C. A. Cobb, the attorney, has moved his office out to his home in Edgewood Park, where he proposes to maintain it until the new apartment house which he is building is ready for occupancy. The apartment house stands just west of the telephone office. When finished it will contain seven modern apartments.

Miss Margaret Lacy, and Supt. Henderson were teachers of the local school who attended the annual convention of O. S. T. A. held during the holidays in Portland.

Rev. Thomas D. Yarnes, district superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal church in this district, is coming up from his home in Salem to fill the pulpit at the community church in Cascade Locks Sunday night.

Jesse V. Lester, who owns and operates the Lester Truck Line, which serves Cascade Locks and Hood River, is up and about again following a trip to a hospital, where he found himself after a collision in Portland. His truck collided with car driven by a woman at 91st avenue and stark.

Influenza has been going the rounds for the past month, and as a result there has been considerable illness of a minor nature. The epidemic appears to have about run its course and the majority who were reported under the weather are up and about again.

Mrs. W. J. Carlson has been confined to her bed the last week due

Miss Norma Sweeney returned to Portland Sunday after visiting here during the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Silver Ferras moved into their new home over the butcher shop Sunday.

Miss Myrtle Daniels has gone to Albany for a visit.

Capt. Nelson is again on the river. He is captain of the steamer Umatilla, which is bringing barges and supplies to Bonneville dam.

Turn All Statues Toward Easter Islanders' Graves

In some long-ago era of bustling energy Easter Islanders turned out statuary by the ton. Using volcanic craters on the island as quarries, the people carved out heads and torsos—little fellows 3 feet high, big fellows 20, 30 feet, even one giant 70 feet tall. Both men and women were portrayed, writes Emily C. Davis, in the Washington Star.

They had a pattern for their art, and they stuck to it. The stone faces had to have long noses, disdainful mouths, jutting eyebrows. In another quarry, workers ran a stone hat factory, hewing out a red-tinted stone for top hats to adorn the heads of gray stone giants. A red hat for a 30-foot giant would weigh full three tons.

When an image was finished, the workers slid it down the hillside and then somehow pulled or pushed the statues—some weighing as much as 40 tons—to an appropriate site. All the faces were made to turn inland, toward the graves of Easter island's dead.
