BOX APPLE CROP LARGER THIS YEAR

The following bulletin has just been issued by Maynard A. Child, representative here by U. B. Nye and for which firm F. F. Clark, of Portland, is western representative:

It is evident at this early date that our domestic apple crop can be estimated with any degree of accuracy. Last season was a notable exception; not so, this season. Our feeling, broadly stated, is that total tonnage will exceed that of 1924, but will not be as heavy as that of 1923; quality promises to be excellent. Letters and telegrams from the important producing sections have given us an airplane view of districts which we summarize as follows:

The New England states seem likely to have about the same quantity as last year. Early varieties should be heavier—late varieties slightly lighter.

New York, Hudson River district, is slated now for approximately last year's tonnage; western New York, however, can safely be expected to produce heavier, making a better prospect for the state as a whole. While Virginia will be somewhat lighter than in 1924, Pennsylvania and West Virginia indicate a bigger and better crop. Comparing weeks in 1924, New Jersey should be heavier, Maryland about the same while Delaware seems considerably lighter. Ohio and Michigan promise about the same as last year although the former may exceed this prediction.

The middle western states, as a whole, promise more than a year ago, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri and Arkansas showing substantial gains. Minnesota should be slightly greater, with Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas under the 1924 crop.

Box Apple States—The important state of Washington seems now to show a 30 per cent to 40 per cent increase over last year when frost seriously damaged the crop. Colorado, Utah and Idaho all will have large increases. Oregon, while noticeably lighter in the important Hood River and Mosier districts, shows sufficient gains in Milton-Freewater, McFerdin district and Union county to make the state as a whole stand fairly close to last year's output.

California will produce not over a third of the 1924 crop. Sebastopol and southern California were particularly hard hit by unfavorable weather conditions while in Watsonville district the bloom was uneven and light.

Canada—A considerably larger pack is certain with Nova Scotia and Ontario, the principal factors therein. British Columbia while damaged in the north by the severe winter should make up the loss by bumper conditions in Kelowna, Penticton and Sumnerville sections in the south of the Okanagan valley.

Foreign—United Kingdom: Blossom period warranted anticipation of a large crop but a protracted spell of hot, dry weather, together with ravages of pests has quite altered the situation. It is yet early to state definitely the outcome but it may be safely considered that harvest will be materially reduced from original expectations. The probability, however, is that it will be greater than last year. Pears will be short. Continental Europe: Reports all point to a smaller yield than last year especially with respect to table varieties. The pear crop is practically a failure.

FORESTS ARE FULL OF AUTO TOURISTS

Never have the highland forests of Hood River county been so full of motor campers as this year. Every watered nook along the West Fork and Lake Branch of Hood river has its quota of cars. The majority of the motor visitors are Californians, who have unstinted praise for Oregon forests and cascading waters.

Along the Mount Hood Loop, highway, Oregon's forestry service has arranged numerous inviting camping spots, all equipped with ovens and supplied with ice-cold, pure mountain spring water, hundreds of motorists camp daily. Many carry their bedding and cooking utensils and remain overnight out under the trees and stars. The Mount Hood Loop highway camps in this county are large enough to accommodate 500 automobiles. It is not necessary to secure fire permits from forest ranger stations for building fires in the official camps. However, if tourists expect to enter other points in the Mount Hood national forest, fire permits are necessary.

The Californians visiting here at present in many instances are but repeating motor journeys of former years. They declare they will come again. Oregon's forestry service, they declare, offer the vacationist a much greater variety of scenery, more comforts and an all around better opportunity for enjoying a summertime outing than is available in the southland.

Portland Mory Magnate Weds

Claude S. Jensen, moving picture magnate of Portland, paused here long enough Wednesday evening of last week while en route to Pendleton by automobile, to obtain a marriage license, the bride-to-be being Mrs. Hilda May Blake, of Chicago. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Blake, of Portland. Mr. Jensen is a well known organizer, who formerly presided over the big organ at the Liberty theater in Portland.

An out-of-door wedding on the highway followed at 7 o'clock Wednesday night, the ceremony being performed by Rev. P. Hilgendorf. Mr. and Mrs. Jensen then left for Portland.

Mr. and Mrs. Keates and daughter were en route east by automobile and Mr. Jensen was accompanying them as far as Pendleton, whence he expected to return home. But plans were, apparently, changed.

"But I'll never come to Hood River again to get married," declared Mr. Jensen.

The reason for his remark was the vigilance of Sheriff Edick and City Marshal Hart in searching the wedding car for beverages which they suspected might be intended to toast the bride with at the wedding supper.

Auto Wreckers Have Many Old Cars

B. L. Van Cise, who has established the Hood River Auto Wreckers, has just placed in stock about 400 cars and is prepared to supply parts for all makes of machines. His place of business is located at Twelfth and C streets on the Heights. Mr. Van Cise has just purchased all used parts from the Hood River Garage and Highway Auto Co.

PORTLAND MAY TAKE PART OF MOUNT HOOD

Mount Hood will never be a national park, but Portland or Multnomah county can acquire it—through the influence of the Oregon delegation at Washington—and turn it into a recreation asset as one of the finest city or county parks in the world.

So declared Stephen T. Mather, director of national parks, at a luncheon given by the Portland Chamber of Commerce to Secretary of the Interior Robert Work, Dr. Elwood Mead, director of reclamation, and Mr. Mather.

"Mount Hood never will be taken into the national park system," he said. "There are too many limitations involved."

"Within the area which would have to be included in a national park are vast private timber holdings, some of which are being logged. The Bull Run forest reserve, from which Portland gets its water supply, is also within the area."

"What Portland or Multnomah county should do is to take over a large area of the mountain and develop it into a recreational center."

"Los Angeles has taken over 5,000 acres a long distance from that city and has become obligated to spend $100,000 a year on its development."

"Denver has done the same thing with areas in the Rocky mountains."

"These two cities are reaping great benefits from their undertakings."

MOTOR CAMPS BUILT ALONG LOOP HIGHWAY

Forestry crews have completed building roads into motor camps at Robin Hood, Sherwood Forest and Hood River Meadows on the east side of Mount Hood along the Loop highway. The camps will accommodate 500 automobiles, according to District Forest Ranger Walters. Pure water from mountain springs supply all of the camps. A number of sites are available at Sherwood Forest, one of the most popular places along the Loop road, for those wishing summer homes in the mountains.

A crew of eight forest road workers is now engaged in reopening the old Barlow road which intersects the Loop highway on the southeast side of the mountain. The old road was used by ox-team immigrants in reaching the Willamette valley during the great immigration to the Oregon promised land in the 50s of last century.

STAGE AND SCREEN

Friday and Saturday the Rialto will present Milton Sills, hero of "The Sea Hawk," in "As a Man Desires." Viola Dana will play opposite Mr. Sills. The noted movie is taken from Gene Wright's novel, "Pandora Lo Grotto."

Monday and Tuesday dainty Colleen Moore, of "Hallelujah" fame, will appear at the Rialto in "So Big," an adaptation of Edna Ferber's best seller. "So Big" will be one of the outstanding pictures of any year and for Miss Moore an accomplishment that will carry her to the peaks of stardom.

Wednesday, family night, the Rialto will present "Lady of the Night," featuring Norma Shearer.

Thursday night at the Rialto will be "Let Women Alone," with Pat O'Malley and Wanda Hawley, supported by Walter Henry, Ethel Wales and J. Farrell McDonald.

Newhouse's Certificate Revoked

The five-year teacher's certificate issued to Charles C. Newhouse, May 8, 1923, was revoked last week by J. A. Churchill, state superintendent of public instruction. The revocation followed a hearing before Churchill a week ago on charges filed by E. J. Moore, Lane county superintendent, charging Newhouse with conduct unbecoming a teacher and involving certain young boys. In announcing his action, Churchill declares that the charges brought by Moore were fully sustained.

"The incident upon which the charges were based is said to have taken place while Newhouse was employed in the Eugene schools. At the time, it is said, Newhouse was permitted to resign quietly, and no charges were preferred until after Newhouse had signed a contract as principal at Marcola, Lane county, when the attention of the county superintendent was called to the matter and the charges followed. Members of the Eugene school board attended the hearing in Churchill's office in behalf of Newhouse, although declining to reemploy him in the schools of that city."

COLUMBIA RIVER CLAIMS THREE LIVES

Mrs. W. H. McLean, mother of four, and Lorna, 12, her eldest daughter, were drowned in the Columbia river at Cascade Locks Monday and their bodies were carried over the rapids.

Lorna, bathing from a beach, went out too far and was caught by the swift current. The mother, although she was unable to swim, dashed into the water upon hearing her daughter's cries for help, struggled out into the current, sank, and was not seen again.

The McLeans moved to Cascade Locks a few months ago from Portland. Mr. McLean is employed by the O. W. R. & N. company and did not learn of the death of his wife and daughter until he came home from work Monday night.

The three small McLean children, the eldest of whom is 8, watched their mother and sister drown.

Hanna Pederson, 15, was drowned Sunday night in the Columbia river at Skamania, 12 miles west of Stevenson. While bathing with a group of other young persons, she stepped into a deep hole.

Forest Fire Quickly Controlled

Forest ranger and state fire warden crews quickly brought to control a fire that destroyed the old buildings at the former location of the I. H. Hoes sawmill near Mount Hood. Machinery the plant had just been removed to another location. For a time a large body of green timber was threatened. The fire, it was thought, started from a smoldering sawmill pile.

District Forest Ranger Walters says the local forests are tinder dry, and all rangers and lookout stations are keenly on the alert to catch any fire that may start in its incipency.

Sheep Pasture on Hood

District Forest Ranger Walters was busy Monday counting a herd of sheep brought from Dufur for pasturage on the range on the northeast base of Mount Hood. The herd included an
