Everyone who knows anything about the water system of Hood River is agreed that some very action should be taken by those in authority to secure an increased water supply.

The city council and mayor should appoint a commission of representative citizens to make a thorough survey of every possible source of supply.

CLIFTON PARK STATION IS ATTRACTIVE

Motorists over the Columbia River highway are attracted by the neat, flower bordered service station at the gateway to Hood River valley at the top of Ruthven hill grade.

Clifton Park service station, operated by Mrs. W. L. Clark and her son, Newell, sits at the roadside beneath the cliffs of the Columbia gorge.

One might know at a glance that Clifton Park service station is managed by a woman who loves neat housekeeping.

The service station is characterized not merely by its offering of the usual various things that traveling tourists desire.

Loop Road is Disintegrating

Those who have motored up over the Hood River Loop highway the past week report that the asphalt pavement is disintegrating under the strain of the heavy traffic.

Unless some means is discovered to prevent the "chucking out" of the macadam filler, it is declared, the road will soon not be inviting to motorists.

Many who have recently toured the scenic route declare that the heavy traffic will attract through the summer months will necessitate paving it.
