HOOD RIVER GARAGE

STAGE AND SCREEN

The 50 most beautiful bathing girls in Hollywood were selected by the casting director at Paramount's west coast studio, to appear in "The Trouble With Wives," which will be at the Rialto theatre Friday.

The girls were outfitted in all varieties of bathing suits, from the one-piece variety to fancy ruffled affairs designed by Travis Banton and Howard Greer. Banton also created the eleven gowns worn by Florence Vidor in this picture, while Greer created the nine costumes worn by Esther Ralston.

The bathing girls represent all varieties of feminine beauty, from statuesque blondes to diminutive brunettes.

"The Trouble With Wives" was directed for Paramount by Malcolm St. Clair from the original story by Sada Cowan and Howard Higgin. In addition to Miss Vidor and Miss Ralston the featured players include Tom Moore and Ford Sterling.

"Variety" has this to say about "The King of Main Street" at the Rialto Saturday:

"Here is the comedy box office wow of the famous program thus far this year. It is going to clean up. The women are going to love it and they are going to like Adolphe Menjou all the more for it. This is one of the ex-hibitors can't possibly go wrong on for it is sure to mop.

"It is a sophisticated comedy, but the adaptation has broadened it to such an extent that the high, low and the in-between audiences are all bound to fall for it. But, all in all it is Menjou. The manner in which he plays the role of the king is going to stir the hearts and pull the laughs. This is a picture bet that shouldn't be overlooked anywhere."

Al Christie's latest contribution to the mirth of a nation is unique because of the fact that it presents to picture audiences Julian Eltinge and Ann Pennington, two star artists of immense drawing power on the stage, and popular favorites of motion picture fans.

"Madam Behave," as the name might indicate, is a farce in skirts and is widely known as "a cousin to 'Charley's Aunt.'" The latter by this time has gone down in screen history as one of the biggest screen comedy triumphs of the decade. It made Syd Chaplin a screen star of the first magnitude.

It may be said incidentally, that "Madam Behave," which features Julian Eltinge, the world famed woman impersonator, and Ann Pennington, foremost American jazz dancer, and which will be on view at the Rialto theatre next Sunday, completes a triumvirate of international farces produced by Al Christie.

Incidentally, "Madame Behave" completes a triumvirate of international farces. Whereas "Charley's Aunt" was English by history and tradition, and the second big picture, "Seven Days," a recent American farce of high standing, "Madam Behave" was written as a French farce and then Americanized with the addition of those creations of the resourceful gag man, which make people roar with laughter.

In addition to the featured players, some of the big laughs are created by a pair of funny chaps played by Lionel Belmore and Jack Duffy. Eltinge himself is seen in three every four scenes of the picture in feminine garb, and for the rest appears in man's clothing. The comedy is said to be a veritable magazine of laughs and smiles.

Marion Davies will be presented Monday in "Janice Meredith," a special Washington birthday show. This show, copies faithfully the costume of the time of the Father of His Country. It is a beautiful show, with a romance woven through it that will appeal.

"Jiggers, Skinny, here comes the cop!" That was the cry that went up as a blue-coated figure stalked into one of the class rooms of the Holy Name Parochial school in New York one day during the filming of "The Making of O'Malley," the first National picture to be shown at the Rialto theatre next Tuesday. On the final night it will be shown in conjunction with the Mortensen-Edwards wrestling match.

But the traditional awe of the mischievous child for the policeman gave way before shouts of jubilation greeting the youngsters who recognized in the wearer of the uniform one of their favorite film stars—Milton Sills.

Sills spent two days at the school filming scenes for the picture. Rev. Joseph A. Kerwin, head of the school, and Brother Walter, the principal, turned the schoolroom and 750 of the children over to Earl Hudson, who supervised the production.

In one of the scenes Sills is called on to make a speech to a schoolroom full of youngsters. He is a New York policeman, unaccustomed to speaking, and of course, meets with difficulty in getting started. After a lot of false starts and sputtering he finally shouts: "I'm Officer Jim. I'm here to see you get protection. Now, all of you be good boys and girls and mind your teacher."

Of course, that wasn't what he wanted to say.

When Sills started his speech the youngsters howled with joy every time he stopped to gulp they shouted until they could be heard in the street. Director Lambert Hillyer and his assistants labored for almost an hour before they could quiet the mob long enough to film the scene.

D'Anjou Company Under Receiver

B. A. Perham, of the Perham Fruit company, of Yakima, has been appointed receiver for the Mount Adams D'Anjou Orchards, Inc., which is located near Husum in the White Salmon district.

In the application for receivership it was alleged that the Perham Fruit company holds a contract with the orchard company agreeing to advance funds to finance growing, harvesting, packing and marketing fruit for the seasons of 1925, 1926 and 1927 with a maximum total advance of $100,000, and that last year's advances were made totaling $45,244 of which amount but $21,209 was recovered from the proceeds of the crop which fell nearly 75 per cent under the pre-harvest estimates.

In addition it is alleged that the orchard company owes the Perham Fruit company $13,716 on account of other loans made, making a total of $37,000 claimed to be due the Perham company.

Wade H. Dean, who has been in charge of the property for the orchards company, has been employed as manager for the receiver.

THE PONTIAC CHIEF

COMING SATURDAY

Pontiac, "the chief of the Sixes," will be here Saturday. The first arrival of this new General Motors automobile, manufactured and distributed by the Oakland Motor Car company as a companion to the Oakland Six, will be on display by J. F. Volz, local Oakland dealer, at his Heights show room.

The new Pontiac Six made its debut in the New York automobile show where its many distinguished features of engineering design and body refinement and low prices then announced created a sensation. The new Pontiac is being made in two body types, a five-passenger coach and a two-passenger coupe. Both models list at $825.

The Pontiac Six appears destined to take a place with the leaders. It fully lives up to the advance notices previously printed about it. It is a car of characteristic General Motors quality. The beautiful Fisher built bodies with rich fittings and the lustrous Duco finish in two colors belie the fact that the Pontiac is one of the lowest priced six-cylinder cars on the market.

Mechanically and in structural design the same attention to quality construction is apparent. The engine is of the six-cylinder, I-head type with a host of advanced features which are noteworthy in a car of such low price. It is a moderate speed type, which is best suited for long life and endurance, with 3 1/2-inch bore and 3 3/4-inch stroke. It develops 36-horsepower at 2,400 revolutions per minute.

The chassis has a 110-inch wheel base, and a total spring length of 90 inches, just 82 per cent of the wheel base. These, with other mechanical features such as low center of gravity, method of spring suspension and semi-reversible steering mechanism, make for the maximum in roadability and ease of operation.

The Fisher built bodies are low-slung and roomy with a distinctive treatment of the double body beading, the lower beading curving up to a higher level back of the doors. The radiator is nickel plated with a unique double medallion name plate in front, and a bronze-faced Indian head radiator cap, suggestive of the name of the car.

Headlights are supported by a strong fender tie rod, while parking lights are set above the lower beading on the cowl of the car.

The grouping of hand controls on the instrument panel follows very closely the arrangements on the instrument panel of the Oakland Six—switch at left, choke and throttle at right, oil gauge, ammeter and speedometer grouped in the center in a glass enclosed, indirectly lighted panel.

The coach is finished in Arizona Gray Duo, with black upper structure and double beading in black. Fawcett striping is used on the body, fenders and wheels. Upholstery is gray corduroy.

The coupe is finished in light sage green Duo, with black upper structure and black beading and fawcett striping on body, fenders and wheels. The rear quarter is finished in leather and has the distinctive beading. Upholstery is gray corduroy, with leather optional.

The large rear deck has a lid extending practically the full length and width, which may be removed entirely, and space used for sample cases or heavy luggage. Back of the seat is a shelf approximately six inches.

Both coach and coupe have sun visor, rear view mirror, automatic windshield cleaner, rear window shade and Fischer VV one-piece windshield as standard equipment. The coach also has a dome light.

Balloons three, 20x17 1/2 are standard equipment, as is the Remo three-unit electrical system. The spark is automatically controlled, assuring proper position at all engine speeds. Service brakes are external contracting, working on 11-inch drums, two inches wide, located on the rear wheels. Parking brakes are internal expanding.

Cylinders are cast en bloc, and one of the features is a two-piece cylinder head which permits removal without the necessity of retiming the ignition. Combustion chambers are of the hemispherical type, permitting the use of high compression without knocking. Cylinder bores are finished by the honing process.

A crankshaft weighing 45 pounds is supported by three large bronze-backed interchangeable bearings. Connecting rods are drop forged. Crank pin bearings are of the shimless type. Piston pins are of the shimless type, and have an oil regulating ring located at the bottom of the skirt. Piston pins, which are locked in the piston, are 1 1/2 inches in diameter, providing unusual rigidity bearing surface to minimize wear.

Engine lubrication is forced feed, operated by a pump located under the level of the oil. It is self priming and protected against freezing in winter weather. Oil passages are continuous from one end of the crankshaft to the other, thus insuring equal pressure to all main bearings. Piston rings, cylinder walls, valve stems and lifters and cam shaft bearings are lubricated by the oil spray, thrown off from the crankshaft.

The cooling system comprises a Harrison radiator and a water pump with adjustable belt driven from the front end of the crank shaft. Water circulates through large passages completely surrounding all cylinders and valve ports.

Engine, clutch and transmission are in one unit. The clutch is of single plate type, operated by eight coil springs, and has a graphite throw-out bearing which requires no lubrication. Transmission gears are of chrome vanadium steel, with three speeds forward and one reverse.

The intake manifold is especially constructed to give perfect combustion to all cylinders. Its design minimizes the danger of crankcase dilution, and has a heat control valve which may be adjusted for warm or cold weather.

Truck Driver, Fined, Loses License

W. L. McCarty, a truck driver of Milwaukee, was fined $100 Monday by Justice of the Peace Blagg on a charge of driving while drunk. He lost his driving permit for a year and was sentenced to 90 days in jail.

McCarty, when arrested, claimed that he had only taken a dose of high-alcohol bitters, found in his car. Officers making the arrest, however, stated that he was paralyzed from the effects of the liquor or some drug. His truck, pursuing a zigzag course over the Columbia River highway, was, it was stated, endangering traffic.
