SCHOOL FAIR IS VIEWED BY MANY

The annual county school fair drew a large attendance of students, their parents and friends from all parts of the valley Saturday. The auditorium of the high school was filled with an interesting lot of exhibits. The decorations were appealing and the arrangement of the displays was artistic. The best of the exhibits will be preserved and sent to the state fair at Salem. The Union Pacific scholarship of $75 goes to Loren Reed, and the winners going to the state fair are: Elsie Forbes, of Odell; Gordon Gilkerson, of Central Vale, and Earle Craton and Grace Mitchell, of Barrett.

first: Lois Schweitzer, second: Enis Parker, third: Vivian Lienallen, fourth: Lois Lienallen, fifth.

DOG RESCUES BOY, TWO OTHERS DROWN

A mongrel dog, albeit a "Bar Slaughter" in breed but with a courage and devotion supreme, became the town hero Sunday when he saved the life of his young master, seven-year-old Tommy Playie, at Bingen, Wash. The child with two companions, Hiroshi, 9, and Sunio, 7, sons of T. Tsutsumi, Japanese farmer, was playing on a raft on a small lake on the Columbia bottom farm of Mrs. Beesie Wiers. The raft tipped, and the two Japanese children were drowned. The dog, playing on the bank, according to the story told by the small boy, heard his cries for help and swam to him, towing him ashore.

Funeral services for the Japanese children were held at Bingen Tuesday afternoon. The funeral was directed by C. C. Anderson.

WIND STORM, SPRAY ISSUE HURT ROGUE

(From the Jackson-County News)

That pear growers of Rogue river valley lost more fruit in a violent wind storm three weeks ago than in the entire season of 1925, was reported by officials of the United States Department of Chemistry, when the department's agents were inspecting fruit for arsenate of lead spray and seizing pear shipments, as indicated by a survey made by The News this week.

A careful check, places estimates of the fruit loss by wind at between 80 and 100 cars. Many orchards suffered heavily, while a majority escaped with little or no damage. Fruit shippers are slow to tell how many cars of fruit packed by them met with official disapproval, but the actual figures, as far as can be learned, are much lower than street gossip places them.

As far as could be learned by The News, two cars of pears were actually condemned and destroyed by the department of chemistry. Not more than 20 cars were seized, held until the fruit was over-ripe, later released, and sold at a loss.

Pear growers are quite naturally indignant at the high-handed manner in which government officials illegally tampered with their shipments, and the loss of dollars and cents of fruit high. Street rumors and stories carried in the Portland Oregonian, however, grossly exaggerate the spray seizure situation, and make the entire outlook appear much blacker than it really is.

Even greater than the loss from actual seizures and condemnations, declare local pear men, is the loss taken due to low prices. The department of chemistry's action put growers in a state of panic, and showed eastern buyers worked upon their fear to force prices below what they would normally have been. More than one telegram has been received here from buyers complaining to call on growers, or advising that fruit be "bootlegged" to dodge inspection.

In connection with governmental interference, sensational charges have been made by the Suncrust Orchard Co., of which Llewelyn Banks is manager. Suncrust, in applying for an injunction barring inspectors from their plant, and from the Dillon Hill orchard, charged that Southern Oregon sales, local commission men, and buyers worked upon their fear to force prices below what they would normally have been. More than one telegram has been received here from buyers complaining to call on growers, or advising that fruit be "bootlegged" to dodge inspection.

During the crisis which existed while government agents were operating, Medford newspapers maintained strict silence, at the request of local bankers and business men, who believed that publicity would reach the east, inform buyers, and thus give them leverage in forcing down prices. This silence ended when the Oregonian last week sent a special reporter to Medford to uncover the situation and present it to the Oregonian. The Oregonian stories were also published in other papers over the entire United States.

Much misinformation appeared in the Portland paper's initial story, although others which followed were highly accurate. In its first story, however, it put the loss by seizure at 80 cars, and the monetary loss at $3,000,000. This figure, which is near the total value of southern Oregon's pear crop, included depreciation of property value, which, it felt, is only temporary.

Also inaccurate, and taking the other extreme, was a story released to and used by the Associated Press. This story stated that the Oregonian had been deceived by Paul B. McKee, which has urged a policy of silence steadfastly.

The emergency committee story claims that prices are at present satisfactory. In its story, however, it stated that the government regulation was not unjust, that all fruit shipped which failed to meet specifications was reconditioned and sold, that the policy of silence brought splendid results, and that Suncrust failed to cooperate in the inspection and handling of fruit under the policy adopted.

The facts, as revealed by the investigation made by The News, are that Suncrust led in methods of spray removal and that the Barrett yard are now nearly normal, although most of the fruit sold at a low figure. Bosc prices and prices on other varieties are not satisfactory, being below normal, and very much lower than the record prices of last year.

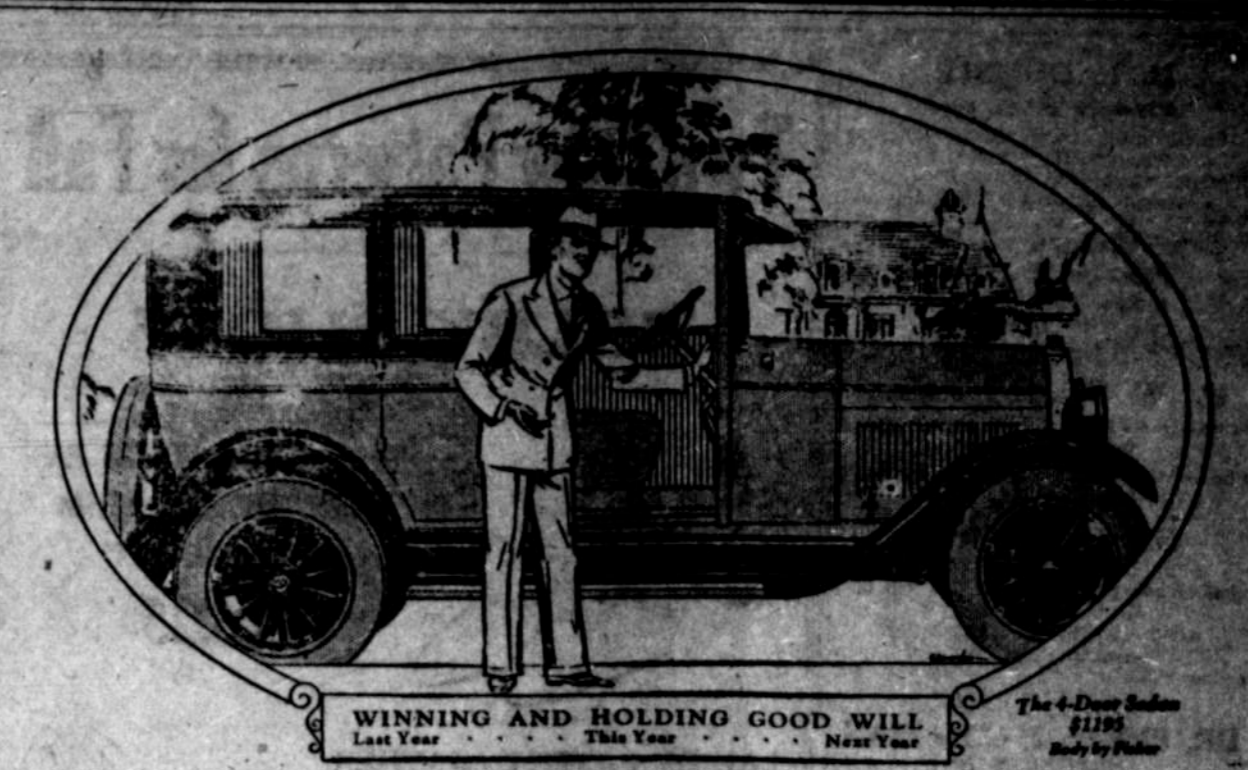

That the policy of silence accomplished nothing, and resulted in local residents becoming unduly alarmed seems an admitted fact.

The war between Grant Raymond, receiver for the Dillon Hill orchard, and Suncrust orchards, against the government agents and Southern Oregon Sales now rests with a restraining order issued against inspectors, barring them from the Suncrust plant and from the Hill orchard. The Southern Pacific is restrained from giving information on the car numbers or destination of Suncrust shipments. Southern Oregon Sales is also restrained from interfering with Suncrust operations.

A motion to place the application for a permanent injunction in the federal court is before Judge Thomas, and will be ruled on soon. A damage suit by Suncrust is expected to follow the motion for injunction.

BARRIE'S DEAR BRUTUS COMING SOON

There is no dramatist today who more truly loves his characters, his audience and the world than the Peter Pan of playwrights, Sir James Matthew Barrie. And there is no dramatist who is more truly loved by audiences than is this same Sir James Matthew Barrie. "Dear Barrie" he has been called ever since 1897, when he won the hearts of all playgoers of the dramatization of his own novel, "The Little Minister." He had been "Dear Barrie" for a long time before that to the readers of his novels, "Sentimental Tommy," "A Window in Thrums," "And Lads, Lads," "Idylls." So, one goes to a Barrie play as one goes to a Barrie novel, for Barrie characteristics, a fresh liveliness of humor, a quaint unexpectedness of situation, with a gentle correction of the ills of life by means of an irony which tickles the fun and leaves a sweet taste in the mouth. And "Dear Brutus," the play which the Moron Ohio Players are bringing to the Rialto theatre October 12, is typically "Dear Barrie." It is an effective unfolding of what would happen if a group of people were given a second chance to live over their lives, would they be better for the chance? And Barrie has spread fancy webs over it, not the child fancy of "Peter Pan" but the eternal fairy fancy of "A Midsummer Night's Dream." By a happy turn, he twists the lives of a group of people, so magically, so magnetically, that the spirit of Puck laughs all over the stage, as Tinker Bell, in "Peter Pan" shimmered in floating ways all over the wall.

The strange thing is you can never tell by the title of a Barrie play what you are going to get. But when you have seen the play, the title is inevitable.

Veget Building Improved

Joe Vogt, manager of the Vogt estate of The Dalles, which is a large owner of business property in that city, and especially on Second street, was in The Dalles last week looking after the remodeling of several business fronts.

Mr. Vogt states that work costing several thousand dollars will be done on the store fronts of the buildings occupied by the Rice & McCoy clothing store, Crosby Drug company, George F. Newhouse jewelry, and Karl & Hurdley, real estate, the L. Borden store and the City meat market. The work of reconstruction was started Monday on the Rice & McCoy store.

Complete new fronts will be installed in all of these locations. The latest and best in display windows and lighting apparatus will be put in and the floors of the entrances, which are now about six inches above the sidewalks, will all be lowered and tiled. This improvement will add greatly to the attractiveness of the building.

BIRCH OPTIMISTIC ON APPLE MARKET

Sam Birch, of Duthie & Co., Portland exporters of apples to the United Kingdom, expressed the belief last week that the English apple market will be good this season. While Mr. Birch says the rumors and charges that are going forth on the Pacific coast will probably have some effect in creating uncertainties and effecting the trade to some extent, the agitation is found almost together in America instead of in England.

Mr. Birch expressed the belief that Pacific northwestern boxed apples, which have been carefully packed and wiped clean of the accumulation of dust and spray, will be readily accepted by the British trade and marketed without any trouble.

Mr. Birch expressed the hope that the day will come when C-grade fruit will not be shipped from the Pacific Northwest. He says that the flooding of markets with this grade of fruit works a detriment to the growers who permit it.

He says that the Hood River Wurtown apple is the most demanded fruit in England, and that growers and shippers may rest assured that the people of all the United Kingdom are going to demand that it be distributed among them.

Start—stride—finish!
It wins for the runner
It wins for motor-fuel

Start—off the mark lightning fast. Stride—rhythmic, powerful. Finish—a flying leap at the tape. That's the "form" that wins for the champion sprinter. And for champion motor-fuel, too! "More miles to the gallon" can result only from a nicely proportioned combination of (1) satisfactory quick start at all times, (2) full measure of smooth, sustained power, (3) economical mileage—the "start-stride-finish" of motor-fuel performance.

Associated Gasoline produces in championship style because it always gives just this kind of performance. The reason—its distinctive chain of series of boiling points.
