CHAMBER AND BIRDS IN VITE COOLIDGE

The Hood River Chamber of Commerce Friday wired President Coolidge, joining in the invitation of other Oregonians to him and Mrs. Coolidge to visit the state before returning to Washington. The invitation cited that trolleying the Columbia for chook or silverides at the mouth of the White Salmon river might be a more alluring sport than trout fishing in the Black Hills. The president was asked to make the Columbia Gorge hotel headquarters while in the mid-Columbia.

Another Hood River organization, called the "Birds," telegraphed President Coolidge inviting him to spend a short time with them on his westward visit. Their message read as follows: "Hope following invitation is staying the crickets figurative cannot in swaying your decision make further westward tour incidentally visit Hood River. The Birds," an exclusive organization, consisting of six members with a slim outlook for further members on account of the strict and exacting character of the group requirements, herewith cordially invite you to spend 12 hours under their wing. This body would glory in making you one of our number. We are pleased to declare a holiday from all activities and devote talents to showing you the best time a human ever had."

JARDINE ASKED TO DECIDE ABOUT TRAM

Secretary William M. Jardine of the department of agriculture has been called upon to decide on the application of the Cascade Development company for a permit to build an aerial tramway to the summit of Mt. Hood. The matter has been taken to Secretary Jardine on an appeal from the decision of Colonel W. B. Grovley, chief United States forester, who denied the application several months ago, after a hearing held in this city.

Colonel Grovley denied the appeal on the ground that it is the policy of the department to retain some of the wilderness of the west in its native state for the benefit of future generations and that Mt. Hood is one of the wildernesses.

In the statement accompanying the appeal, the officials of the company declare that it is their plan to build a surface tram 2 1/2 miles long from Camp-Inn to Cooper's spur and thence to crest an aerial tram 6300 feet in length to the summit of the mountain along Cooper's spur. The estimated cost is $350,000, all of which is available. More than $10,000 already has been expended on engineering work in connection with the project.

It is further set forth that there is a popular demand for the construction of the tramway, to give people opportunity to reach the summit of the mountain who otherwise would not attempt the ascent. Such a tramway, it is said, would prove a great attraction to tourists as similar tramways in Switzerland, Germany, Austria, France and Italy are great tourist attractions and that the device in no way would mar the pristine beauty of the mountain.

"We have had many offers from people of other states who seek to make the Western mountains a great popular recreation center, such as the Alps have proved to be in Europe," said the petitioners.

"If there are any elements of our society such as the mountain enthusiasts, who have organized occasional groups to encourage climbing of peaks and who desire to penetrate the primal wilderness without having their fellowmen present in numbers, the opportunity for their indulgence is found in many millions of acres of federal reserves of Oregon and Washington, which are not opened by roads and which are kept in an inaccessible state."

The petitioners declare that they are prepared to proceed immediately with the construction of the tramway, which will take from two to three years to complete.

United States Senators McNary and Stetler and Representative N. J. Slinn have endorsed the project and will urge the granting of the petition.

Clever Acting Needs No Titles

A classic "dressing down" can be done in motion pictures without need of titles. This was demonstrated at First National's "The Drop Kick" scene, when Hedda Hopper enacted a set with Dorothy Revier, in which she effectively told her "just what kind of a gal she was," in action and without words.

Miss Hopper plays the mother of Richard Barthelmess in this college picture, and Miss Revier a jazzy widow who wants to marry Dick. When Miss Hopper got through telling her "what was what," she changed her mind. The sequence was a testimonial to the ability of both players, and is one of the many effective scenes in this gay college story of today.

Cooper's Spur Lateral Praised

To no one has the convenience of the Coopers Spur lateral of the Mount Hood Loop highway been more impressive than to Mrs. Alice Strong, Portland woman, who Sunday, accompanying Hans Hierlein to Clatsop Camp, made the journey to the hostelry from the city in 90 minutes. Mrs. Strong recalled that she journeyed to the Inn, then but recently opened, in 1892.

"I left Hood River on that trip at 6 a. m.," said Mrs. Strong, "and dinner was awaiting us when we arrived in a fog of dust that had pursued our horse-drawn stage the entire distance from Hood River. It is no trick at all getting to Clatsop Camp-Inn now in this year 1927."

Motion pictures taken of the Dempsey-Tunney fight in Philadelphia, the first fight in ring history where of championship changed hands without even a knockout in the fight will be shown at the Rialto Theatre next Monday.

Six full reels of film, showing the fighters in training and every move in the ring during the entire battle will be shown. Slow motion pictures of the fight are also shown. Many friends and well wishers of Dempsey have always claimed that he should not have lost the belt but now with the motion pictures, the public will be able to judge exactly the merits of the two fighters. In view of the fact that Dempsey made such a wonderful comeback against Sharkey recently, the fight pictures are attracting unusual crowds wherever shown. Tunney and Dempsey met again in Chicago in September and the public will have an opportunity to see both men in action on the screen before the September battle.

These pictures have broken all house records in Salem, Eugene, Portland, Vancouver and all Oregon towns where they are now showing. The peacemaker in attendance records is that over 60 per cent of the persons viewing the films are of the fairer sex attests to the remarkable interest the public has in Dempsey and Tunney and their return match. Their pictures are booked so solidly throughout the state that the Rialto was able to procure them for only the one day, Monday, August 29th. Every detail attendant to the fighter's training, their arrival at the stadium, the fight itself blow for blow is shown with lifelike fidelity as over a dozen cameras got the action from every conceivable angle. Arrangements are now being made to show the Dempsey-Tunney fight thereby giving the public a chance to see Dempsey against Tunney then his wonderful comeback against Sharkey which gave him the right to the return match with Tunney in September. In order to accommodate the crowds expected to the showing of this picture from all points around Hood River the first show will start promptly at seven o'clock Monday, August 29th.

College Stars See Hollywood at Play

The Ten National College Stars, who are working in pictures at First National Studios in Burbank this summer, are getting a good glimpse of Hollywood social life as well as studio activity.

These collegians, recently chosen in nationwide tests for new screen talent by First National Pictures, were named as official escorts to thirteen young girls chosen in newspaper contests in

TOURIST PRINTER IS NOW ABROAD

Times change. A few decades or less ago, before the construction of motor roads, country newspaper offices were visited at frequent intervals by what was then known as the old tramp printer. A few of this gentry remain, but within a few years they will probably be as rare as the Dodo bird.

Today, it is indicated that a new class of traveling printers is springing into being. The old tramp printer, who, albeit he was of a roving disposition and often spent most of his earnings on periodical drunken spree, would be most emphatically ashamed of his successor.

Some weeks ago a well-fed looking individual, wearing white knickerbockers, big round glasses with heavy rims, called at local newspaper offices. He stated that he was a "tourist printer," out seeing the country by motor. No work was available here, but before he left he touched some of the newspaper folk for small loans. He declared that it was necessary to eat.

The other day that well-fed "tourist printer" arrived in Hood River. He visited the newspaper shops, again seeking work and again seeking small loans. One member of a newspaper office offered to give him another 50 cents if he would be permitted to tell the "printer tourist" guy what he really thought of him. And that "printer tourist" as blandly as you please was ready to accept the bargain. However, he gained an opinion of himself without receiving further monetary aid.

Vincent Back at Studio

His arm still in a cast, Paul Vincent contract player with First National, returned to the studio for the first time this week, following his automobile accident when he was seriously injured.

Vincent crashed over an embankment in Beverly Hills after a tennis game, and spent some time in the hospital as a result, but is expected to resume work before the cameras shortly.

An Alpine Cow Remarked, "Here's how My richest milk's improved"

The taste tells you there's cream in every drop

IT'S unmistakable—the delicious, rich, creamy taste you get in Alpine.

That's why the finest soups, sauces and desserts are smoother and creamier when made with Alpine. That's why biscuits and cakes are lighter and finer. That's why the best cup of coffee tastes better still—with Alpine.

Into every pint of Alpine goes one quart of rigidly tested, full-cream milk—with nothing added—nothing taken away but water. And there's no cream line, no skim milk. Alpine has cream in every drop.

Yet for all its creamy goodness, Alpine costs less than ordinary milk. And it keeps indefinitely, for it is sealed in its air-tight container and sterilized. Always fresh—always pure. Get Alpine today.

This canning scheme Gives twice the cream The water's half removed!

A real treat with roast beef

Alpine Yorkshire Pudding—Sift 1 cup flour with 1/4 tsp. salt and 1 tsp. baking powder. Add gradually 1/2 cup Alpine Milk mixed with 1/4 cup water and 1 beaten egg. Cover very hot pan with fat from roast. Pour in 1/4 inch of mixture. Bake in hot oven 30 minutes, basting twice with drippings.
