VETERAN RIVER MAN JOINS YACHT CLUB

The life of a Columbia river steamboat before the days of highways, was interestingly told at Friday night's meeting of the Cascade Yacht club by Captain W. E. Bonner, veteran river pilot.

In addition to Captain Bonner, new members recently joining the club include Jack Young, Reed Walworth, Frank Marshall, Henry J. Bellarts, Rolf Enquist, Warren Dunn, Larry Lull and J. W. Miles.

Chairman Herschel Shreve reported on information received from the Puget Sound Navy Yard at Bremerton as to sizes and adaptability of surveyed navy boats soon to be sold there. Membership chairman, Wallace MacGregor spoke on the desirability of obtaining new members particularly interested in boatbuilding, as a means of stabilizing the club.

The reading of a magazine article on going native was followed by an open discussion on boats, prior to adjournment. Following adjournment the members were entertained by piano selections played by C. L. Johnson of the U. S. engineers. Also present were Messrs. Mac C. Rigler, Bracy, Tenny and Legner.

"SPILLWAY" RECIPIENT

"Spillway," the reservation's news organ, is the proud possessor of a modern mimeograph machine. Under the guiding hands of "Chick" Johnson, the workmen look forward to a bigger and better paper in the future.

JAPAN ORDERS CLUBS

Among the uses to which the recently opened radio telephone service between the United States and Japan has been put was the ordering of a set of flexible shaft American golf clubs by the managing director of a Japanese news agency.

ANCIENT TRICK BRINGS CHAMP WIN OVER RIVAL

By PAUL STURGES
Chronicle Sports Editor

Where ability couldn't, experience could, Wildcat Johnson discovered in his main event match with Farmer Stewart at the Locks pavillon last week. One of the oldest of wrestling tricks brought the rough Canadian middleweight champion victory over a youngster from Salt Lake City, who was showing more stuff than in any of his previous matches here.

Promoter Jim Merrill's weekly grappling smoker had the largest fan turn-out of the series on their feet and heading for the exits when Johnson turned apparent defeat into unpopular victory. As Stewart worked his way into an Indian deathlock, one of the most painful of all holds, Johnson quietly patted him on the back.

Thinking that it was Referee Ed McMillen signifying the fall and match, the Farmer rose, beaming with pride. The Cat immediately applied a rabbit punch that left Stewart a helpless victim on the mat, jumped on him, and the match was over.

Loud rose the protests of the angered fans and the tricked Stewart, but to no avail, for the trick was within the rules, and the official arbiter upheld Johnson's victory.

Previous to that time the pair had gone through a hectic 23 minutes, with Stewart getting away to a flying start after a long first fall with a Boston crab hold. Four minutes later the pair were on even terms again, Johnson battering his opponent to the mat with elbow slams and applying a press for the nod. Then came the trick and finish for Stewart.

In a special exhibition which would have been a real crowd pleaser had it not been for the initial match on the card, Mrs. Babe Johnson, 145, Canada, wife of the mat king, downed Mrs. Chief Little Wolf, 140, Alaska, in the second round with a body scissors.

The show was "stolen" from the minute the opener got under way. Without doubt the match between Tony Daro, tough Gresham lad, and Steve Ockley, 156-pound Alaskan, was the finest ever staged in the dam district. From start to finish it was filled with action, and not for one minute did the fans voice disapproval. Naturally enough, the following matches seemed slow compared to it, when in reality they were exceptionally good.

After 30 minutes of grappling Timekeeper Jimmy Dolan had to almost get a siren to make the rivals understand the match was over. With each holding one fall, the matmen were out for blood. Three times Dolan banged the bell before Refere McMillen heard the noise above the roars of the crowd and broke up the fray.

Up against a man who once was voted the most popular middleweight grappler in Canada, Daro got little chance to use his clever tricks in the opening fall. A series of jarring elbow slams and a press found Ockley on top after 15 minutes had elapsed.

In the second fall the Alaskan made one mistake, he rumbled Daro's tender ears, and then the war was really on. Ockley was battered to every corner of the ring before Daro finished him off with a series of flying tackles ten minutes later.

The third all was every bit as exciting as the initial two, but neither could gain noticeable headway in the final minutes, although Daro was applying a double toe hold viciously when the match was broken up.

CASCADE LOCKS

PROGRESS NO. 20

Spring has been late in arriving this season, but it begins to look like it was here, at last. All up and down the highway throughout the district you hear the sound of hammer and saw. This means people are building. They are making garden, stirring about. Everyone feels confident that there is going to be much building, that the summer will be alive with activity. This is a splendid feeling. All of us are interested in developing a permanent community, so let us be optimistic, alert and cheerful.
