MUNICIPAL AUTO PARK TO BE CLOSED

Report of C. O. Huelat, custodian of the municipal automobile park, to the city council Monday night showed that receipts for the month of September reached only $380, but little more than half of revenue from the park a year ago for the month of September. The auto park was turned over to Mr. Huelat last year to be operated on a division of receipts. Mr. Huelat, according to the agreement, was to receive the first $1500 and the city the second $1500. Then Mr. Huelat was to receive $800 and the city $800. (The remainder of the revenue, if any had accrued, was to be divided equally.)

Mr. Huelat realized his full $1500 in August and also turned over to the city an approximate $350 for that month.

Because competition of private parks has made the city park a losing venture after the height of the motoring season has passed, the council has decided to close the municipal park.

The council decided to adopt an ordinance that will prevent owners or operators of automobile parks from using public thoroughfares in soliciting patronage of motor tourists.

A group of women met with the council to appeal for a local board of censors for pictures to be shown here. After a conference it was decided to appoint the following committee to meet with the city attorney, E. C. Smith, the judiciary committee of the council and Manager Kolstad in an endeavor to reach some agreement as to the regulation of Hood River exhibits: Rev. C. R. Dolepin, Mrs. J. R. Nickelsen, Mrs. J. W. Ingalls, L. B. Gibson and Victor C. Follenius.

Strawberry Root Weevil (By Leroy Childs)

During the past summer the station has been making some observations relative to the activities of a new pest, the strawberry root weevil. Owing to the fact that the plants have been watched at regular intervals throughout the summer. The results obtained thus far indicate that the bait has great possibilities in materially assisting in controlling this most serious strawberry pest. Practically 100 per cent of the beetles about the baited plants have been destroyed since this application.

The pest has also been under observation at the Western Washington experiment station under the direction of Arthur Frank, who reports very favorably on the matter. Owing to the fact the discovery is relatively new, tests have not been carried on sufficiently long to determine the completeness of control or the advisability of its general use. The pest is the discovery of M. J. Forsell, of Seattle, Wash., formerly a fruit inspector and now a member of the Federal Horticultural Board, who has been working on this subject for several years. Providing the pest is up to preliminary observations, the discovery will be of great assistance to the strawberry industry of this district.

The manufacture of the bait has not been put upon a commercial basis as yet and the costs of application are not definitely known by Mr. Forsell at this time, but he has indicated it will not be excessive and will be low enough so growers can afford to use it.

was not active. Basket stock, chiefly Wealthy, was jobbing from $1-$1.75. Mid-western Jonathans and New York McIntosh were selling slightly above other varieties. Arrivals in barrels continued within the range of $4-$5, lowest price being $2-$2.50 for Ben Davis in St. Louis, and highest, $6-$6.50 for Jonathans in Chicago, and $4.50-$7 for McIntosh in New York City.

Western New York shipping points quoted Wealthy at $1-$1.10 per bushel, R. I. Greenings at $1-$1.25 per barrel and Baldwins for future delivery at $3.50-$3.75. In the Shenandoah and Cumberland valleys, Jonathans and Grimes were selling $5 per barrel. The manufacture of the bait has not been put upon a commercial basis as yet and the costs of application are not definitely known by Mr. Forsell at this time, but he has indicated it will not be excessive and will be low enough so growers can afford to use it.

Canadian prospects have not approached last year's figures. The only province reporting an increase was Ontario, where winter varieties gained 50% over last year, partly through better conditions for development and better control of snail and insect pests. Nova Scotia is estimated to have 1,108,000 barrels this season and Ontario $21,772. Prices in British markets have been fairly high, as the sales included considerable small or poorly colored stock. After deducting about one-fourth for freight charges, and other charges, the net is little different from the price range of home markets.

HORN BROS. MOVING THEIR LUMBER MILL

Horn Bros., who for the past eight years have operated the Standard Lumber Co. in the Oak Grove district, are now engaged in moving their operations to a point in Klickitat county, Washington, between Glimmer and Laurel. They will install a mill of 50,000 feet a day capacity, cutting pine and fir.

"We do not expect to cut over 30,000 feet next year, however," said Joe Horn Tuesday, "but as we get the mill and logging camps into shape, we will increase our cut. We plan on holding our local trade by trucking lumber here across the interstate bridge."

Perfume Makes Little Boy Ill

Lee, the three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd L. French has recovered from the effects of a small phial of perfume, which he drank one day last week. Lee picked the little bottle from a dresser and finding it pleasing to his olfactory senses tried it on his sense of taste. It was so good that he downed it all.

The little boy's mother was unaware of the cause of his illness for some time. He declared that a portion of pumpkin pie had made him sick. He would play a while with his little sister, Julie Belle, and then would lie down a bit, complaining of a pain in his stomach. Finally his insides rebelled, and he gave up the perfume. And it was then that a correct diagnosis was made.

Lee said he was never, never going to drink any more perfume.

BOOKS

"Glimpses of the Moon" is a novel of life. There are readers who rave over the works of Mrs. Wharton. There are others who don't. Anyway, we are not all of one mind. Praise be! Sinclair Lewis in "Babbalanza" has held up to ridicule all rotating handshakers even if they do work for a living; even if they do break commandments on the sly. Over the genus parasite Mrs. Wharton casts a lustrous, silvery spell; nevertheless, her cards are still cards; her snobs are—snobs. They don't change a iota.

"Glimpses of the Moon" is a novel of society today. It is "some" society. But then we must remember the fallibility of the author of this book. If society is what it is portrayed then may heaven have mercy on us. One does not see the hills and valleys of life; only its swamps! Servant girls of the idle rich pouring over the morning papers which tell them of weddings and parties. Better the dinner-pail brigade than these listless wanderers over Europe.

Clara Viobing in "Daily Bread" shocks us with her pictures of misery, hunger and illegitimacy. That screech showed us what society was capable of producing. Today, according to Mrs. Wharton, society is making marriage a loose-jointed convention and trades husbands like horses and talks as if there were no children, with no idea of the great problems of life for which men suffer and die—that is the very judgment of our present social structure.

Economic parasitism is a terrible alternative to socialism. It makes even the decadencies indecent and the proprieties obscene. We touch the bottom of the bog when they confess: "Money, luxury, fashion, pleasure; those were the four corner stones of her existence." To make slavers of charity out of such poor timber is but adding insult to injury. Mrs. Wharton has been eminently successful in letting a bit of moonlight into this decaying society. One question, however, intrudes: Why does society, which is not all ends and fools, shudder at the idea of letting the crowd read "Jurgen" and "Petronius," and "Mille de Maupin" and never lift an eyebrow at the immoralities of our conventional moralities? Because, like our Anglo-Saxon Babbalanza and his wife, a great sacrifice has been made at the altar of Cant!

SURFACING CREWS WILL CLOSE CAMPS

Because of weather conditions on the higher altitudes, where snow is already flying, Doggett & Cooper, Upper Valley contractors engaged in rock surfacing the Cooper Spur laterals, will close their camps at the end of this week. The rock surfacing, being laid under directions of the federal bureau of public roads, will be about 40 per cent complete.

Motorists who have recently journeyed up to Cloud Gap Inn over the new road declare that it will add a new chapter to the book of Oregon's scenic highways. The old toll road to the foot of Ellet glacier passed through heavy timber the entire distance, and at no point were travelers able to obtain panoramic views of the surrounding country.

The new 11-mile lateral road, however, was surveyed to open emplacements where the views are said to be superb. From two points, where turnouts and ample parking spaces have been provided, the motorist will be able to view the Hood River valley and look across the expanse of open country to Mount Adams. The road workers have designated these two points Big and Little Inspiration.

Tillamook Minister Coming

Rev. Simpson Hamrick, who has been stationed at Tillamook, has been appointed to succeed Rev. W. N. Byars as pastor of Asbury Methodist church, Rev. Byars, who is now in charge of the Odell union high school, was appointed to fill the pulpits at Mosier and Cascade Locks.

Rev. Gleiser, pastor at Odell for the past two years, was appointed to the Newberg church. Rev. A. F. Lacey, of Pine Grove, was placed on the pension list.

Rev. Lacey was returned to the Pine Grove church. Rev. John D. Woodfin was appointed to the Odell church.

Val Bearson and Cecil Lafferty are now in charge of weekly Friday evening dances at the Mt. Hood Community hall. The dances are growing more popular each week. A new jazz orchestra from Portland will play for the dance tomorrow evening.
