

Uncle Sam Fast Becoming the Greatest Tree Planter

Tree planting in this country is looking up, according to the United States forest service. In 1935 the forest service's own planting on national forest lands was very close to a quarter million acres, more than that planted by all agencies—federal, state, and private—in 1934 when the total was 206,333 acres. Many of the other agencies planted substantially greater acreages in 1935 than the year before.

Uncle Sam, although relatively new at it, is becoming the world's leading tree planter. Up to last year his grand total of plantings by all agencies amounted to only 2,394,397 acres, equal to about half the area of Massachusetts. This year's plantings in the national forests alone will increase the total by more than 10 per cent. There are more than 162,000,000 acres in our national forests alone, and the estimated total forest acreage in this country is over 500,000,000 acres.

By VIRGINIA VALE

THOSE awards made by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences are still causing violent debates all over Hollywood. Executives of the Screen Actors Guild and the Screen Writers Guild telegraphed the members the day before the awards were made, urging them not to attend the presentation banquet. They charged that the academy is producer-controlled, and that studio politics controlled the giving of the awards. Of course the Academy heads denied that, and the battle has been on ever since. It is claimed that Bette Davis was given the prize for the best performance given by a woman during the year, not because of her work in "Dangerous," but because she didn't get the award last year for her performance in "Of Human Bondage." It is urged that Victor McLaglen, who won the prize for the men, gave just one good performance, in "The Informer," whereas Charles Laughton and Paul Muni each gave several. In fact, there are arguments about everything but that belated award of D. W. Griffith for his work in the days before there was any Academy. People wept when Henry Walthall, the "Little Colonel," introduced D. W.

They're rewriting Ken Maynard's new picture, because the lioness who acted in it was killed recently. (You may have seen her in "Sequoia.") The company was on location, and the lioness went out for some exercise. In California there's a bounty of $80 on mountain lions, and a prospector thought this was just one more lion, and shot her.

If you want to go into the movies, you'll be interested in the news that several of the big companies are planning to develop their own actors, by establishing schools in New York. In fact, Paramount already has such a school, and RKO and Metro are thinking of following their example. It's all caused by the fact that the picture companies have not been able to recruit suitable players from the stage. They've scoured the field of vaudeville, radio, night clubs and college dramatic societies, and have concluded that training schools are the best solution of this problem.

John Boles had to cut short his personal appearance tour and rush back to Hollywood to be starred in "White Fang." Incidentally, if you have to diet to keep your weight down John can sympathize with you. He starts the day by drinking lemon juice in hot water, and the big moment of dinner, for him, is two lamb chops.

Randolph Scott, who went into pictures, not because he was stellar material, but because it looked like a good way to make a living, is to be starred in "The Last of the Mohicans."

Jean Hersholt gives such an excellent performance in "The Country Doctor" that his old contract was torn up and a new one, with the salary doubled, was given him.

We Are Each Assigned a Work None Other Can Do

No one of my fellows can do that special work for me which I came into this world to do; he can do a higher work, but he cannot do my work, any more than I can work over to him, any more than I can hand over my responsibilities and my gifts.

"Pink" that she's headed for the top in pictures, still has to go to school in the studio, because she's not yet eighteen. The fact that she has already made a name for herself as a dancer in New York and London makes not the slightest difference.

Walt Disney has a school, too, devoted to training artists to animate the Disney pictures. Recently he advertised for help, and only fifty people out of the 1,700 who answered made the grade. Now he's advertising again. The candidates whom he accepts receive a small salary while they're learning the work, and then go on the pay roll as animators.

Gary Cooper's wife, Sandra, who doesn't care for the movie spotlights, has made a reputation in spite of herself; she's known as one of the best dressed women in Hollywood. The other is Kay Francis.

Small Can Be Great in Bettering of Humanity

When a small nation accomplishes something with its limited means, says ex-President Masaryk of Czechoslovakia in Karel Capek's "President Masaryk Tells His Story," what it achieves has an immense and exceptional value, like the widow's mite. Speaking of his country, Masaryk writes, "Our smallness as a nation does not matter; it even has its advantages; we can know each other better, we can live more intimately; we can feel more at home. But it is a great thing when a small nation among great ones does not get left behind, but takes its share in the work of bettering humanity."

Wrestling With Scowls Still Sport in Japan

Among the few surviving old sports in Japan, wrestling still retains all the color and ceremony of the past. In the ring, Samuel H. Wainwright, Jr., writes in "Beauty in Japan," wrestlers face each other with fists on the ground and stare looks on their faces. If either is upset by the scowl of the other, he calls for time out, each returns to his corner, sips water and starts all over again. Wrestlers finally called for so much time out that it was limited to a total of 12 minutes.
