

Avoid Arsenical Residue

Some growers will try to control codling moth and at the same time avoid arsenical residue on the fruit at harvest by extra heavy dosages of lead for the early cover sprays, in the hope of eliminating the first brood and avoiding the need of late season applications of lead.

VOLCK KILLS CODLING MOTH

We do not believe this program will be successful without the addition of Volck as an ovicide. Some July applications might be necessary and these would certainly leave a heavy arsenical residue. We recommend 1 1/2 Volck with 3 lbs. of lead to 100 gallons for the first three cover sprays, not more than 10 days apart. Omit Volck in the first cover spray if dormant lime-sulphur has been used. Late applications should be made with 1 1/2 Volck alone, which will give real protection from the pest and at the same time make further use of lead unnecessary.

TRAFFIC BODY ASKS FOR CLEAN FRUIT

The Hood River Traffic association, the membership of which is formed by all local apple shipping concerns, has launched a campaign to secure packed apples this fall free from spray residues. Because of the serious effect from arsenical spray residue on the British market, the traffic body asked an opinion from Leroy Childs, in the following statement he expresses the opinion that the Hood River growers may be able to market their fruit free from spray residue and still successfully combat the codling moth, for which it is applied. He said:
"During the past year trouble was encountered in several markets, particularly those in England, with the handling of apples bearing arsenical spray residues. This condition had a very serious influence upon the market situation in the British Isles. Our own federal authorities have been watching arsenical residues and have taken several shipments of western boxed apples carrying more arsenic than the law allows.
"The situation is sufficiently important that the Hood River Traffic association believes it desirable that all growers assist in every way possible to eliminate this residue. We must put the fruit on the market so that it will fully comply with domestic and foreign laws.
"Under ordinary conditions the grower of Hood River will have less difficulty in controlling codling moth than other Pacific coast sections. Very thoroughly applied sprays, used for control of the first brood worm will relieve the situation to the extent that strength of the later sprays may be reduced and in some instances eliminated. The experiment station plans to recommend double strength application for the first sprays unless conditions are exceptional. Where heavy applications are made this in the season growers should wipe their fruit.
"The growers of this valley are in better shape to meet the arduous task of lead situation than any other district. They are better organized and do not need to use as much spray as other sections. It will be possible to capitalize these facts. Growers must recognize that the arsenical residue situation is a serious one. Where arsenic is present in any appreciable amount, the fruit should be wiped. Careful attention to this matter will greatly benefit the marketing of apples."

With members from all parts of the valley attending the meeting of Hood River Masonic lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Wednesday night of last week observed a mortgage burning celebration. A small debt of $8,500 had been paid. The lodge has grown steadily since its institution on July 28, 1882. Early day reminiscences were given by H. F. Davidson, pioneer fruit man, who is now head of a large Oregon cannery interests.
The formal ceremony was preceded by a banquet in Tienan hall. R. B. Bennett, master of the lodge, presided. He recalled some of the present day activities of Hood River Masons, emphasizing the recent institution here of a chapter of De Moly. Discussion developed the cooperative fraternal spirit that existed in early days between Masons and Odd Fellows. M. P. Watson, A. E. Blowers and C. L. Morse, pioneer Masons, according to records in the archives of the lodge, were appointed a committee to confer with Odd Fellows over plans for use of the Odd Fellow hall by the proposed Masonic lodge.
The petition for a charter was forwarded to the Oregon Grand Lodge in April, 1922. It was signed by the following charter members: E. L. Smith, M. P. Watson, M. P. Iamberg, C. J. Hayne, C. L. Morse, L. Nealeigh, W. A. Silligerman, W. A. Lumpkin, W. J. Baker, P. C. Bell, H. F. Davidson, A. S. Blowers, M. D. Morgan, C. W. Tinn, P. H. Burton, E. D. Howell, H. D. Pratt, J. W. Hinrichs, A. L. Phelps, Robert Rand, L. E. Morse, S. D. Patton, Thomas Harlan and Newell Harlan.

In 1908, Masons and Odd Fellows joined in forming the Idlewild Cemetery association.
Mr. Davidson paid a tribute to Andrew H. Klemm, pioneer Upper Valley rancher, who retired to land after a lifetime spent on the sea and who at his death left his entire fortune to the Masonic lodge. Tienan hall was constructed with funds from the Tienan legacy.
An interesting item in minutes of the lodge was a resolution calling in 1902 for construction of horse sheds for members of the lodge who might attend from the rural sections.
The 17th of the lodge, a prominent man initiated in Hood River lodge, W. J. Kocken was the youngest Mason at the celebration last week, having just been initiated.

MASONIC LODGE HAS MORTGAGE BURNING

Juliet Fordan and Carlisle Roberts, representing the Hood River high school, last Friday night won a unanimous decision over the Hermonston high school in the eastern Oregon semifinals of the State Interscholastic Debate association. Earl Bennett and Dorothy Showtell represented the visiting school.
Resolved: That Oregon should have free text books for the public schools, was the subject of debate. The local students upheld the affirmative.

An unusually strong cast has been gathered by John McCormick to support Colleen Moore in her latest starring feature, "Irene," based on the musical comedy stage hit of the same name. The picture, which has been released through First National, comes to the Rialto theatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.
Lloyd Hughes plays opposite the star. His play is exceedingly popular, especially among the fair fans. It is recalled that he was recently designated by a prominent French sculptor as "the most typical and handsomest American lad."
Also among the featured players are George K. Arthur, who contributes an eccentric juvenile characterization in "Irene," and Charlie Murray, a character comedian who has long been held in highest esteem by movie-lovers.
Completing the cast are Kate Eric, the able comedienne; Eva Novak, looking prettier than ever on her return to the screen after a brief retirement; Lawrence Wheat and Edward Earle.
Also there are Maryon Aye, famed beauty; Ida Darling, pioneer "grande dame" of the screen; Boss Flowers, a recruit from Shakespearean drama; Lydia Yemans-Titus, too well known to need a word of identification; and Cora Macey, who in "Irene" makes her screen debut after a notable career on the stage.
Parents, if you would like to see a picture that is real entertainment, and at the same time learn what to do with that rebellious daughter or son, be sure to see Rupert Hughes' picture, "Don't," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture coming to the Rialto theatre next Thursday and Friday. And children, it is to your advantage to come and bring your parents. The picture was directed by Alf Goulding, who made "Excuse Me," the hilarious farce that it was.
Much has been introduced into the story to provoke and hold the interest of spectators. For instance, there is a girl's basket-ball game in which the opposing captains are "out for blood" and inspire their teammates accordingly. A family outing at an amusement park, especially hired for the purpose, is one of the funniest episodes ever filmed. The heroine's midnight encounter with a dangerous tramp and numerous other incidents make the picture an entertaining one from start to finish.
The heroine of the story is a typical American girl in every respect; typically misunderstood by her parents, by her lover; not too good nor too bad, and not fully understanding her parents' viewpoint. The girl played by Sally O'Neill, a newcomer to the screen, is made a sympathetic figure, yet all mothers and fathers will understand her parents' predicament, and at the same time let in on the daughter's angle of the problem.
It is not, however, primarily a problem picture, but is a clean, fast comedy. There is not a single jazz party with drinks flowing under the tables, nor a midnight swimming party, but there is injected into it some of the funniest comedy ever seen on the screen.
Most of this is contributed by Bert Bosch, remembered as the traveling salesman in "Excuse Me," who is fast becoming one of the screen's most popular comedians.
Aside from Miss O'Neill and Bosch, the cast includes John Patrick, James Morrison, Estelle Clark, DeWitt Jennings, Ethel Wales, Johnnie Fox, Dorothy Gray, Evelyn Photo, Brinsley Shaw and Helen Hope. Agnes Christine Johnson wrote the scenario.

HOOD RIVER WINS FRIDAY'S DEBATE

GERDES WILL VISIT PHILADELPHIA SHOW

J. H. Gerdes, pioneer rancher and hotel man, who left for the Pacific coast 40 years ago after seeing the exposition held at Philadelphia in celebration of the centennial anniversary of signing the Declaration of Independence, is preparing to leave soon to attend Philadelphia's Sesqui-Centennial exposition.
Mr. Gerdes, a native of Germany, who lived in New York state before going to Philadelphia two years before starting west, spent two years in California. He came to Hood River in 1878, homesteading 100 acres in the Dulles Valley district. He later came to the city, operating a butcher shop and opening his hotel, the Gerdes house, which he has just leased to S. C. Mills.
Mr. Gerdes has nephews and a niece in Brooklyn, a son in Wisconsin and a daughter in Montana, whom he will visit while on his trip.
Lytle Prospects Good
Prospects for an apple crop were never better in the Lytle, Wash., section, according to W. J. Havener, grower and shipper of that section, here last week. The bloom was the heaviest and most regular of years, according to Mr. Havener, and the fruit is setting well.
Mr. Havener was here to purchase cows. Orchardists of his section, he said, are showing an interest in limited dairying as a sideline to fruit-growing.

Republican Committee Active
The Hood River county republican central committee last week was reorganized with the following officers: A. Canfield, chairman; John Bennett, secretary, and L. B. Alsworth, secretary.
"We have made no recommendations as to primary candidates," said Mr. Canfield, "but will get solidly behind every nominee."
