In addition to their own immediate family, Mr. and Mrs. Wehnelmer entertain at Thanksgiving dinner today: Mr. and Mrs. Ed Wehnelmer of Salem, Mrs. Elizabeth Shelton, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Wehnelmer and L. C. Wehnelmer.

After having spent a month here visiting her daughter, Mrs. H. C. Johnson and son, A. T. Hale, Mrs. L. J. Hale returned to her home at Winlock, Wash., Friday.

Miss Martha Owsley of the grade school will go to her home at Gresham for Thanksgiving Day and the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Graff are enjoying a vacation stay at Newport.

Monday evening Miss Lola Graff and her brother, Gordon, entertained the high school faculty and grade school teachers at dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Wehnelmer of Salem motored here Wednesday for vacation and the week end. They expect to return to Salem Sunday.

Ordinarily the demand far exceeds the supply where houses are concerned but just now there are two very home-like properties waiting tenants. One, owned by Miss Grace Chambers and vacated when Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Chapman moved to Estacada; the other, the Cal J. Martz home which they are vacating December 1.

Miss Grace Chambers expects to leave soon for Portland where she will spend the winter.

Rev. and Mrs. W. S. Gleiser of Newberg passed through Hood River to Dayton, Wash., to spend Thanksgiving Day and until Saturday with relatives.

Due to the fact that Thursday evening was regular Grange meeting date, the meeting of the Board of Stewards was held Wednesday evening before choir practice.

The first quarterly conference for the church year will be held Thursday, December 1. This is also Grange meeting night but as this date is set by Dist. Supt. A. S. Hisey of Salem, local members of the official board need not be held to account for conflicting dates.

Announcements for next Sunday at 10 a. m., Allison Fletcher, Supt. At 11 a. m., Morning Worship; Communion service, baptism and reception of members. Epworth League, 7 p. m. Evening worship, 8 p. m., Rev. C. L. Dark, Minister.

News reached Parkdale last week of the marriage of Russell Pond in San Francisco, Calif. After a romance of 18 years, he was united to Miss Dorothy Mae Larsson of the Golden Gate City.

The Thanksgiving entertainment and picnic social given by the grade school children last Thursday evening was a decided success. The teachers and scholars had worked hard. The Thanksgiving pageant was very pleasing and very well put on. The financial part (or the pie) returned them a neat little sum.

The local Grange sponsored a good entertainment on Friday evening when Mrs. Johnson, Idaho state lecturer, gave readings. Wittner McDonald sang several numbers.

Isabelle Craven of the Good Samaritan hospital, Portland, spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. E. Craven.

Miss Ethel Haggren and Emil Nassberger of Rainier, Ore., called on Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Black, two of our grade school teachers, Sunday.

There was an Episcopalian service held by Rev. Schuyler Pratt of Hood River in the church Sunday afternoon.

A very good attendance at the local Grange when the young folk under the supervision of the lecturer, Mrs. Marvin Bader, gave an enjoyable entertainment. The evening was wound up with old fashioned dances and eats.

There was no school this week because of teachers' institute and Thanksgiving. The teachers will spend Thanksgiving in their several homes.

Don't forget the Thanksgiving service in the little brown church at 11 a. m. on Thanksgiving morning.

There will be five weeks of discussion at the Sunday morning Forum of the "History of Religion." Everybody is invited.

Mr. and Mrs. Riekman spent last week in Portland.

On alternate Saturday evenings there will be a card party in the lodge room of the Odd Fellows hall. The next party will be at 9 p. m. December 3. Everyone who plays ginocch is invited.

After a pleasurable week goose hunting, the Parkdale hunters returned from California with a full bag.

Potatoes are still rolling from Parkdale. Two cars moved this week.

After a couple of weeks' rain when over six inches of precipitation fell, the weather changed and we have been having freezing weather at night time.

Last Friday the high school students finished the week with a comic debate and program.

All packing at the Parkdale community house was finished last Thursday and the warehouse was cleaned out by the end of the week. This is the earliest on record that the Upper Valley fruit has pulled away. Of course lots of it is in cold storage in Hood River and Van Horn. Perhaps it would be easier if we had a cold storage plant at Parkdale.

Owing to the poor attendance at the shows, the Cannon Movie Circuit has been forced to close down. It is a pity that sufficient interest cannot be held to keep at least one show going in the community.

There will be a sale at the Aid bazaar and any one wishing to buy an amount of it, please bring your own jars or jugs.

The moving picture outfit which has been on the mountain for the past two weeks staged a horse stealing episode on the Alex Porteous ranch.

Tomorrow night in the Odd Fellows hall the grangers will give a dance. The Pine Grove orchestra will furnish the music. The charge is 50 cents.

On December 16 the juniors of the high school will put on a couple of plays in McInnes' hall.

On Tuesday night the sophomores gave a dance in the Steinhilber apple house.

Thursday evening, Thanksgiving, the Rebekahs will hold lodge at the usual hour, after which they will have a chicken supper.

LAVA CAVE WILL FURNISH STORAGE

Back in those terrible days when Mount Adams was in a state of volcanic eruption and when streams of molten lava ran over the countryside below it, nature fashioned for man a novel cold-storage warehouse.

Now, centuries after that eruption, man is taking advantage of nature's gift and one of the innumerable lava caves of the Mount Adams country has been pressed into service as a cold storage plant.

Geologists explain the presence of numerous lava caves and lava rivers in the Mount Adams district to the fact that the sheets of molten rock, flowing from the crater of the volcano, cooled rapidly on top but continued to flow underneath.

Long passage-like caverns, some of them miles in extent, were formed beneath the surface of the lava crust. Some of these, it is said, are connected with the glaciers which cover the sides of Adams.

A number of "ice caves" are to be found about Mount Adams. These caverns, for some reason, are partly filled with ice and maintain, the year round, a temperature like that of an ice box. So man, finding that nature had provided him with a natural refrigeration plant, has proceeded to put nature's gift to practical use.

The owner of the property on which one of these caves is located has built a wooden building over the entrance and is putting it to use as a storage place for farm products raised in the upper White Salmon valley.

This particular cave, located but a few miles from Gale, has long been an attraction for motorists visiting the section. Its conversion to practical use, however, will not deprive visitors of viewing this queer park of nature and the storeroom owner announces that the cave can be visited. One attendant is about to open the doors.

Bins and shelves have been placed in the cave and the plant will be in operation, as a naturally refrigerated cold storage place, within a few weeks.

Keep the Schools Open

(By Dr. Frederick D. Stricker of the Oregon State Board of Health)

Boards of health and school directors are often at a loss whether to close schools or to keep them open in the presence of an outbreak of communicable disease. The problem is not so difficult with the milder infections, as public panic in the presence of these diseases is seldom great enough to force school closure. In such a case, the high prevalence of diphtheria, scarlet fever or infantile paralysis is a common factor, the health officials are often obliged to consider whether or not schools should be closed. One may well ask, here, what forces health authorities to close schools in such circumstances. In general the answer is the pressure of public opinion.

The public can scarcely be expected for waiting schools closed. They have been led, for years, to believe that the closing of schools would stop an outbreak of contagious disease. School superintendents, however, are being urged to see that the closing school is not an efficient barrier to the spread of an epidemic. Lay members of boards of health and some physicians yet believe that there is no other way to control outbreaks of contagious diseases. Under such circumstances, with public opinion clamoring that "something be done" one can hardly blame the press for following what would seem sound, namely public opinion. It is unfortunate when the officials of a community do not act together. The community in which the educational and health authorities work together for the common good is fortunate. In such a case, many, you will find, even in time of panic over an outbreak of contagious disease, that the thinking people, including the physicians and the press, will support the opinions and actions of its school and health authorities.

But what can be done in an outbreak of a dangerous communicable disease to control the situation, if schools are not to be closed? Seek out the sources of infection in the community. These sources can be discovered with the aid of the physician and the health department. With the schools open this last is much easier from every point of view than with the schools closed. The schools are readily noted and their physical condition can readily be determined. The physicians can be interviewed in regard to cases under their care. Every child entering school mornings or afternoons, with the slightest suspicion of symptoms can be segregated until examined by a competent person. With schools open, school physicians and health authorities are operating a daily work in control of communicable suspects, both in the school and at home.

Health authorities realize that it is not enough to isolate, quarantine and placard in an attempt to control contagion. Active effort must be made to locate, if possible, the source of infection. People, not things, spread disease ordinarily. The closing of schools in time of epidemics or threatened epidemics, is usually the result of well-intended but poorly informed public opinion.

A Bright Youngster

A four-year-old, the son of a two-year-old, whose father is an aviator, was asked if she ever takes a ride in the airplane with her daddy. The following is the conversation:

"No, I'm too little. My mama does. When I get bigger I'm going up with him."

"Do you know Mr. Kelley?"

"Oakley, Kelley? Oh my yes."

"What car does your daddy drive?"

"He drives all of them daddies' cars in the garage, but he owns a Pontiac."

"Her daddy brought her down the street in a car a couple of blocks and instructed her to go back home on the sidewalk."

"Was that a Pontiac?"

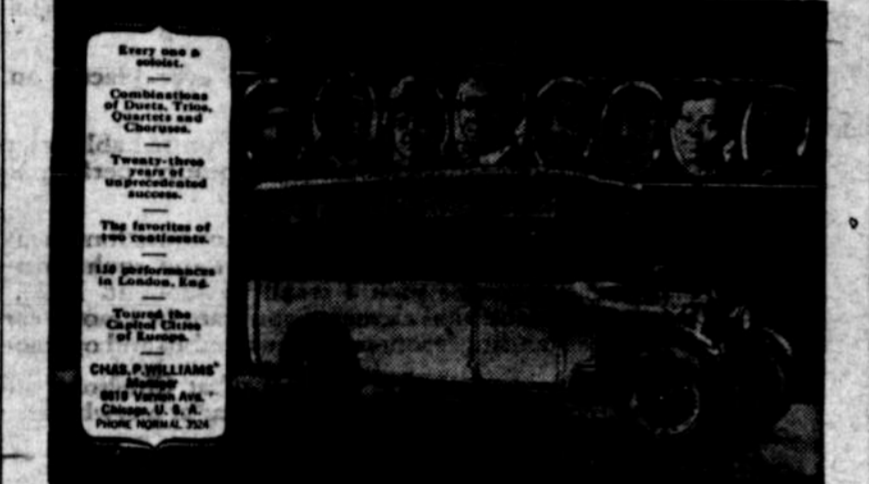

"No, that was a Studebaker."

"Where is your mama?"

"She's down at Maynard & Childs. Maynard & Childs is dead. It's W. Henry, and there's more to it. He's down the road, but he's gone and now, and Mrs. Clark is looking after his business while he's gone."

"She had forgotten the letter?"

"No, she had forgotten the letter."
