HIS HUNDRETH BIRTHDAY

It is given to but few mortals to celebrate the hundredth anniversary of their coming into this world. And rarely, indeed, does a man reach this summit in a well spent life, retaining alertness of mental faculties and such healthfulness as might be found in a man of 80.

Hood River folk Monday were given a privilege of tendering congratulations to a neighbor, who was 100 years old and who still possessed the physical vigor of a man much younger, whose mind flashed in conversation with the wit and keenness of youth. It was Captain Charles Alexander Schetky, the nation's oldest naval officer, and all the nation, from President Coolidge down, did him honor that day. And it was a well deserved honor.

Those of us who saw Captain Schetky Monday and Tuesday were impressed most deeply. In our musings we could fill columns. What a life he has lived, what wonders, miracles of development he has witnessed!

But there is a persistent wonderment of the secret of this growing old so gracefully, if there be secret. We might find it, we think, in Captain Schetky's appreciation of the solid things of life as well as for the little things that take place daily in contact with friends and family. How courteous was this old skipper! How joyful was he over those messages that came from all over the land, and he beamed his appreciation upon those who called to swell the good cheer of a great occasion.

And overshadowing all, we find Captain Schetky, throughout all his days, has been a man of reverence. The great wave of materialism that has swept the world during his lifetime with its miraculous mechanism, has but strengthened his simple faith, a faith that has made him a man of prayer.

Last year we said, on the occasion of his 90th birthday, that Captain Schetky would not be an old man when he reached the century mark this year. His is a spirit that is fortified against the buffetings that appear in the evening of life.

And we say again, as we did last year: "Who of us, when we have talked with this man, now past the hundred mark, will not say: "I will not mind growing old if I can do so as gracefully and as happily as he."

CENTRAL APPLE ORGANIZATIONS We do not know what will be the outcome of the proposed Pacific north-west central organizations of apple growers and shippers. The shippers, it seems to us, are in more of a proper mood to put the plan into actual effect than are the growers. The latter are not actually and openly against the move, but one will find a withering apathy, and this is as bad, or perhaps worse, than real open opposition. We'll wait and see what we shall see. The aims of the proposed organizations, if honestly carried out, can only result in good. Many are the benefits that have accrued to Hood River Valley from the organization here of the Hood River Traffic Association.

From a comparative standpoint, too much attention has been paid in the past to production of apples and too little to coordinated methods of distribution. The complexity of distribution demands that growing interests should be on the alert for letterments just as they are, through experiment stations, for methods of prevention of disease and control of pests. The Hood River Traffic Association is constantly at work on problems that are of vital importance and must be solved, if apples and pears are to be carried to the consumer at a cost that will permit a profit.

MR. CASE'S RECITAL Without exception, we believe, the individuals of Hood River, men and women, and various organizations of the city and valley, will welcome an opportunity to show their appreciation next Saturday night of the graciousness of Albert T. Case in aiding every worthy enterprise in past years with his singing. How many times have the songs of Mr. Case added zest to meetings of organizations and societies! He has given of his talent without stint.

Riverside church next Saturday evening, when Mr. Case will give a recital, should be crowded. His songs will be of interest to the musically informed, because of his technique, and the unformed man or woman will enjoy them for the richness of their appeal.

Mr. Case will be ably assisted by George W. Smith and Miss Sarah Abby Howes.

We may have some more flurries of winter-like winds. But the discomforts they bring will be brief. Spring is really here. The gray days of winter made us appreciate all the more the glory of Tuesday. Even nature smiled and paid honor to Captain Schetky on his 100th birthday.

The Hood River baseball team has a real coach, a man who knows the game, this year. With home support the team ought to take a lead over smaller city teams throughout the state.

Cases of scarlet fever have appeared here in the past week. If your child shows the least symptom of this disease, call a physician.

FINNS, FURS AND FEATHERS

"Goo-Goo," a Pekinese puppy, exhibited at the show window of the Automobile Service Co. by Glenn Wilson, the owner of the diminutive dog and her mother and sisters, proved to be a 14-year-old Indian girl. The pup was missed just before dark. A family of Indians had been seen on the inside of the building, admiring the Pekinese, and suspicion attached to them. Boy Scouts, police officers and private individuals began sleuthing.

An old Indian buck was interviewed. While officers did not reveal to him that a dog had been stolen, their quest for the whereabouts of the Indian family seen inspecting the dogs, evidently aroused his suspicions. He evidently went to the Indian village and made an investigation himself. About 9 o'clock the Indian girl was seen standing in the garage building. A bystander, having heard of the lost dog, thought the girl was seeking another Pekinese. He entered the room and said: "You seen lost puppy?"

The girl pointed to a corner of the steps leading up to the street, crying: "There's dog!" Then she ran swiftly down the street.

"Goo-Goo" is a sister of the Pekinese which the business houses of the Hill block, The Automobile Service Co., the Hillito theatre, Kelly Bros. Hardware Co. and the Hood River Bakery will give away soon to the most popular boy or girl of the city.

Mrs. Fred Paasch Monday picked up a carrier pigeon which had alighted at the doorstep of her Pine Grove home. The bird, a reddish brown, seemed exhausted from long flight. On its right leg band appeared the numerals 3547, followed by a triangle and 1927. Mrs. Paasch is caring for the bird until she hears from the owner.

T. J. Wyers, accompanied by Mrs. Wyers, spent Sunday shooting Jack rabbits near Heppner Junction.

Two thousand pairs of frogs who have been wont to boom their basses and quiver their tenors into the moonlit beauty of Hawaii's nights, will soon be given a trip to the Orient, if an order received by H. L. Kelly, the territory's fish and game commissioner, can be filled.

According to Mr. Kelly, an order has been received from a fancier in Japan who desires the Hawaiian type of croaker in his business. Whether the desire for the amphibians grows from a hunch that their environment in the "land of melody" makes them more polished serenaders, or from the possibility that their edible hinder legs have been made larger by surf riding is cause for speculation.

LEGION NOTES

Action will be the key note of the entertainment at the American Legion state convention to be held in La Grande on July 21, 22, 23 this year. Oregon has many more drum corps in proportion to its Legion posts than any state in the Union and they will all be in La Grande this summer. Any and all of them are high class and capable of making much music all the time, day and night.

At the present writing there are 21 drum corps and bands promised to be in attendance—14 corps and one band from Oregon, two bands and two corps from Idaho and one each from Washington. All of these, with their many brilliant uniforms and stirring martial music will be the foundation of the largest and best convention, "The Battle of '27" ever held in Oregon in the history of the American Legion.
