Mrs. "Buddy" Murrin entertained her many friends at an impromptu piano recital in the civic auditorium Sunday evening. Mrs. Murrin, it is said, has a way with the keyboard that is well to hear.

Archie Cook mopped the perspiration from his brow this week and threw open the doors to his newly fitted lunch counter. Patrons remarked about the new fittings and glistening white paint that now gleams inside the new establishment. The upstairs section will be retained as a dining room, in view of the continued good weather.

Captain and Mrs. Colby Myers spent Saturday in Portland.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bauer and son, Robert, spent the week-end in Portland.

Mr. and Mrs. George Burtch and family spent the week-end in the district, stopping at the Roosevelt inn.

Katherine Uger spent the week-end in Portland with her mother.

William Audette of North Bonneville visited friends at the Roosevelt inn Sunday. From all reports it was a general get-together of all hands.

Miss Dorothy Bebeau, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Matt Bebeau, was a visitor in Bonneville over Monday and Tuesday. It was the first vacation she has had in several weeks and very much enjoyed.

Julius Caesar, famous Bonneville dog, went to Portland last Friday to make his home with Dan Birkemeier of O. B. S., but returned early Saturday to the Bonneville residence, refusing to be quoted in any way as to the reason for his abrupt return. However, we understand from reliable source that he did not exactly return of his own free will. It seems that Dan Birkemeier took him home to enjoy city life for awhile and his first act upon being let out was to see what he could do in the way of depopulating the immediate neighborhood of dogs. Some of the people about frowned upon this activity as it was considered some of the dogs were entitled to priority rights, but their frowning disconcerted Julius not a bit, especially as he found no competition worthy of the name. When this palled, our hero started treeing cats, and this really got him in trouble as several of Dan's neighbors are proud owners of prize cats and immediately squawked to Dan about his dog's activities. So, to help Julius, or so he thought, Dan locked him in the basement, whereupon Caesar protested in the style to which he has become accustomed in Bonneville. Now anybody who has heard Caesar howl knows how well versed he is in that art and will understand why Dan got out of his nice warm bed about 2 a.m. and drove Caesar back to Bonneville. However, Caesar still refuses to talk and, unfortunately, Mr. Birkemeier cannot be quoted. As children still read these pages so the official and authoritative reason for his return to these parts will have to remain a matter of conjecture. Anyway, welcome home, Julius Caesar.

One of the most popular sports at the Roosevelt hotel is 'Goon Hunting'. All that is required for joining the hunt is the ability and willingness to climb or fall through windows and rush at breakneck speed thru the darkness in pursuit of an uncatchable quarry. It is imperative that all who wish to engage in this delightful sport be sure to tell Eldon Armstrong, manager of the hotel, of these intentions as we understand there has been some trouble at times differentiating between the hunters and the goons.

A great deal of conjecture has arisen as to who originated the sport of racing down walls on hands and knees, so far as we know, this form of racing is restricted to the Bonneville area.

At the Theatre

Breath-taking suspense, throbbing romance and accelerating action are artistically woven into RKO Radio's thrilling murder mystery, "Two in the Dark", which opens at the Roosevelt theater Friday and Saturday of this week.

Adding a new wrinkle to the usual mystery plot is the fact that the principal character is an amnesia victim, and is hopelessly handicapped in trying to extricate himself from the maze of circumstances that weave about him pointing the deadly finger of suspicion upon him.

Who plays in this picture? Margot Grahame is the lady who finds herself falling hopelessly in love with the man who has lost his memory. And the poor gentleman in this sad plight is Walter Abel. Gail Patrick does a mighty fine job in the supporting cast.

Sunday, Monday and Tuesday the reservation playhouse has scheduled none other than Bing Crosby in that top-flight show, "Anything Goes". And the show is just what the name implies. It's a bang-up, sparkling musical show, full of song-hits of the year, and the new versions of rough and tumble love themes.

The day of the languorous lover is gone, and a big, burly, two-armed he-man who hops 'em first and kisses them afterwards takes the center of the stage. It would be hard to think of Crosby, the crooner, as a rough and tumble he-man, but watch him knock 'em down and drag 'em out.

And the supporting cast. An yes. You have heard that voice over the radio countless times. Ethel Merman is the name and does she hit it when she sings "Anything Goes".

If you miss this show you just ain't got no appreciation for good music. Three top-flight song hits. Two of radio and screen's greatest singers of modern melody—beautiful girls, the time, the place and oh shucks.

Topping off the show-week is that rollicking comedy, "Love Before Breakfast", with Preston Foster, Carole Lombard and Cesar Romero. This screen offering is delightfully humorous, sometimes gay and witty, sometimes biting in its clever satire, but a sure bet for a laugh.

Foster and Romero find themselves at opposites as centering their attentions upon the same, self-sufficient, haughty young lady, Carole Lombard. You may have met the type and wished you could have done something about it. You couldn't, could you? Well, come and see what the boys do about it. There is a lot of satisfaction to be had watching someone "get it".

A technical point of interest pops up in the filming of this show. For the first time, four sides of a room can be seen at one time in one scene. The photography is excellent and the lighting sequences, so necessary for effect, are extremely well done.

Oh yes, it's showing at the Roosevelt theater at Bonneville Wednesday and Thursday, May 13 and 14. Don't miss this picture. You can stow your dumps and take aboard a cargo of laughs by the simple process of seeing these crazy people live their crazy life.
