

BARRISTERS GIVE WAY TO BABIES

Babies best barristers might be termed an alternative statement of facts on an incident at the county court house last Friday. It all came about through a conflict in dates of the circuit court and the regular monthly clinic for babies held under auspices of the County Health association. Beives of prominent Portland and local attorneys and mothers and small babies began to arrive simultaneously.

When Judge Wilson mounted the bench he looked from barristers to babies and back again. County Health Nurse King explained the presence of the 15 infants. Following a conference of judge and bar Judge Wilson an-

FRANKTON

The Parent-Teacher meeting was well attended last Friday evening. As usual a good program was well rendered. A number of pupils from Mrs. Bailey's room came out in costume to represent different books. Four boys of Miss Brennan's room represented four young men who had gone to the big city, each having a good position, but when Thanksgiving time came the game of football attracted three of the boys more than the trip home to be with mother. However, by the time the fourth boy read mother's letter, they all said, "We are going home to mother and turkey too." Miss Hettinger interested everyone with her talk on good books, mentioning several different points gathered from each author. A piano duet played by Miss Hettinger and Miss McCamley was enjoyed by all.

WIND RIVER TRIP ALLURING

(By C. Pritchett in Portland Telegram)
A motor trip up Wind River valley from Carson, Wash., offers much on a cool, crisp autumn day. Although its beautiful mountain sides carry scars of recent forest fires, it still holds fast the splendor of its ever flowing stream, the Wind river, winding its way down through the valley of the Mt. St. Helens and Mt. Adams region.

Through the years of constant wearing, it has imbedded itself deep into the lava and volcanic strata, which now offers a canyon with glorifying beauty.

A suspended bridge will be found over the most spectacular part of the canyon, estimated to be 254 feet long, while the crevice reaches a depth of 250 feet, its perpendicular walls sleeping beneath soft colors blending from the brownish lava beds to the topmost evergreen.

Those seeking recreation may entertain themselves by scaling its walls or a hike would be most inviting into the forest that borders its sides, all of which will help to make one's outing enjoyable to its fullest extent.

H. R. CREAMERY NOTES

Chester L. Mulkey, a leader in the Oregon Jersey Cattle association, has been here visiting the Hood River creamery and calling on local dairymen. Mr. Mulkey, who also visited the Trout Lake, Wash., section, placing Jersey horns there for herd heads, played a prominent part in establishing the dairy business in this county.

Prof. Hoberg and two classes visited the creamery last week to study the system of refrigeration used and the power methods of manufacturing butter and making ice cream.

MORTENSEN BESTS BURNS WITH EASE

Fred Mortensen, who last Wednesday night made easy work out of Frankie Burns, of Detroit, Mich., in a finish bout here, will meet Ted Thye, champion light heavy weight, again soon. Thye in the past six weeks had met both the contestants and had thrown both in finish matches, but the supporters of both men expressed dissatisfaction with the bouts. There was a lack of decisiveness about the Thye-Mortensen bout, staged here, because of the fact that Mortensen, after he had thrown Thye in 55 minutes of gruelling wrestling, in the second try was thrown from the mat against a radiator, striking his head. After his injury Thye easily threw him twice in succession.

A big house witnessed last week's match, which was refereed by Bill McGuire, who made a name for himself on the mat while in the navy. Mortensen threw Burns for the first fall in 37 minutes. The big Michigan wrestler times had the local man in tight places, but Mortensen, whose defensive wrestling has astonished spectators, broke the holds. Burns rubbed Mortensen's nose and whacked his head against the floor. It apparently annoyed the big Dane, for he tore loose from holds and in less time than it takes to tell it had the big Michigan bone crusher pinned with a head scissor.

It took 12 minutes for Mortensen to get the second fall with a body scissors and a double wristlock.

After the bout Mortensen stated that he would prefer to meet the champion in Hood River, and plans of his supporters call for another bout here. Because of the keen interest aroused it is indicated that the coming match will draw a greater attendance than the 700 who saw the recent Thye-Mortensen bout here.

A preliminary that created considerable attention was staged by two grade school boys, Elmer Olson and John Lindsay. While Olson was the smaller he pinned Lindsay for two falls in quick succession.

George Lester, local wrestler and boxer, gave an exhibition of physical culture.

Apple Maturity Terms

The apple maturity terms defined below are those used by the Food Products Inspection Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture in writing certificates of quality and condition on apple shipments, both in the terminal and receiving markets and at shipping point in cooperation with the various states.

Hard, meaning mature but with flesh tenacious (or still tough) and of starchy flavor.

Firm, meaning with flesh somewhat tenacious or becoming crisp, with no starchy flavor, except in Delicious.

Ripe, meaning with flesh crisp or slightly mealy, except that in apples of Gano, Ben Davis, Rome and Delicious type, the flesh may be mealy. Apples at prime for consumption.

Dead Ripe, meaning quite mealy or

D. G. JACKSON HAS RECORD POTATO CROP

D. G. Jackson grew the record crop of potatoes in this county this season. From a square rod Mr. Jackson harvested 300 pounds of tubers which graded number ones. Each of the 36 hills yielded 14 to 24 potatoes of marketable size. The original seed came from Ireland, and Mr. Jackson year before last was given a single tuber. He planted it in his rose garden, where a white rose bush had succumbed. The crop of this year was planted from the seed secured from the single tuber. "I named the potatoes the White Irish Rose," said Mr. Jackson, "for I did not know what the real name was." At the rate of production on the small plot, Mr. Jackson had planted an acre of the tubers would have harvested 5,700 pounds of potatoes. At the current market price, his acre of spuds would have netted him $1,450.

Mrs. W. H. Skene and daughter, Miss Jean, left Saturday for New York to meet her son, Donald Skene, who called Tuesday of last week that he would sail at once from England to spend a two week's vacation in New York city. Mr. Skene is engaged as a representative of the Chicago Tribune in England and continental Europe. He is well known in Oregon, having formerly been a member of the staff of the Oregonian.
