The Chronicle

At the Theatre

Following tonight's showing of Katherine Hepburn and Charles Boyer in the musically romantic "Break of Hearts," the Roosevelt theatre on the Bonneville dam reservation turns to a week of mystery, fun and romance.

In "Death Flies East," coming Friday and Saturday, Hollywood has done something different in the line of turning the tables on traditional murder-mystery film fiction. Here, instead of the detective leading a charmed life, mid flying bullets and whatnot, the flat-foot sleuth is poisoned right off the bat, leaves the other nine passengers of the transcontinental plane to solve the puzzle of his death.

The plane's passengers are a motley crew, including a spy, several business men, a young college professor and a girl breaking parole from prison by crossing a state line. Conrad Nagel, old screen and stage favorite, is starred with Florence Rice.

"Broadway Bill," starring Warner Baxter and Myrna Loy comes Sunday, Monday and Tuesday to the Roosevelt to show what happens to a young man, roustabout at heart, who prefers the open road and horses at heart to a young, beautiful and selfish wife and the smug security of an executive job held through the doubtful generosity of a financial-minded father-in-law.

To further complicate matter is thrust his wife's sister, a girl who has the identical temperament. It takes a lot of scrambling around to get that straightened out. But the actual story forms just the framework for the film, directed by Frank Capra, who was responsible for the success of "It Happened One Night." He injects his delightful incidental touches remembered long after the story is forgotten.

Calm yourselves, ladies and gentlemen, if you can when you see all the mischief Robert Young gets into in "Calm Yourself," Tuesday and Wednesday at the Roosevelt.

Fired by his fiance's father, Young, as a young advertising man opens a "confidential service" agency in New York—with momentous results. He promises to do any job for his subscribers, no matter how delicate. The trouble is, he has to look for a wealthy client's beautiful daughter plus a one-year-old heir to a fortune, and that sort of queers him with his fiance. The police are wondering where the baby is, his fiance is wondering about the other girl, so all in all, Young has a complicated time.

GEER

Miss Blanche Bowman and Grant Perry of Portland visited Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Bogart Sunday.

Mrs. Kathryn Geer was a visitor to Portland Monday.

Mrs. J. Stevens, who returned from Portland several weeks ago after an illness, is recovering rapidly.

POWER COMPANY PAINTS

The West Coast Power company has finished painting its hydroelectric station and houses near Columbia Gorge ranger station. New paint is light cream color with deep chocolate trim, making the place look very attractive.

WARRENDALE

Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Coleman are new residents of the Warren Packing company tract, having moved into the home vacated by Mr. and Mrs. G. D. May, who moved last week to Portland.

Mrs. P. J. Cavanaugh of Portland was a visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chic Johnson several days last week. Mrs. Cavanaugh is Mrs. Johnson's mother.

Art Davis returned from a short visit in Portland Saturday afternoon with a newly painted car.

Carl Erickson spent Saturday evening in Portland.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Silvers and family spent the weekend watching the rodeo at Goldendale, Wn. With them returned Mr. and Mrs. "Cowboy" Frank Smith and family, to spend a day or two before going on to Gresham, where Mr. Smith will perform in the Multnomah county fair.

Jimmy Walls spent the weekend at the Oregon coast beaches.

Mr. and Mrs. Art Beecher spent Saturday evening in Portland.

L. E. Stevens went fishing up Wind river in Washington, returned with the limit in trout, most all big fellows.

Mr. and Mrs. Chic Johnson's toy fox terrier thinks he's some smart pup. Mr. and Mrs. Warren K. Dunn's big tomcat thinks he's quite a cat. Last week cat and dog tangled. The Dunn's cat emerged with the championship decision.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Crocker, Mr. and Ms. B. F. Cater picnicked Saturday at Eagle creek with Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Harper and daughters, Viola and Patricia, of Portland. Mr. Harper is connected with Pacific Bridge company.

Clifford Steiner accompanied L. T. Reynolds of the forest supervisor's office in Portland to the forest service picnic at Roamers rest Sunday, he went to Gresham to see the auto races.

Art Beecher's well-liked wire-hair was instantly killed Sunday when struck by a passing car on the highway.

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Jettries were in Portland several days last week.

Mrs. George Mason of Portland has been spending the past few days with her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Mason.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Cox took Anne May Armstrong Sunday to a picnic at Herman creek.

Richard Carter, son of Mrs. B. S. Carter, returned Sunday night from a two-months' visit at Port Townsend, Wash., with his grandmother, who brought him back and will stay at Warrendale for an indefinite visit.

H. F. Miesmer has moved from Warrendale to North Bonneville to be closer to his work. He was transferred by Columbia to the north shore warehouse from Bradford island.

William Trueback returned Sunday from Astoria in his fish-boat after a nine-week absence. The salmon, he says, were running in fine all month at the mouth of the river, but because of the strike, he and the rest of the fishermen made barely enough to eat on. He made the upriver cruise in two days, staying overnight at St. Helens, although he has made it in 15 hours straight running. He says the big pilchard fishing boats from California are taking feed away from the salmon as they did off the Golden Gate, thus doing away almost entirely with the Sacramento river salmon industry.

Mr. and Mrs. Chic Johnson have decided to name their home "Bughouse." Johnson captured his second big scorpion the other night in his bedroom, has him pickled in a bottle of alcohol together with a wierd-looking yellow-spotted spider he found earlier in the house and a black widow spider sent him from The Dalles.

FIRE VIOLATORS FINED

Everett Oxford of Hood River was fined $7.50 by Justice Stranahan in Hood River last week for leaving his campfire burning unattended. It cost J. Harris of Corbett $5 to burn brush without a permit when he appeared last week before Justice Eastman at Gresham. District Ranger Roy L. Weeman brought the charges.
