BUY IN HOOD RIVER

Community pride, community ambitions, community spirit—All these and more are integral parts of real community progress.

Bound up in a single term—Buy in Hood River—Patrons Local Stores—are all of these essentials to real advancement of this city.

"Buy in Hood River" then, has been adopted as the slogan for a bigger, better district, a community that will fill its citizens with pride and a confidence that they are living in one of the finest places in the state, or yes, the country.

"Buy in Hood River" has back of it not only the merchants of this section, but the banks, the industries, and a great number of public spirited individuals who sense the need for promoting the interests of Hood River as a buying center for the people of the whole community.

The people of Hood River who spend their money right in their own section show that they have pride in their district, confidence in it and it has been desired to help in its advancement.

"Buy in Hood River" is not a selfish slogan coined by the merchants for the benefit of the merchants. It is a call to service for the community.

Money spent in Hood River helps in the progress of Hood River.

Community prosperity is a real asset for every community. From it comes community contentment.

Merchants of Hood River serving the people of the city and valley, know that their business depends upon establishing a reputation for fair dealing, for honesty and reliability.

The goods they carry in stock represent thousands of dollars invested in order that they may be ready to meet the needs of the buying public.

Practically everything needed for the ordinary requirements or the luxuries of life can be found in the stores of this city.

You pay no more for goods here than you would pay elsewhere, or if you ordered by mail and waited for a delivery. And local business men know that their prices are right.

For every dollar you spend in a Hood River store—whether it be for groceries, for dry goods, for shoes, wearing apparel, millinery, auto accessories, or something else—comes a distinct profit for every resident of the city and valley.

The money helps to take care of the merchants' payroll. It helps to pay taxes, which provide schools, civic government and other needs. It helps to pay rent and other items which have a direct bearing upon community prosperity.

Community dollars should be spent at home.

"Buy in Hood River" aims to provide better service than ever before for local citizens.

There is a part that every resident of this community can plan to establish a city creed which will have written large upon it: Buy in Hood River.

THE OREGONIAN IS 75

Tomorrow the Oregonian will celebrate its 75th jubilee birthday anniversary. It will be an occasion to be proudly, and with dignity, observed by the staff of that great paper.

The files of the Oregonian form a compendium of the history of the Oregon country. More than this, the columns of the daily issues for 75 years reflect the spirit of the times throughout the world.

What could be more interesting to the student, or even those merely curious, than the files of the Oregonian these past 75 years?

The Oregonian was founded on the labors and vision of the late Henry L. Pittock. It began in a small way and through progressing steadily, a part and parcel of Oregon development, but always in the vanguard.

Much of the success of the paper must be laid to the canny business sense of Mr. Pittock, his devotion to his task and his integrity.

The Oregonian, as a newspaper with force reaching to the four corners of the nation, was developed under editorship of the late Harvey W. Scott. This man, reared and educated in the Oregon country, a student of the old Pacific University at Forest Grove, was a brilliant thinker, who left an impress throughout the nation.

He expressed his forceful thoughts on politics, religion and economic problems, and the Oregonian forged to the top of the list of American newspapers.

And today, although the founders have passed on, it remains one of the very foremost American journals. Edgar B. Piper, its editor; C. A. Morden, its manager; E. P. Hopwood, in charge of circulation, and W. J. Hoffmann, advertising manager, all of these men are recognized nationally as leaders in their profession. Their devotion to the task of issuing one of the nation's greatest newspapers and of maintaining a front rank standard is evidenced every day.

The Oregonian has become a Pacific Northwest institution. On its executives rests a great responsibility. How many families in Portland and tributary communities are influenced by it daily? They run into the thousands. But its conservative Americanism has never failed. The Pacific Northwest can well be proud of the Oregonian and join wholeheartedly in tomorrow's celebration.

KEEP YOUR CAR UNDER CONTROL

A moment's thoughtlessness, and a little life snapped out in an automobile wreck! A family was left saddened Sunday after a fatal accident on the Columbia River highway just east of here.

Because of the human element, motor travel is hazardous, or should be considered so, at all times. The hazard increases with the advent of winter, when road surfaces have become slippery from rain or frost.

The Oregon Automobile Association is now engaged in a campaign to educate the motor public toward more careful driving during winter months.

If you find it necessary to stop your automobile for repairs, get every wheel off the paving. Certainly it may not be convenient under some circumstances to remove your car entirely from the road's surface, but it is your duty. It may seem trivial, but life may depend on your giving traffic a clear road.

Get off the pavement, if you are going to stop your automobile. Do not try to travel in a hurry during the wet season. Keep your automobile ever under control. Let's cut down the list of casualties from motor accidents.

ON GOING HOME

Christmas for the editor will begin today. He's going home for a holiday vacation, going back to the old home place and live over for a few weeks his childhood, watching his own children passing happy days under the tutelage of his mother down on a farm in Tennessee.

It will be the first Christmas he has missed spending in Hood River for 12 years.

What one it doesn't feel the tug of Christmas to go back and become a boy or girl again and await old Santa Claus as in the days of long ago? And the editor knows that it will be a yuletide season this year of much happiness for him. And he hopes that the great family day may be a most merry one for all the readers and friends of the Glacier in the mid-Columbia country.

JUDGE BENNETT

Oregon lost a distinguished citizen in the passing of Judge A. S. Bennett, of The Dalles. He was a first citizen and a leader in his profession, having been elevated to the Oregon supreme court. He was an old fashioned, honest, hard working, brilliant lawyer.

He was a fighter and liked nothing better than to give of his experience and energy in behalf of the under dog. Judge Bennett was a lifelong Democrat, from conviction and not an opportunist. He carried the banners of his party with dignity and won the respect of the opposition. It was fitting that his home town drop business during the hour of his funeral and join with bench and bar of the state in doing him honor.

The big nations of Europe have taken a step toward international peace in signing the Locarno treaty. But will ever the diverse peoples of the old globe all actually cease their warfare and strife at once? It is not long before Christmas. Will the North African, Druse and Chinese combats cease in time for Peace on Earth every where?

For West Side folk the best winter time thoroughfare into the city, that is, if it were put in good condition, crosses Paradise farm and enters town over Sherman avenue. County and city officials should cooperate in bettering this entrance to town.

There's treachery about the elements at this season. Whether you be a motorist or a sailor on storm-tossed seas, it will stand you in good stead to be careful.

Sure, it rains in Oregon, but for a real shower, you'll have to go to Florida. Wonder if it'll drown the arid of real estates?

Smallpox

(By Frederick D. Stricker, M. D., collaborating epidemiologist of Oregon State Board of Health, in cooperation with the United States Public Health Service.)

Why is smallpox increased during the past few years? The mild form of the disease has led people to neglect vaccination. Now that it is increasing in virulence people are becoming alarmed.

How is it transmitted? By direct contact with a smallpox case or with any person or article coming in contact with him.

What are the first symptoms? Sudden and severe fever, headache, headache and vomiting, followed after 48 hours by an eruption.

How long after exposure do symptoms appear? Usually two weeks. At what stage is smallpox "catching"? Any time during the progress of the disease.

Does smallpox resemble chickenpox? The mild cases may, but there are points of difference clear to the expert. All cases should be reported to your physician or health officer.

What should a person exposed to smallpox do? Be vaccinated or quarantined for at least 16 days.

How long after exposure is vaccination effective? If vaccinated within a day or two an individual stands a good chance of escaping the disease entirely.

If seven or eight days elapse vaccination may modify the disease if it does not prevent it.

Why do some states and countries have no smallpox? Because they have strict laws requiring vaccination.

How often should one be vaccinated? Every five to seven years.

Are there any bad effects from vaccination? With strict cleanliness there are no bad effects. The chances of infection from the common pin scratch are many times greater.

Can smallpox be stamped out of Oregon? Yes. By state-wide vaccination.
