DAN WUILLE MANAGER VISITS THE VALLEY

Manager Moynihan, of the New York office of Dan Wuille & Co., on a Pacific coast tour, who arrived here from Medford with Walter R. Woolpert, sales manager of the northwestern headquarters office, located here, declares that the fruit crop there will be of good quality. Medford, he says, expects a tonnage of 1800 carloads of pears. The Rogue River apple crop, however, will be very short, that district anticipating but 300 cars of this species of fruit. Mr. Moynihan praised Hood River folk for the quality of their fruit crop.

Mr. Moynihan has left for Idaho with A. E. Woolpert, northwestern manager of the big fruit concern, headquarters of which are at London.

New Trail Grows Popular

Mark Weygandt, who recently discovered a new and easy route to the summit of Mount Hood up the north side, says that the trail bids fair to become immediately popular. Tuesday he had a message from Carlton, where 19 people reside who wish to scale to the summit by the new trail, which has been designated the Sunshine route.

Boy Scout News

Troop One, Hood River Boy Scouts, Tuesday won the Scout rally held here at Gibson field. A. T. Case is master of the troop. Two other troops, one of them from Pine Grove, participated in the meet. A large number of spectators was present.

WINSTOCK URGES 1930 EXPOSITION

It was "1930 Exposition Day" at the Tuesday Lunch Club Tuesday at the Columbia Gorge hotel, when the Chamber of Commerce, with President Steele in charge, presided. Melvin G. Winstock, well known to Hood River audiences, having given the Harding memorial address and having appeared before the club on a former occasion, appealed to the citizens of Hood River to get 100 per cent behind plans for holding the Pacific-American International Exposition in Portland in 1930.

Mr. Winstock was accompanied by L. Carroll Day, Portland song writer and composer of "When You Come On to Oregon." Mr. Day gave his song and the audience joined in the chorus.

Mr. Winstock cited the great benefits that accrue from well conducted expositions, the first of which in America was held at Philadelphia in 1876. He cited the Lewis & Clarke exposition in Portland in 1905.

"I would like to see the color of the hair of the man who will dare say that this exposition was not the greatest stimulant to development that Oregon ever had," said Mr. Winstock.

The speaker cited the populations of Washington and California. He declared that we here in Oregon do not know how to advertise. For years, he said, except in such places as Hood River, Oregon has been going sleepily along without realizing what she has in the way of wonderful undeveloped resources. He declared that a great international Portland exposition will not only aid Portland but all Oregon and the entire Pacific coast. Mr. Winstock complimented the enterprise of the Hood River valley, which with its product, the perfect apple, he declared, had in many ways done more toward advertising Oregon than the Portland Chamber of Commerce.

Before the proposed exposition can succeed, even materialize, the speaker said, it will be necessary to get all Oregon communities unanimously back of it. It is proposed, he said, to have a meeting of delegates from all parts of the state within the next six months and formulate definite plans and select the general committee that will carry on the exposition program.

Mr. Winstock appealed to the chamber to deliberate over the proposed exposition and then furnish the Portland committee with a resolution unanimously endorsing it.

A feature of the Lunch club at the Columbia Gorge hotel this week was the administering the oath to a class of 40 men, who pledged themselves to become members of the United States Army of America for a day and participate in Defense day July 4. Capt. Geo. R. Wilbur administered the oath.

The Defense day oath will be administered to a class of more than 1,000, it is anticipated, when citizens from all mid-Columbia points and a delegation from Portland come here Kirk, of Santa Rosa, Calif., minister, and A. E. Woolpert.

Visitors at the Lunch club Tuesday were: Manager Moynihan, of the New York office of Dan Wuille & Co., and Paul Kirk, son of Rev. W. P. Kirk, of Santa Rosa, Calif., minister.

ASSOCIATION BUSINESS SETS RECORD

Checks aggregating an approximate $235,000 will go forward to grower members of the Apple Growers Association this week on final returns for the 1924 apple crop. The distribution will bring the total paid by the association to growers on the 1924 fruit crop to $3,201,895, the largest returns ever made by the cooperative organization.

Segregation of items and amounts received for each were as follows for the 1924 tonnage:

Apples, $2,855,000; pears, $198,000; strawberries, $105,200; cherries, $35,350; raspberries, $7,680; blackberries and loganberries, $2,665.

The association has made a refund of $68,743 on its 1924 budget and a refund on supplies reached $70,370. Members are also this week receiving a refund of $26,438, which represents railroad and ocean freight claims collected from transportation companies on shipments of the year 1922.

The cooperative concern handled 2,049,760 packages of fruit and 1,527,488 pounds of bulk fruit to canners.

HOOD RIVER ELKS TO BE REAL KIDS

Members of Hood River Lodge, B. P. O. E., the youngest Elks lodge in Oregon, will act as real babes when they attend the big national convention of Best People on Earth in Portland next month. The lodge has adopted for the convention parade a kid's uniform. The suit consists of white blouse with purple collar, purple knee trousers, with white half sox, white oxford shoes and white duck hat. The marching team is getting ready to greet the visiting Bills. Fred W. Donnerberg, secretary of the local lodge, was the first to devote his show window to an Elks' greeting. Thousands of visiting delegations will pass through Hood River while on a tour of the Mount Hood Loop highway. The annual American Legion climb has been set for Saturday and Sunday, July 18 and 19, and a large delegation of the Best People who are inclined toward the strenuous exercise of ascending the peak will be visitors at the highland camp of the legionnaires near Cloud Cap Inn.

Koberg Has Beach Manager

J. H. Koberg has secured Ted Cunningham, Portland young man, to manage Koberg beach, his resort on one of the most noted sand coves along the Columbia river. Mr. Cunningham has a certificate from the Red Cross life saving school.

Mr. Koberg has improved his beach materially this year, having erected a dance pavilion and enlarged and improved bath houses. He has 17 men hurrying the place to completion before Saturday.

Mosier Prospects Good

Dr. C. A. Macrum, here Monday from his home in Mosier, said he had prospects this season for the finest fruit crop he has ever produced. Conditions, he said, were good generally for a harvest of well-sized, good quality apples in the Mosier district. The tonnage will exceed that of last year.

MRS. BELL VOICES PRAISE OF ROADS

Mrs. Charles A. Bell, who with her late husband was a member of the first horseback party that traveled around Mount Hood over the route of the Loop highway nine years ago, made the Loop trip up from Portland the climax of a 1075-mile motor trip which she took with Miss May Davidson last week. The two left here Monday, June 22, traveling to Bend and going thence to La Pine and Goose and Silver lakes in Lake county.

"It was a wonderful motor trip," declares Mrs. Bell, "and I think all Oregonians ought to take it to realize the vastness of their state and the wonderful resources of the great inland empire. We returned up through the Deschutes national forest and crossed over to Eugene by way of the McKenzie pass. There we could see 12 snowpeaks. I think McKenzie pass is one of the finest vantage points for inspiring views in the Cascades.' We thence went up to Corvallis and did the new Benton hotel.

"We saved the best till last, however, wending our way home up over the Mount Hood Loop highway and having our last "on the road meal" at Homestead Inn. The Loop road forms a delightful trip.

"We had tire trouble while in the national forest. A young man drove by and offered us aid. With his help we were soon able to resume the last lap of our journey. We thanked him for his courtesies. He replied that it was Standard Oil courtesy we were enjoying, explaining that his company instructs all of its employes to stop and render whatever assistance is possible to fellow tourists in distress."

Mrs. Bell and Miss Davidson stated that the folk of the southern counties are eagerly looking forward to railway development. While on their journey they met with a party of surveyors working between La Pine and Silver Lake.

OLD SCHOOL FRIEND VISITS BARTMESSES

Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Bartmess last week entertained a childhood playmate, Mrs. Frances Royal Wade, of Lafayette, Ind., whom they had not seen for 45 years. Mrs. Wade, who had spent the winter in Los Angeles with her daughter, Mrs. J. A. Remmer, and husband, accompanied them north on a motor tour. The party saw the Mount Hood Loop highway, which they declared a wonder road. Mr. Bartmess and Mrs. Wade attended a little red schoolhouse when they were children. Mr. Remmer's home was formerly in Illinois and he knew C. R. and N. W. Bone in that state. While the visitors were here they were taken for a call on Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Bone.

DEAD AIR POCKET CAUSES PLANE'S FALL

Sunday afternoon when Lieutenant Kerns, accompanied by Jack Rohr, of Portland, skimmed low over the golf links of the Hood River Country club, his airplane struck a dead air pocket as he started to ascend. Unable to rise, the pilot shut off his power and glided into the scrub oak brush covering the hillside just west of the course. The fuselage of the airplane was punctured by brush and the propeller was broken when the nose of the machine came in contact with an oak tree. Neither Lieut. Kerns nor his companion was injured. A detail from Vancouver barracks arrived Monday to salvage the plane, the damage to which will not be heavy, it was stated.

The fliers, accompanying six others, were returning from the Prineville American Legion convention. Lieut. Kerns dipped down over the golf links that Mr. Rohr might wave to Jack Routledge, manager of the course, a boyhood Portland friend.

Roberts-Chambers

Thursday morning, June 25, at the Christian and Missionary Alliance church, Miss Georgia Olive Chambers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Chambers, became the bride of Kenneth Crosby Roberts, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Roberts, of Gresham. Rev. Hall officiated in the presence of immediate friends and relatives. Mrs. Hall played the wedding march. A bower of forest greenery and colored flowers was arranged at the altar.

The bride wore a gown of blond lace over Nile green crepe-de-cchine. She carried a bouquet of bride's roses, sweet peas and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Otto Byers was matron of honor and carried a corsage of sweet peas and roses. A. C. Aldrich, of Portland, acted as best man.

Immediately after the ceremony the young couple left on a honeymoon trip through eastern Oregon and to Crater lake. After their return they will reside in Gresham, where Mr. Roberts is in business.

Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Dan Roberts and Miss Alice, of Gresham, and A. C. Aldrich, of Portland.

Albright-Kelley

The wedding of David Albright and Miss Mabel Kelley, of Danville, Ia., the bridegroom's old home, occurred Wednesday of last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Holbrook, Rev. W. N. Byars officiating. The bride has just arrived from Iowa. Only close friends witnessed the ceremony.

Except for Gaylord Metcalf and George Zolls, Mr. Albright was the last surviving bachelor of the Hood River Pythian band. He plays the bass horn in the musical organization. Mr. and Mrs. Albright will make their home for the time being with Mr. and Mrs. Holbrook.

James-Provence

The wedding of Omer Otis James and Miss Bertie A. Provence occurred Monday, Justice of the Peace Blagg officiating. The young couple are from the Odell district. They will make their home on the ranch place of Mrs. J. E. Ferguson.

Wasco Cherry Crop Light

Cherry tonnage of Wasco county will be nearly a third lighter than last year, when 93 cars were shipped. Shipments this year reached 60 carloads, about half of which were shipped by freight and the other half by express.

Talk with Young. Ten to 70.

GOLDEN WEDDING CELEBRATED MONDAY

Last Monday Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Evans celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at their West Side orchard place. Both are natives of Davenport, Ia. Mrs. Evans was born in the city and Mr. Evans on a farm near Bettendorf. The stone house in which he was born is still standing. Mr. Evans' father was a pioneer of Davenport. Mr. Evans was for a number of years connected with a mercantile firm in Davenport. Before coming to Hood River with his family in 1908, he was county overseer of the poor.

Mr. and Mrs. Evans have two daughters, Mrs. Harriet Blashfield, of Hood River, and Mrs. Lawrence Swan, of Portland. They have one grandson, William Blashfield.

Monday night Wauna Circle, a neighborhood social club, of which Mrs. Evans is a member, and their families visited the Evans home. About 40 were present to felicitate the happy couple on the jubilee occasion. Delightful refreshments were served. The circle presented Mrs. Evans with a handsome gift.

CHARLES DAVIDSON FUNERAL SUNDAY

Charles Davidson, native of Ohio, carriage painter of the old school, who Sunday, June 21, celebrated his 85th birthday, died Friday night. Death was caused by the recent excessive heat, which aggravated ailments peculiar to the aged man. The Christian Science funeral service was observed at the Bartmess chapel Sunday afternoon, after which the body was taken to the Portland crematorium.

Mr. Davidson is survived by the following children: H. F. Davidson, of Portland; Mrs. Amanda Whitehead, Mrs. W. H. Chipping and Miss May Davidson, all of Hood River.

Jesse Davidson, a brother of the deceased, resides at Mt. Hood.

FINS, FURS AND FEATHERS

Plans of the Wauna Lake club, members of which own Wauna and Blue lakes near Stevenson, Wash., call for construction of one of the largest fish hatcheries in the nation. The plant will propagate several million trout annually and keep the lakes well stocked for members. The club owns several hundred acres of land around the lakes. This will be turned into a game and bird preserve.

The capon is a fine bird for eating purposes. And a bird of a story is being told on Harvey M. Toy, chairman of the California State Highway Commission, who attended the cattle show at Valley Ford last week. Impressed by the size and appearance of a fine pen of capons displayed there, to which some wag had pinned a neatly worded sign, "Capon Eggs for Sale," Toy attempted to buy a setting, it is said, and to have them shipped to him in San Francisco for hatching purposes. And at that, the mistake is not entirely to be wondered at. Except for its size, the capon, a male bird, resembles a hen in appearance more than it does a rooster. But the capon lays no eggs.

L. C. Heizer, East Side rancher and half brother of Rev. William A. Sunday, ran smack into a full grown black bear while walking along a trail of Badger creek in the Lookout mountain district east of the Mount Hood Loop highway last week. The bear had his head stuck into a rotten log, where he was feasting on a nest of ants.

"A fellow fisherman up the trail had a gun," said Mr. Heizer, "and I was tempted to run the bear up a tree, where I could hold him until my friend could arrive. I looked for a club. The cascades of the stream were making so much noise that bruin didn't hear me. Not finding a loose stick I seized two big rocks and approached within four feet of the animal. I struck him on the hind quarters with one of the stones, and he drew his head out of that hole with the most startled snort I ever heard a bear emit. I shied my other stone but missed. The bear, however, was ready for flight. He made for a pine and I was after him, yelling at every jump. Just as he was ready to start climbing, while I had my foot drawn back to accelerate him with a swift kick, another fisher companion, Ed Foust, came around a turn in the trail. The bear saw him, changed his mind and jumped over a bluff, disappearing in the woods. He was a big fellow. I believe he would have weighed 500 pounds."

The leisurely tour of a bear through orchards of the Willow Flat country last week caused a panic among women and children apple pickers of the neighborhood.

The self confidence and tenacity possessed by a 14-inch garter snake, which was discovered Monday trying to swallow a toad as big as a man's hand, was inspiring, according to A. D. Moe.

"A man with the grit and nerve of that snake might go to high places," said Mr. Moe.

Mr. Moe came on the reptile and amphibian on the way to his home. He watched them for some time with interest. The snake had the toad by the nose and was opening his mouth his widest, all to no avail. At intervals the toad would hop, but the snake refused to turn loose. He closed his mouth and hung on.

"I finally decided to free the toad," said Mr. Moe, "but did not harm the snake, for they are good rodent exterminators. No sooner had I left, however, than the snake went right back after his quarry. After loosing the toad a second time I tossed him some distance away, and then the disappointed serpent gave up and disappeared in a rock wall."

Leroy Heizer after commenting the other day on Commodore Dean's experience with a rattlesnake, recalled a story about a snake that bit a man in South Dakota, striking him through his boot top. His widow remarried and her second husband wore the boots and died within an hour after donning them. The fangs of the rattler were found in the boots.

"I think Mrs. Dean should burn those moleskin trousers that the commodore wore to Badger creek," said Mr. Heizer. "I don't mean to infer that any second husband is going to get them, but the commodore, whose thrift is well known, might wear them again."

Judge Derby last week caught the largest Montana Black trout ever landed in this community. The fish, lured with a fly from Sanctuary lakes near Carson, Wash., measured 23 inches and weighed 6½ pounds. The Montana Blacks are rare in the mid-Columbia, being found only in lakes of Skamania county, Washington.

C. C. Anderson, who was with Judge Derby at Sanctuary lakes, hooked a larger trout, but lost him when the giant gave a leap, breaking his hook.

BRAAKMAN GOING TO RIALTO BLOCK

H. S. Braakman will move some time next month to the new store room in the Rialto block, next to the theatre, now being completed by Thomson & McCarty. He will start at once to hold a removal sale at his old quarters in the Gross building, offering reductions on all lines of hardware, paints and wallpapers.

Mr. Braakman declares that his new quarters will enable him to increase his stock.

"I have an ambition to place on the main street of the town one of the best hardware, paint and wallpaper stores in the mid-Columbia."

Telegraph Folk Like Cherries

Dan Carver, local Western Union manager, pleased the office force of Superintendent Cole, of the Seattle division of the telegraph company, when he picked a box of Bing cherries from his back yard and forwarded them to the bunch.

Monday Mr. Carver received a letter from Miss Ruth Tharsen, the superintendent's stenographer, who grew ecstatic in referring to the fruit. She declared they were the first cherries she had had this season, and that they excelled any fruit of the species ever sent to Seattle.

Veterans' Headstones Arrive
