MAYOR NAMES CITY OFFICERS

SEVERAL APPOINTMENTS OMITTED

Recent Incidents and Personnel of Committees for 1926 Indicate Lack of Unanimity for Year

At the meeting of the city council Monday night Mayor Bennett made a partial appointment of city officers for 1926. Appointees, all renamed, were as follows: E. C. Smith, city attorney; W. E. Hart, marshal; Dr. J. Edgington, health officer, and Geo. Y. Morrison, traffic officer.

The personnel of council committees for 1926 will be: Judiciary, Stranahan, Franz and Richards; Finance, Richards, Young and Sonnichsen; streets and public property, Young, Smith and Sonnichsen; fire and water, Smithson, Young and Sonnichsen; health, Franz Stranahan and Richards, and police, Sonnichsen, Franz and Stranahan.

Recent incidents in connection with appointments by Mayor Bennett and the personnel of the new committees indicates to the initiated, it is said, that there is a lack of unanimity in the council this year. At the first January meeting Mayor Bennett and Councilman Young had announced a general new slate in the interest, it was stated, of economy. The head of City Marshal Hart was in danger for a time, and the resignation of City Water Superintendent Clark, who is also street commissioner and city engineer, was called for. Indeed, Mr. Clark's resignation, though the council as a whole did not agree with the program, apparently, and the resignation was not accepted.

While no announcement was made Monday night, it is now proposed to keep Mr. Clark in office without reappointment—kind of an ouster. Mr. Young was made chairman of the street committee, in order that he might supervise the street commissioner. Other members of the council, however, do not express themselves as entirely pleased with the way matters are shaping up, and it is said that street work, before any work is started, must have council authorization.

Indeed, there is an appearance that city council meetings are getting to be the merry events they were some 15 years ago. Perhaps citizens will begin to take a greater interest in municipal affairs and it may come about that a greater attention to individual citizens may be noted at the semi-monthly gatherings of the city fathers.

Highlights Monday night petitioned the appointment of Jack Neill as night watchman for the section. Another petition had already been filed asking the reappointment of E. J. Shutz.

Ben E. Nebbett presented an application for lease of the municipal auto park for three years. He proposed to construct new buildings and make other improvements. His offer would allow the city 30 per cent of the revenue for the first year, 32 1/2 per cent for the second year and 37 1/2 per cent for the third year. Mr. Nebbett would ask for reimbursement for the buildings even constructed. His application was filed with other tenders of citizens who wish to operate the auto camp. Mr. Nebbett, who has been with the M. H. S. company for some time, came here from Pasco, where he was engaged in mercantile business. He presented a letter of strong recommendation from the Pasco Chamber of Commerce.

Fry Dinsmore and others of the Oak Grove district, on report of the fire and water committee, were granted permission to cut a maximum of 20 cedar trees on property around the Tucker spring. A cost of 75 cents per tree will be assessed.

A letter to Fire Marshal Morgan from State Fire Marshal W. M. Moore was read. The state official commended the local fire department for keeping the fire loss down here the past year.

The tanks will be constructed here. Crews of welders and riveters will come from Portland. Buildings for housing the various petroleum parts sold by the Union company and offices will be erected on the grounds. The gasoline will be pumped from the rail tracks and thence fed to tank trucks by gravity. Mr. Tostevin says it is the aim of the company to put the plant in charge of some young man who is known in Hood River.

Mr. Tostevin was a former Hood River resident. He is a brother of N. Y. Tostevin. The Union Oil Co. is the second largest distributor of petroleum parts in Oregon.

The oil company secured the site for the new plant through the agency of C. N. Ravlin.

KARASICK, TAKAHASHI WRESTLING WINNERS

Fred Mortensen, Hood River's Durable Dane, lost in a finish wrestling bout Monday night to Al Karasick, the Russian lion, of Portland. It was a fluke, however. Each of the wrestlers had a fall. Karasick took the first in 31 minutes with his famous headlock. Mortensen put the Russian on the mat in 10 minutes in the second try with a head scissor and an arm lock. The two men had gone at it hammer and tongs in the third bout. Blood was flowing from Mortensen's right eye. The Russian, too, was groggy. Mortensen was on the offensive. He apparently had the visitor groggy. Referee Henry Jones, of Provo, Utah, had just stopped the men and announced: "I will not longer try to keep these men from dirty wrestling. I try to stop them and they won't wrestle clean."

The Russian went into the ropes facing the audience. Mortensen on his back. Instead of waiting until the referee had broken Karasick's hold, Mortensen pulled backward. Karasick fell on top of him and both of his shoulders touched the mat. Karasick's elbow had been planted in the Dane's stomach, knocking the wind out of him. The referee gave the bout to Karasick. The audience was stunned, not believing the match was over. It was inconceivable to them that the Durable Dane allowed himself to be led into such a trap. The last bout last 11 minutes.

Jones and George Lester, local boy, furnished the one fall preliminary. Jones took it easily in 18 minutes with the airplane spin.

A feature event of the evening was staged by Prof. Takahashi, Japanese jiu jitsu exponent of Seattle. The Japanese, without tiring himself, took two falls from Al Brown, of Minnesota. A. LaChapelle was referee for the first two matches.

The audience witnessing the bout was a record one for Hood River. More than 100 Japanese ranchers were in the Hilda theatre to see their countryman down Brown. The Karasick-Mortensen match attracted wrestling fans from all mid-Columbia points.

Prof. Takahashi was challenged by Jones who stated that he had been accustomed to jiu jitsu wrestling while residing for 18 months in Honolulu.

H. Thorsen, Seattle lecturer on diet and physical culture, who was the Apple City's master of ceremonies Monday, took the stage after the preliminary and issued a challenge to the world for a wrestling match. He proved his strength by taking a huge iron bar and tying it into knots as though it had been a ribbon.

For variety and action, no Oregon bout, according to fans who have followed the game, was ever more interesting than that of Monday night. Long after the theatre was emptied, men gathered in knots on street corners, holding post-mortem discussions. They were at it from early until late Tuesday.

Karasick has the knack of gaining the enmity of the crowd from the start. He studiously shows his offense at "books." His face work is as good as his wrestling action.

The main event Monday evening was an admixture of a slapping match, wrestling and an oldtime loggers' free for all. The audience certainly got its money's worth.

Everyone expressed delight with the presentation of Prof. Takahashi. The Japanese champion was also pleased with Hood River. He said he would like to see the city and would like to return here and put on a fast bout.

"I'll get an opponent who knows the game well," said Prof. Takahashi, "and we will give the fans something sensational. After we have finished with the real thing, we'll put on the various holds in slow motion."

Mortensen finished the bout Monday night a victor in the eyes of the Hood River audience. He was cleaner than his opponent, and frequently gave the Russian a chance to come back for the even break. Never was a rougher wrestler than Karasick. He was up to some kind of rough, punishing stunt constantly. Referee Jones frequently called him for his dirty work. Mortensen was rougher than in any former match, fighting the devil with fire, he said.

ASSOCIATION MEM- BERS GET CHECKS

The Apple Growers Association last week forwarded to its members checks aggregating $250,000. It was the cooperative concern's second cash distribution for the season, a total of $325,000 having been disbursed just before the Christmas holidays. The January melon represented 20 cents per box on apples and 50 cents on d'Anjou, Winter Nellis and Buere Easter pears. The association announced that all pools on Comice and Bosc pears and King apples, along with eight miscellaneous varieties had been closed.

The distribution brought association members the following returns on respective varieties and species of fruit up to date: Delicious, Newtown, Spitz, enburg, Orley, Arkansas Black, Wine and Winter Banana apples, $1; all other varieties apples, 90c; d'Anjou pears, $2; Winter Nellis, $1.50, and Buere Easter, $1.

A third cash distribution will go forward to growers in February.

Monthly Health Clinic Postponed
Owing to the prevalence of contagious diseases no child health clinic will be held by the county nurse this week. If the epidemic subsides sufficiently the clinic will be held on the regular date next month.

W. H. Wilson, pioneer attorney, of The Dalles, and owner of one of Wasco county's fine ranches, was here Monday on business.

COMPANY WILL BUILD PLANT

MAYNARD & CHILD ANNOUNCE PLANS

New Cold Storage Building Will Rise—
P. F. Clark Will Return Here
To Make Home

Maynard & Child have just announced their intention to construct in Hood River a modern cold storage plant. This plant will be erected on the property recently acquired by them from the Hood River Apple Vinegar company, on Railroad street. The plant will be three stories and basement, equipped with modern refrigerating machinery and handling devices with an estimated capacity of 90,000 boxes.

Maynard & Child have decided upon this large investment in the Hood River section on account of their faith in the future of this valley, and in a desire to become a useful part of this community. They feel that there is a need for the facilities which they intend to provide and that the producers in this community will be glad to avail themselves of the service offered. Plans are being prepared and bids will be asked for the construction of the building in the very near future. Actual construction should begin not later than March 1 and it is expected that the plant will be completed in every respect, ready for operation, at least 30 days before any actual fruit is moving.

P. F. Clark, general western representative of Maynard & Child, with headquarters at Portland, will move the western office to Hood River and take over the management of the Hood River plant. All of the western business of Maynard & Child will be handled through the Hood River office.

Maynard & Child is one of the oldest established firms in the fruit business, having commenced business in 1890. They handle fruit in both export and domestic markets, having offices in New York and Boston, and connections in all the principal markets in the United Kingdom and on the continent of Europe. Their foreign connections are the most dependable and experienced, as well as financially sound, in their respective markets. It is the hope of Maynard & Child that through these new facilities, and through their wide experience and market connections, they may be able to widen the distribution of Hood River fruit and in that way contribute to the general welfare and prosperity of the community.

Mr. Clark plans to move his office to Hood River around February 15 or March 1 so as to be on the ground during the period of construction and also to meet the growers of the Hood River district who may be interested in the facilities being provided by Maynard & Child.

The cost of the new storage plant will reach an approximate total of $900,000. Mr. Clark is one of the best known of north Pacific fruit market men. Before coming to Hood River, where he was for a number of years sales manager of the Apple Growers Association, he was sales manager of the Yakima Apple Growers Association, handlers of the Big Y brands.

STATIONARY BEAN DEMONSTRATION NEAR

Because of the general trend toward the application of stationary spray equipment to orchards of this valley, the announcement of the Hood River Garage that a special demonstration of Stationary Beans will be made at their place of business next Tuesday is arousing general interest. A factory representative will be here to direct the staff of the garage in demonstrating the modern method of spraying orchards.

Stationary spraying, it seems, bids fair to come into general popularity. The Apple Growers Association has ordered large quantities of piping to be laid by orchardists in the development of such systems, declared economical in time and highly efficient.

W. O. W. STAG VAUDEVILLE SHOW TONIGHT

The complimentary stag vaudeville show of the Woodmen of the World camp here will be held at the Elks hall this evening. The show will be under the personal direction of Deputy Grand Consul E. P. Martin and District Manager A. Gerwin. All members and their friends have been invited to attend the function free.

The entertainers for the show will be brought from Portland by Mr. Martin. Mr. Gerwin says they are all professionals. Mr. Gerwin is spending two weeks here in the interest of the fraternal order.

FARMERS' COMPANY SHOWS IMPROVEMENT

At the annual meeting of the Farmers' Irrigating Co. it was reported that $19,000 had been spent the past year on permanent improvements. Further improvements will be made the coming year. Officers were named as follows: David Pyles, president; Aug. Guignard, vice pres.; A. Canfield, sec., and J. T. Downing and Ed Holson, other directors. Roy Hays was named superintendent of the irrigation plant. Leslie Butler was re-elected treasurer.

The net valuation of the irrigation concern, according to the annual statement, is now $155,000.

Growers Contract Berries
Orchardists in various parts of the valley the past week have contracted their acreage of Clark Seedling strawberries to Libby, McNeill & Libby at a minimum of $100 per ton for the next five years. The berries will be utilized at The Dalles plant of the canning concern.
