Chasing his speeding car down Oak street on a motorcycle Tuesday, City Traffe Officer Morrison overhauled and arrested William Pendergast, allas J. F. Matthews, 23, who said he recently described from the Navy at Los Angeles. The traffic officer was traveling westen Cascade avenue and had just reached the point where this street intersects with Oak, when he observed a car occupied by Pendergast heading cast down Oak street. As he turned to follow, Pendergast speeded his car up. When the fleeing automobile and pursuing motorcycle passed through the business section they were traveling at a rate of 55 miles an hour. Short turns on First street checked Pendergast, and observing that the officer would overhaul his car, he abandoned the machine on State street. With the gears in neutral but the car still in motion he described it and started to run up State street. Morrison left his motorcycle. He drew his revolver and covered Pendergast when the latter seemed trying to draw a weapon. A search later revealed that he carried a large revolver. The abandoned car was stopped when it bumped into a truck. Pendergast said he had stolen the car in Portland. He claimed he was heading for Pendleton. Believing that Officer Morrison had recognized the sholen car, Pendergast says he was thrown into a panic when he saw the officer Morrison, however, said he would never have thought of giving chase, had not Pendergast sped away from him. Pendergast was held here while officers wired naval authorities.

Officers learned from Portland naval authorities that the young man, whose real name is Mathews, was telling the truth about his naval desertion. Officers Harf and Morrison returned him to Portland Tuesday afternoon.
