Take precautions with your child and insist on your neighbor doing likewise.

It is a state law that "you report all cases of whooping cough to the health officer, as soon as they have been developed, while it seems to help little in preventing the disease, it is of considerable value in reducing the severity of the disease."

Don't trifle with whooping cough but give it expert care.

Mrs. Spangler has Freak Lily

A freak blossom spike of Mount Hood lilies, on which appeared 100 perfectly shaped blooms, created considerable attention when exhibited at the Laurnell Market Saturday.

The stalk with the record number of blossoms was picked from her flower garden by Mrs. Mary Spangler. The stalk of the mountain lily is ordinarily round. The spike on which the many blooms appear, however, is flat, more than a quarter of an inch thick and an inch and a half wide.
