At the Theatre

Joe E. Brown is coming to town. His latest comedy romance, "Bright Lights," filled with mirth and melody, is scheduled as the feature attraction at the Roosevelt theatre Friday and Saturday.

The production is a hilarious comedy of "backstage" with songs coming in naturally.

Scores of beautiful chorus girls appear in tuneful dance numbers staged by Busby Berkeley.

The picture is said to be the best in which Joe E. Brown has appeared.

The story centers about Joe, a hooper and comic in a burlesque show, whose stage partner is his wife, Ann Dvorak. Patricia Ellis, a madcap heiress, gets a job in the burlesque show as an adventure. William Gargan, publicity manager for a big Broadway producer, recognizes her, and engages her to play on Broadway.

How Patricia took Joe for a ride and how it works out to a reconciliation with Ann forms the plot around which the action develops to a new and surprising climax.

The year's musical show of shows, "Broadway Melody of 1936," will be featured Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, starring Jack Benny, Eleanor Powell, Robert Taylor, Una Merkel and a host of other players.

The picture is a skillful blending of comedy, romance and music, centering around Benny as a newspaper "keyhole man" who tries to put one fast one too many. Powell, known the best known woman tapdancer on the screen, appears as the girl who makes good in the show that Taylor puts on, all unknown to him.

The entire production proceeds without a dull moment. Included are some of the year's most popular song hits, dancing and comedy, all woven into a skillfully-knit story.

As timely as tomorrow's front page and as dramatic as the crime-
