CRIME

Public opinion is the climate in which our lives bear fruit in action. Public opinion is to the thinking and morals of a community what a composite photograph is to their personal appearances. In such a photograph all the idiosyncrasies of individual feature or expression are faithfully recorded and modify the final picture. So in public opinion what we inwardly feel and secretly purpose are faithfully reported. No man can adequately conceal that which is in him. That composite moral judgment of a community is the atmosphere, light and warmth enfolding every one of us. It largely determines the character of our actions. The question of crime is not academic. It is real, immediate, urgent. Crime continues. Life and property are not all secure from its attacks. What is crime, anyway? It is any violent and hurtful interference with personal or social rights and happiness. It is an act specified as contrary to law and thus makes the offender liable to legal punishment. Crime is seizing a personal advantage out of the general good. Who can protect himself wholly outside of the ruling ideas of his age and develop his life from his personal resources alone? If it is true that we live and move and have our being in the public opinion or composite moral judgment of the time and society in which we live then every one of us is responsible to the extent of our personal values for the nature of that final expression of social character. We must then keep ourselves in profound and intimate loyalty to the recognized standards of righteousness.

Crime, we repeat, is siezing a personal advantage out of the general good. What follows? If the respectable merchant stands in with the authorities so that he uses the sidewalks unlawfully, let him not complain if a push cart peddler makes a nuisance of himself. They are brothers in crime against the community. The man who is sharp in business transactions is making it so much easier for the forger, the counterfeiter and common thief. The man who keeps a well stocked sideboard in his house has helped to create a climate in which the saloon thrives and the common drunkard is legitimate fruit. These and their brethern in every phase of unrighteousness are colaborers, partners in the common business of snatching a private advantage out of the common good. They are criminals and helping to make criminals. Every act contrary to the common good devitalizes the moral atmosphere which all must breathe and by so much lowers the moral vitality of every member of the community.

The most important single social unit is the home. The training of children is a well worn theme, but it will never be worn out so long as new generations come upon the scene of action. The gambling mania is abroad. One finds it in Wall street and in the lanes of a country village. The mothers in the parlor—bridge parties in which the members play for "keeps"—the fathers in the club, the hobos in the box cars, the college boys on the athletic field, the children at their play, are playing for keeps. This is a tropical climate for crime. One of the most notorious professional criminals leaves his testimony against respectable society, and one in reading it hardly knows to whom the respectability applies.

In such a malarial atmosphere we may expect a madness among the people to get something for nothing. Every lover of God and men must set himself reverently and with purpose to the task of child conservation. Our material resources will take care of themselves if we train a generation of men and women well grounded in the principles of true, righteous citizenship. The strict, impartial and swift administration of justice to the criminal doubtless will have something to do with the prevention of crime. The fear of the law probably keeps many a weak conscience in awe. But the conviction is steadily gaining among thoughtful people the world over that the best results in human culture will ever come by working our nature through its highest faculties, aroused to spontaneous joyful activity, and not by compelling men to walk in paths of virtue which they would never choose, and to wear a respectable character as they wear their coat instead of shirt sleeves on the street. The bit and the bridle for the horse, but inspiration for the human soul.

WHY MORE?

Arthur Train, a writer of repute on legal matters, gives the following startling facts:

"During a recent five year period there were passed over 62,000 laws, state and federal, to interpret which required 65,000 decisions of courts of last resort, filling 630 volumes: our legislative harvest is upward of 15,000 statutes per annum."

All right, Arthur dear, but we wonder if you knew anything about our latest lighting law? It's simply great on wet nights.

The New Year will be ushered in with many watch-night parties in the city and valley. Among them will be the Knights of Pythias Band dance and a social affair at the Pine Grove Grange hall, at the latter of which dancing, cards and other social entertainment will watch the old year out and the new year in.

The illumination of the big tree at the intersection of Oak and Third streets, with its colored lights, together with the line of small trees each side of the street at the curbs, gives a Christmas cheer to holiday shoppers and a pleasing anticipation of the coming yuletide.

Every effort is being made to entertain the kiddies Christmas morning at the Rialto theatre and the Elks club, and it is hoped that every child in the city will be given a Merry Christmas.

OREGON CONGRESSMEN ENDORSE SEAL SALE

Stanfield, Sinnott, Hawley, and Crumpacker Approve Work Supported by Seals.

"The anti-tuberculosis movement has always had my unqualified support. I believe that conducting the Sale of Christmas Seals to raise funds for combating this disease (tuberculosis) is a most valuable public service and should by all means be encouraged. Rest assured that I shall be more than glad to do anything I can to further the valuable work."

HON. M. E. CRUMPACKER,
U. S. Representative from Oregon.

"I am glad to most heartily join in wishing the utmost success in the work of those engaged in the anti-tuberculosis campaign."

HON. ROBT. N. STANFIELD,
U. S. Senator from Oregon.

"In a time when we are thinking of making a season especially joyful to those of our immediate family and friends, the contributions to the anti-tuberculosis campaign is an instance of kindly good will toward a number of our fellow citizens who have cause for uneasy apprehension, and the fact that people are mindful of them will help them as much, I believe, as the money will help them. I cordially commend the sale of Christmas Seals."

HON. WILLIS C. HAWLEY,
U. S. Representative from Oregon.

"I wish to cordially endorse the coming anti-tuberculosis campaign in Oregon, through the sale of Christmas Seals. I note with pleasure the report of the great decrease in the death rate from tuberculosis in our home state, during the past fourteen years, and believe that this is due in a large measure to the money derived from the sale of Christmas Seals.

"The Christmas Seal campaign is a most worthy one and I consider it a distinct privilege to be able to add my testimony to the great number who hold a like opinion."

HON. N. J. SINNOTT,
U. S. Representative from Oregon.

The Mint's Sidelines

The United States mints make other objects besides coins. All of the medals for the army and navy are turned out by the mints. Medals of all the Presidents, the Secretaries of the Treasury, the Directors of the Mints, have been designed and executed by the mints. Recently the mints inaugurated the practice of making medals of the Under Secretaries of the Treasury. Congress has authorized the mint to make up 40,000 medals to commemorate the arrival of the first shipload of Norse immigrants on board the sloop Restaur Ationen, which is to be celebrated at the Norse-American Centennial in Minnesota next summer.

At the last session of Congress there was a flood of bills seeking to have commemorative half dollars minted. The prior session authorized the minting of the Huguenot half dollars and of 5,000,000 half dollars to signalize the start of work on the Stone Mountain carving, which will serve as a monument to the valor of the soldiers of the South. On the Federal coins appear Generals Lee and Jackson, the two leaders of the Confederate forces in the Civil War.

A Flood of Coins

With the 150th anniversary of the great battles of the American revolution approaching, bills were passed last winter to issue coins commemorating the stand of the minutemen at Lexington and Concord and the battle of the Green Mountain patriots at Bennington in Vermont. Proposals were made to pay tribute in a similar way to the battle of Bunker Hill, the victory at Yorktown and other events American history, such as the 200th anniversary of the founding of Stoughton, Mass., and the 50th anniversary of the admission of California to the Union.

Fearing that the growth of this practice would open the way to counterfeiting and make the protection of the integrity of the coins more difficult, Secretary Mellon openly opposed the creation of these special coins, but was not entirely successful in his efforts. He insisted that the practice introduced confusion into our system of coinage, brought about an unnecessary expense and satisfied a very limited demand because the public generally has never shown a special liking to the commemorative coins.

However, Congress felt that these great events were worthy of commemoration and authorized the coins—all of which are to be sold at a premium so that the promoters of these events may raise funds by this extra charge to defray part of the expense attached. The records of the Treasury show that the special coins, as a general rule, are seldom absorbed in circulation. The Monroe coin issue was a dismal failure—$17,000 of the 274,000 struck off were turned back to the Treasury for melting up — Journal American Bankers Association.
