MANY ORCHARDISTS SEE BEAN STATIONARY

Orchardists from all parts of the valley and many from other mid-Columbia fruit sections were here Tuesday to see the demonstration of the new Bean Stationary spraying outfit at the Hood River Garage. Earl Franz was kept busy throughout the day greeting interested fruitgrowers and the following representatives of the Bean company were here to explain the mechanism: William Abilgaard and J. Horner, factory representatives, and Walter Abilgaard, territory representative.

The stationary units have been used successfully in various other North Pacific fruit sections. They bid fair to become popular here.

The extra heavy duty Bean pumps, the Super-Quad and the Super-Giant, are adapted to the large and medium acreages. The Giant Triplex and Duplex for the smaller places insure correct pressures at the end of pipe lines. The engines used are governor controlled, insuring constant speed at all times. This feature together with the Bean pressure regulator does away with the necessity of keeping an operator at the plant.
