PRACTICAL SIDE OF "OREGON QUALITY"

(By Dan C. Freeman, manager of the Oregon Manufacturers Association)

For many years, a number of broad gaged, forward looking men engaged in the industries of Oregon have backed with effort and money a movement to well the industrial assets and products of Oregon to Oregonians. These men in diversified lines and living in various parts of the state, hold the common view that encouraging and making successfully established manufacturing plants, and building up their prestige, would insure quickest return in additional factories in the state. This is a policy in which every community in Oregon has a deep and abiding interest.

A general mark or emblem was adopted, containing the words, "Oregon Quality," on a diamond shaped shield supported by a tree. This was characteristic of thrift and industry and is based upon the biological fact that Oregon was the greatest habitat of the beaver.

Recognition of the significance of the Oregon industries program and its value has made strides. The practical side of the famous slogan, "Oregon Quality," is now pointed out in newspaper comment. These statements record triumphs of Oregon products in meeting competition in various parts of the world. They show Oregon is marching ahead. These statements cover loganberries, pipe organs and women's coats to water heaters.

Each year, Oregon's wonderful fruits and vegetables and soil products make new conquests. Willamette valley loganberries are finding a welcome in Great Britain; even Oregon marmalade is being enjoyed in England—home of marmalade and toast. Spangnum-moss of the Oregon coast is going into surgical dressings that are on the way to Australia; houses cut in our factories are in Africa and the Orient; polishes, cleaners, soaps, paints and vegetable oils are being distributed in increasing amounts; toilet preparations with Oregon labels are being used by the belles of the Pacific; logging machinery, garden tractors, gas engines and other implements, also a coal feeding device, an automatic stoker, all are going into distant markets bearing the banner of "Made in Oregon." Our tires and rubber heels as well as cereals are in the Orient and in the day's news was reported a shipment to islands in the Pacific of store fixtures, furniture, bags and trunks—the store fixtures being the new feature in this trade. Lumber carriers and hoisting machinery are invading domestic markets.

Transactions of the woolen textiles and garment manufacturing industries emphasize the importance of the woolen and yarn and garment industry as a basic industry here. The woolen products industries are growing at the rate of about 25 per cent each year over each preceding year.

"The practical side of 'Oregon Quality'" applies not only to products compounded in Nature's work shop, but to sport and work garments, wearables like hats and caps and shoes, all stockings, women's coats, and the illustration can be carried on into Oregon paints and certain building materials, Oregon paper and paper products, rope, wire, and twine, and many others, which shortly will be added, no doubt, Oregon linen cloth and silk ribbon as these factories are "on the way."

A report on manufacturing prepared for the Pacific Northwest Shippers' Advisory board of the American Railway association which met at Tacoma, showed that the total value of the manufactured products of Oregon for 1925 approximated $278,341,341, exclusive of the lumber production. Surely this supports the idea of quality in Oregon products.

JERRY TETREAU HANDLED LENIENTLY

Life moved fast from Saturday, July 10, to Thursday, July 22, for Jerry Tetreau, French Canadian woodcutter, whose cigarette started the Mitchell Point forest fire on the former date. Jerry frankly explained to forestry officials how the swish of a branch had sent his cigarette hurtling into the underbrush. He thought he had extinguished the stub, but 15 minutes later the hillside above Mitchell Point was aflame.

The woodcutter joined on at once with the fire fighting crew, which was kept busy for more than a week bringing the 1000-acre burn under control. He even allowed his wedding day to pass as he fought the fire.

The fire crews were released Tuesday of last week. Wednesday Jerry went to Portland for his bride, Miss Caroline Mitchell. The two came here and were married that day.

Thursday Jerry faced Justice of the Peace Blagg and pleaded guilty to setting the fire. Because of the record of faithfulness Jerry had made on the fire lines, Justice Blagg suspended the 10-day jail sentence imposed.

"You received a life sentence," commented Judge Blagg, "and that ought to be enough at one time."

WASCO GROWERS PUT WATER WELL TO WORK

Jubilant celebration in Wasco county last week, when 180 citizens gathered to put into commission a pump at the Cherry Hill Improvement company's property. L. Barnum, president of The Dalles-Wasco County Chamber of Commerce, presided at the ceremony, which started a motor, and hundreds of gallons of water began to flow into irrigation pipes.

It is declared that use of wells and pumps in the Wasco county fruit section will become general. The cost of the well, exclusive of individual weir boxes and wooden flumes bringing the water to the orchard, was about $150. Approximately $2,500 was spent in land preparation, it was declared.

Considerable interest was shown in the electrical installation made by H. N. Crandall. The motor driving the deep-well type turbine pump is so nearly free from vibration that a coin placed on edge on the flat top of the vertical power unit will not tip over or roll off.

Distribution is effected by having four large weir boxes, one at the highest point of each of the orchards, and wooden lateral flumes across the flume of the property. Small holes drilled in the flumes allow a small amount of water to escape into the trenches which run parallel to the rows of trees, about six trenches between each row.

The fact that the installation is the first cooperative pumping unit and that its success may mean other similar projects was declared more significant than the particular outlay, of magnitude in itself.

Another Scenery Booster

In the "Those Who Come and Go" column of the Oregonian Monday appeared the following:

"The indifference of the people of Oregon and the northwest to the asset they have in their scenery is one of the most surprising things I have found on my travels," remarked a globe-trotter to the Multnomah hotel yesterday. "It simply is not advertised enough. I know of no other place that can compare with this section for natural beauty. It is a great resource, as much as iron or timber, and you should exploit it. What would happen if Los Angeles had a Columbia River highway and a Mount Hood loop? Why, it would be known from one end of the country to the other. Eastern people have no real conception of the marvelous scenery that you have out here and they won't know it unless you advertise it more. I think you people must get so used to your surroundings that you take it for granted that others know about it, too. I was surprised that so few automobiles were making the Mount Hood loop trip when I went around. There should be streams of them."

A Patient Creditor

They were making a drive to raise funds for an addition to the African Baptist church. Two colored sisters called on old Uncle Berry, an aged negro, who lives on the outskirts of the village and asked the aged darkey to give something toward the cause.

"Lawdy, slaters, I sho would like to help you-all along," he said, "but I just ain't got it. Why, I has 'bout a cent time keep paying a little something on what I already owe around here."

"But," said one of the collectors, "you know you owe the Lord something, too."

"Yes, dat's right, sister," said the old man; "but he ain't pushing me like my other creditors is."—Western Christian Advocate.

Boy Thrown from Bicycle

Frank Von Arsdale, 14, suffered painful bruises recently when his bicycle was struck by an automobile driven by Geo. Okamura, Japanese orchardist. The accident occurred just south of the city on the Mount Hood highway. The boy was rushed to his home and a physician called to attend his wounds.

The bonds will be sold to the highest responsible bidder; provided, however, the right to reject any or all bids is hereby reserved.

By order of the Board of Directors of Middle Fork Irrigation District. J. W. BOE, Secretary.

Notice to British Veterans

Residents of this community and state, who served under British colors during the war, are warned by the British Ministry of Pensions that the time limit for entering disability claims with the British government will soon be reached in the majority of cases. No claim may be considered unless made within seven years of the date of discharge or by August 31, 1928, whichever is the earlier, applying both to new claims and claims of additional disabilities in men already receiving pensions. The warning was given through Kenneth L. Cooper, Portland regional manager of the U. S. Veterans' bureau, who received information relative to the matter from Brigadier General Frank Z. Hines, Director of the bureau.

"This service does not apply to Canadian ex-service men but rather to British imperialists, men who served under the British flag in English organizations," said Mr. Cooper. "A branch office of the British Ministry of Pensions has just been opened at Ottawa, Canada. Disability ratings, payment of pensions, and treatment authorization have previously been handled by the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment at Ottawa, but the growth of this work has necessitated the change. The Veterans' bureau will continue to cooperate with the British government through the new office."

The Allied Veterans' branch of the Portland post of the American Legion has a number of members who served in the British imperial forces, it was stated, and there are many others scattered throughout the state.

Mr. Moore's Mother Passed Writing back to E. O. Bianchar, S. J. Moore stated that his mother, Mrs. W. E. Moore, died at her home in Detroit before his arrival Monday, July 12. Mr. Moore received a message announcing serious illness of his mother. He started for the east immediately. His mother, however, passed away Tuesday.

Funeral services for Mrs. Moore were held in Detroit on the Friday following her death.

TOURIST TRAVEL SHOWS AN INCREASE

(By C. T. Baker)

Although various appearances indicate that the volume of tourist travel in Oregon this year is somewhat below that of last year, the experience of the various tourist contact points in the Hood River valley seems to show that such travel has made an increase.

Statistics from the tourist bureau at the local Chamber of Commerce show that the total of 1,151 parties have inquired for information from the Chamber of Commerce up to the 19th of July this year as compared to a total of 426 parties up to the same time last year, an increase of 269 per cent. Of this number this year a total of 845 have been induced to make a trip through the valley as compared with 158 at this date last year. A total of 2,629 pieces of literature has been distributed from the Chamber of Commerce this year as compared with 2,478 last year, in addition to that sent out to the auto parks and through the mail.

That more out-of-state cars have been passing through is shown by the records of the motor contact points, as indicated by the tourist bureau; 314 this year as compared with 280 for last year.

No doubt the installation of the branch office of the Oregon State Motor association has had some effect on the bringing of more tourists in contact with the Chamber of Commerce, but reports from the other parties in contact with the tourist bureau show that the truth of the foregoing statistics is probably the most effective work being carried on in regard to tourist travel is that being done by Dr. L. L. Murphy's committee of Guides in visiting the auto parks at the western instance of the city. This committee, composed of Dr. Murphy, J. A. McLean, H. E. Baker and C. N. Ravlin, is doing a most effective work and the support of the Guides as a whole is most encouraging.

Incomplete reports from this activity show a total of 341 parties interviewed by the Guides at the parks; 109 of these, who had planned on going straight through, were induced to take trips through the valley. It is interesting to note that of the 341 parties interviewed, 115 had had no previous information in regard to the Hood River valley.

A great variety of questions were put to the booster organization, predominate of these being inquiries regarding roads and Mt. Hood. Other topics included land values, crop conditions, fishing and hunting, employment, and irrigation.

Interesting commentaries on the visits to the parks were set on the various records of the reports to Dr. Murphy, which a party of Guides carried in. Following is a suggestion made by a tourist:

"Lindeman, a tourist from New York, claims that we are dead. We ought to import two Los Angeles boosters and have a 100,000 population in two years' time."

The general complaint on the city auto park seems to be the cabin facilities, while the majority of the tourists were enthusiastic in their praise of the cabins at the Bone park. A suggestion was made by one of the parties of Guides that photographs of Mt. Hood and scenes of the valley be taken by all committees visiting the parks.

"Perhaps the most interesting comment on the work of the Guides was furnished by the report of Mayor Bennett and L. A. Bennett. A quotation of their report is as follows:

"We feel that photographs of points of interest in the valley would attract much interest if posted in the camps. The large picture of the valley might well be transferred to the parks from the office of the chamber. The committee should have photographs of Mt. Hood and scenes of the valley. These could be handed to each committee in turn and would be a great help in interesting the tourists."

"This is the biggest and best work that we are doing in the community and should be by no means discontinued. We should have men each evening at these camps. Each item of interest of the valley should be reported on the bulletin board in each camp—Koberg beach, Lost Lake, Cloud Cap Inn, etc. We are not capitalizing our investment in this park unless we sell to the tourist our natural resources."

"Viewed as a whole, the situation in regard to tourist travel this year is very encouraging. All of the work being done in this community is very effective in making the tourist feel welcome in our community, and telling him about our scenery and natural resources. It is to be hoped that the work along these lines will be carried on and encouraged as time goes on and beneficial results are sure to be forthcoming."
