

THE RUSSIAN LION IS COMING MONDAY

In the circle above is shown Al Karasick, present holder of the world championship title among light heavy-weight wrestlers. Fred Mortensen, Hood River's durable Dane, will attempt to take the belt at a match here next Monday night at the Rialto theatre. At the side of Karasick is Ted Thye, of Portland, loser of the title last week.

To the left—This is Al Brown, of Minnesota, who will meet Prof. Takahashi, Japanese master of the art, in a jiu jitsu wrestling bout Monday night.

HOPE SAID TO LIE IN COOPERATION

Only in cooperative marketing, and not in tariff juggling or federal handling of crop surpluses, lies solution of the farmers' problems, the National Council of Farmers' Cooperative Marketing associations was told last week by its chairman, Robert W. Bingham, of Louisville.

The council, in annual session while committees of congress were debating various farm relief proposals, heard Mr. Bingham appeal for a thorough trial of cooperative marketing by growers, with government support but not interference.

Relating that the joint marketing movement had reached its present stage only after a long fight, Mr. Bingham declared the leader of the movement in this country "now sits in the White House, and we who have dreamed and hoped for this day—we must now follow that leader."

The most important development in cooperative marketing during the year, he said, was the unreserved recognition of the movement by President Coolidge and Secretary Jardine. We are just at the threshold of the real accomplishments of cooperative marketing, he added, and we are learning from our failures to make our new efforts promise great success. Commenting on demands from the corn and wheat belts for government controlled export corporations and re-exportation of the tariff, the speaker declared that Canadian wheat growers, selling three-fourths of their crop in the world market, with no government surplus corporation or tariff to help, were receiving greater returns than were American growers.

The Canadian are organized, he said, only a small part of our growers has learned organization. It is not the tariff which counts, it is the organization which can enable the farmers of this country to get the benefit of their own good wheat, either in the face of a tariff or in the absence of a tariff.

K. of P. Visitors' Night

Last Tuesday evening Waucoma Lodge No. 30, Knights of Pythias, entertained visitors from Cascade Locks, The Dalles, Wasco and Athena. A lodge deputy census was called by District Deputy Meyer and it was decided to hold an entry spring convention in District No. 7 at Cascade Locks Thursday evening, February 25. A baked salmon banquet will be served at 8 o'clock and the session will be devoted to business and visiting. A good outside speaker is expected to give the main address. There will be no competitive team work at this convention. The Hood River band has been invited to furnish the music.

Any member desiring to bring any question concerning the good of the order before the convention will have an opportunity to do so at this time.

He was one of the soloists at the annual Christmas concert given by Reed College at the public auditorium; he gave a concert at Eugene recently and was heard in recital at the Mallory hotel a few weeks ago. At Mrs. Bohlman's musicale he will sing two groups of songs.

NEW STAR TO BE UNVEILED SATURDAY

With formal ceremony the new Star automobile, just received by the Twin Peaks Auto Co., will be unveiled at the show rooms of the mid-Columbia distributing agency Saturday evening. At 8:30 o'clock the drapery will be lifted, disclosing the handsome model of the staunch new Star, declared one of the most sensational automobile values ever offered the public. Although a car of beautiful lines, it is marked by performance. There is a rugged substantiality about all the mechanism of the Star.

The management of the Twin Peaks Auto Co., which during the past several months has set pace for distribution of the Stars that has put it in the vanguard, has announced its intention of making Saturday evening a real red letter event in the history of mid-Columbia motordom. The general public has been extended a cordial invitation to be present for the unveiling.

Before and after the formal ceremony refreshments will be served. One of the best orchestras to be obtained will be present to render dance music. The big show room will be polished and ready for those who like to trip the light fantastic. Other features of entertainment will be provided.

"We want everybody to come and join us Saturday evening," said Mr. Rife, "for we believe they will be interested in the new Star. We want them to come and enjoy themselves. The welcome to everyone will be most cordial."

MERRY MORAINES

(By Will S. Bates)
No Depression Here
Oh, isn't it enchanting;
Isn't it Deee-licious;
Bobbing down the mountain side
In the winter time;
N' throwing nice wet snowballs
To pass the time away;
While bobbing down the Mount Hood's slopes, (here they struck a stump)
You'll oft hear lovers say:
"Oh, wond'ra let me kiss you; won't you let me love?
Oh wond'ra let me call ya my little turtle dove?
Say that you'll be true, dear;
Say that you'll be mine,
N'tomorrow night I'll meetcha
When the clock strikes 8:50 p. x."

Climb Attic Conditions, Mebbe

An esteemed daily contemporary publishes an account of a lady of Spain who has recently given birth at the age of 68, to her 29th child. Coming in this class, almost on the heels of the report of the celebration of his 150th birthday by a pastor of Constantinople, we are forced to marvel at the achievements of modern science. What a couple they would have made!

Oh Huh

I dearly love the singin' bird,
An' little buzzin' bee,
But deader far than all the world
Is thy sweet voice to me.
Oh, very deep is daddy's well
And deeper is the sea,
But deeper in my bosom
Is the love I bear for thee.
Then smile on me,
Dear Angelina, and make my heart
feel light;
Chain up that awful bow bow pup,
N' I'll come a courtin' Sunday night.

Bridge of Gods Work Delayed

Twenty men from Portland have arrived in Stevenson and Cascade Locks to work on the Bridge of the Gods, which is being constructed across the Columbia river, but owing to some technicality in regard to the O.-W. R.
& N. railroad land the work on the Oregon side of the river is being temporarily held up. The cement pier on the Oregon side, which was built about two years ago, will be greatly enlarged
as a result of the change in the plans.

Whooping Cough

(By Frederick D. Stricker, M. D., collaborating epidemiologist of Oregon State Board of Health, in cooperation with the United States Public Health Service).

Whooping cough ranks third in fatalities among the communicable diseases of early childhood. This statement is made as a refutation of the prevalent belief that whooping cough is a disease of mild character and of little importance. Scarlet fever, has resulted in less than half as many fatalities as whooping cough in the state of Oregon during the last ten years. Not only is whooping cough serious in itself but not infrequently pulmonary tuberculosis follows in its wake.

Whooping cough is prevented with the greatest difficulty. Typhoid fever, smallpox, diphtheria and scarlet fever have been conquered and measures are available for their complete control.

We know that whooping cough is caused by a definite germ and we know how it spreads. But just as long as parents keep on thinking that the disease is a mild disorder and hence maintain indifference to the efforts of health officials to check its spread, just so long will epidemics continue to exact their toll of young lives. Another reason for lack of control is that often the disease is not recognized, for the well known "whoop" may not occur until a week or even two weeks after the onset. In the meantime the child is spreading the infection all over the neighborhood, for it is during this period that the disease is most contagious. This fact emphasizes the necessity for keeping a child, suffering with what may seem to be just an ordinary cold, at home and away from other children. A cold may be the first sign of whooping cough or it may mark the beginning of any one of several infectious diseases.

Whooping cough is spread only through contact with the fresh secretions of the nose and mouth of another person suffering with the disease.

The prevention of whooping cough consists in keeping all children with colds away from other children. This is a matter solely within the control of parents. Take precautions with your child and insist on your neighbor doing likewise. It is a state law that you report all cases of whooping cough to the health officer.

A vaccine has been developed; while it seems to help little in preventing the disease, it is of considerable value in reducing the severity of the disease.

Don't trifle with whooping cough but give it expert care.
