AN APOLOGY FOR THE GOVERNOR

Now comes Horace Addis as an apologist for Governor Pierce. Mr. Addis wrote the Oregon Journal the other day, in reply to an editorial that paper had printed, as follows:

"That editorial is evidently based on misinformation. It quotes Governor Pierce, in an address at Hood River, as charging the newspapers with partial responsibility for the crime wave, 'because they print the news of crimes.'"

I did not hear the Hood River address, but I have made careful inquiry of a most reliable witness. This person gives a different version of the remarks, and they coincide with what I have heard the governor say of the publication of the details of crime. Governor Pierce spoke of the breakdown of many of the homes, of the disregard of law, and of the publicity given by the press, and sometimes by the movies, of things of a criminal nature. He deplored the prominence given to such things and spoke of the effect on the public mind of the young. He did not say that things of this kind should not be handled as news, but he did point out that there is much else in which most of the public is interested. And he said the newspapers have a duty to educate the taste of the public as to what is the most important news, rather than to cater to the desire for exciting news matter by enlarging on the details of the worst crimes. He pointed to the fact that in many cases the criminal becomes a hero in the mind of a boy or girl, because of the prominence given by the newspapers.

The governor's reference was to the movies fully as much as to the papers. If it is bad policy to exploit such things in the movies, as all thinkers admit, why is it not bad policy to make of the crime news the first page and leading news articles, as practically all the daily and most of the weekly papers do?

The October World's Work refers to a paper in Montana that goes to over 1200 homes in a city of only 1304 homes. That paper, the Livingston Enterprise, is credited with having more than 100 per cent of the families of its home city as subscribers than any other, east or west. Yet it does what Governor Pierce advocates. It makes no mention of arrests, nor does it give details of trials for crime. When a man is convicted it gives a succinct report of the facts in the case. It strives to not publish anything that would make parents uncomfortable.

Crime news is easy to get. It has enough of the unusual and exciting to make the average person read it. Newspapers sometimes get the idea that the public desires this sort of stuff. A paper can be a real newspaper without being a sensational sheet.

This is all Governor Pierce asked of the newspapers. This many of the best, home-loving people of the country are asking of them, and the number of those who believe the newspaper has a mission outside of printing sensational criminal news under glaring headlines is rapidly increasing.

A great many Hood River people heard the address delivered here at the W. C. T. U. convention. If they will recall, it was an impassioned appeal and not at all the speech that Mr. Addis would have us think it. Indeed, it seems to us that it might have been a fine thing if Mr. Addis had been here to deliver the speech for the governor.

It has long been the custom of Governor Pierce to fall to say what he had intended to say. At least his friends are forever making apologies for him. They will tell you that he grows so enthusiastic over his subject that he lets it get away from him.

We suggest to Mr. Addis that he and other friends might do Governor Pierce a kindness were they to keep him off the public platform. If Mr. Addis would have the public gain the import desired, as indicated in his letter above quoted, he should have secured the governor's permission and have delivered the speech himself. Governor Pierce made an awful botch of it.

And Mr. Addis himself would, we believe, have exaggerated conditions had he been picked to make the speech. Newspapers, especially weekly newspapers, are not near as guilty of exploiting crime news as Mr. Addis would have one believe. If Mr. Addis would stick right down to facts, he would spoil his crusade against the newspapers altogether.

We have been resting on past road building exploits here in the mid-Columbia Cascades, thinking our work nearly at an end. In fact, we have just begun. The door of the scenic treasure house has just been opened. The inner chambers of nature's grandeur have not been penetrated. We have just begun to build roads to wonderlands. In five years, ten at the most, we of Hood River will be sending our summer tourists out daily to the pine forested foothills around Mount Adams. The visiting motorist will be able to make this city a base for the summer's vacation, if he will, and fare forth in his car each day to behold new attractions. The great national forest area lying in the triangle made by Adams, St. Helens and Rainier will be his playground. Mount Hood will be made more accessible by side roads and alluring trails. The great Skyline trail will be open.

Hood River truth that time will see a handsome new hotel rearing itself here, a tourist and commercial hotel to meet the demands of increased travel.

Hood River folk have something in store. The Japanese residents of the valley are planning a show place in the city at their new community house, which will rise soon on west Sherman avenue. They will make it as attractive, we predict, as some wonderful garden of their homeland. It will be a new place of beauty along the banks of the Columbia.

The big game will occur at The Dalles tomorrow. Just as every Hood River student and resident wishes, so do we, let Hood River win. But the wishes of The Dalles students and rooters will be just as sincere. We know it will be a good game. Let it not be marred by any unsportsmanlike acts on the part of the students or townfolk of either city.

Have the officers apprehended you for failure to have your automobile lights adjusted? You will find yourself before the law some day, if you have tarried in obeying this new rule, and it will cost you good money. The new law, apparently, is a meritorious one. Obey it, because it is a law of the land and enacted for your safety.

Hood River's representations at the Portland land products exhibits at the International Livestock Exposition were few, but they were of a quality that counts. They let the world know that Hood River is still unsurpassed for apples.

We would like to say a lot of nice things about the beautiful fall weather which lingers with us. But it might snow tomorrow.

The chamber of commerce has appointed a commission to study the water situation. That commission has a real work to perform.

VINCENT & SHANK GET FIRST AWARD

Mrs. W. W. Rodwell and P. L. Manser, judges of apple exhibits made by local stores in celebration of National Apple Week, yesterday awarded prizes as follows: Vincent & Shank, first; Kresse Drug Co., second, and Pacific Power & Light Co., third.

Scarlet Fever (By Frederick D. Stricker, M. D., collaborating epidemiologist of Oregon State Board of Health, in cooperation with the United States Public Health Service).

Why is scarlet fever prevalent in Oregon? Largely because mild cases are not diagnosed and properly isolated. Thirty-six cases were reported for the week ending October 24, 1923.

Why is scarlet fever a dangerous disease of childhood? Because two to four persons out of every 100 infected die from the disease itself and its complications and consequences are even more serious.

Are "scarletina" and "scarlet rash" forms of scarlet fever? Yes. It is through the mild cases that the disease is most often spread.

What ages are most susceptible to scarlet fever? It may be contracted at any age but more than 95 per cent of all cases occur in persons less than 15 years old. Children between five and ten years are most susceptible.

At what time of the year is scarlet fever most prevalent? Epidemics are most prevalent in the fall and winter. How is it spread? By contact with persons ill with the disease or with articles that have been contaminated with the germ. If the germs get into the milk supply a milk-borne epidemic will follow.

How long after the infection do symptoms develop? From one to seven days. What are the first symptoms? Headache, fever, sore throat, vomiting. The rash appears in 24 to 48 hours.

When is scarlet fever communicable? Throughout the entire course of the disease. Completion of the scaling or peeling does not mark the end of the infection period, for the germs are present in the secretion of the throat, nose, ears, kidneys and bowels. What are the secondary effects? Inflammation of the kidneys is a common one. Complications of the ear are numerous, scarlet fever being one of the most common causes of deafness in children.

Is there any protection against scarlet fever? Yes. There is a susceptibility test known as the Dick test. There is also an antitoxin for immunizing the susceptible. How long should scarlet fever be quarantined? Not less than 31 days.

Loop Issue Brings Premium Pierce, Fair & Co., of Portland, were awarded $10,000 six per cent county bond at a premium of 912 Tuesday. Five other bond concerns placed bids on the issue, part of $350,000 available in 1921 for financing the county's portion of expense of constructing the valley trunk of the Mount Hood Loop highway. The proceeds of the $10,000 sale will clean up all indebtedness on the Loop construction. A balance of $30,000 of the authorized issue will be left unused.

Poultry Show Near November 19, 20 and 21 have been set as dates for the Hood River county poultry show. Officers of the show, who held shows last year and the year before, have secured the frame building on Fourth street next to the old city hall for displays. Interest among orchardists, many of whom now have purebred poultry flocks as a side line to fruit growing, indicates that entries will be numerous.

Wesley Club Meets The boys of the Wesley and Wana clubs will meet Tuesday night, November 13 at 7:30 p. m. in the club recreation room at the Astory M. E. church. This is to be a joint session for election of officers and discussion of plans for the winter. All boys wishing to become members are urged to be present.

Firemen to Give Ball Firemen of the city are already preparing for their annual Thanksgiving dance. The ball will be given at the Pythian hall Thanksgiving night. The plans call for the most elaborate party ever given by the fire fighters.

Record Potato Crop Honors for the largest crop and yield of potatoes ever raised on the Nez Perce prairie went to Frank Wright, who harvested 13,000 sacks from a 100-acre field.

The Glacier makes rubber stamps.
