

Famous Mutiny

The most famous mutiny in maritime history broke out in 1797. Mutineers led by Fletcher Christian rebelled against the discipline of Lieutenant William Blight and set the commander and 18 men adrift in a small boat in which they made a remarkable voyage of safety.

The Hollywood movie version makes it appear Blight's official cruelty was extraordinary in the British navy and that the mutiny caused whipping of sailors to be ended. It wasn't extraordinary, and sailors continued to be lashed for another 100 years.

It wasn't Blight's cruelty, but the regret of the men at leaving their paradise in Tahiti, that caused the mutiny. The average age of the 23 mutineers was twenty-six. — Philadelphia Inquirer.

Charming Music

No music is so charming to my ears as the requests of my friends, and the supplications of those in want of my assistance.

TAKE THE GRIPING OUT OF PERIODIC PAIN

Periodic disturbance is natural but the stabbing backaches, nerve-racking, piercing, throbbing pain is not. Your nerves, your equilibrium, your happiness, your health demand relief. When the pain begins, take two SALICON tablets and repeat if necessary. SALICON is quickly effective, forms no habit, does not disturb the digestion and is convenient to carry around. Incidentally, it is good for headaches and colds too.

Ask your druggist for SALICON.

EATING HEAVY FOODS

brings on highly acid stomach condition—"morning after" distress. Milnesia, original milk of magnesia in wafer form, quickly relieves distress. Each wafer equals 4 teaspoonfuls milk of magnesia. Crunchy, delicious flavor. 20c, 35c & 60c at druggists.

Rid Yourself of Kidney Poisons

DO you suffer burning, scanty or too frequent urination; backache, headache, dizziness, loss of energy, leg pains, swellings and puffiness under the eyes? Are you tired, nervous—feel all unstrung and don't know what is wrong?

Then give some thought to your kidneys. Be sure they function properly for functional kidney disorder permits excess waste to stay in the blood, and to poison and upset the whole system.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They are recommended the world over. You can get the genuine, time-tested Doan's at any drug store.

OCEAN ROMANCE

IMPULSIVELY Cecily removed the dress from its hanger and held it to the light. Her breath caught in a little gasp of delight and admiration. Without warning an idea flashed across her mind. It was only 6:30. Countess de Villegby would be down in the main dining salon at least for another hour... Why not? Before she could change her mind, Cecily slipped out of her stewardess' costume and donned the silver and blue. It fitted her perfectly. She stood before the full-length mirror, admiring herself, thrilled.

A step sounded, and she whirled. A wave of indignation, guilt and resentment warmed her blood. Basil Nutter stood in the doorway, trim and smart in his white and blue steward's uniform. His eyes were wide. He held a tray with champagne and glasses.

"Beautiful!" The word was spoken involuntarily, unconsciously. Cecily hesitated.

Prompted once more by impulse, Cecily said loftily: "Put it there, boy." And gestured carelessly toward a table.

Basil hesitated, seemed to come out of his trance. "Yes, ma'am," he said and bowed meekly. He set down the tray. "Is there anything else?"

Cecily was contemptuous. She had always been contemptuous of hero-worshippers. She shook her head. "No. You may go."

Attired once more in her starched costume, Cecily went out, vaguely annoyed and depressed, thinking of Basil Nutter, wondering what the real Countess de Villegby could be like to exert such an influence on a Harvard football hero. She determined to return later in the evening on some pretext. She wanted to see what royal blood looked like.

But by midnight the Countess hadn't returned, and Cecily went to bed. The next day at noon she met Basil Nutter in the narrow corridor forward of A deck's main salon stairway. He stopped and smiled pleasantly.

"Hello," he said. "Say, you're from Smith, aren't you?"

"Am I?" said Cecily coldly.

"Well, I had an idea you were."

There are stickers all over your trunk."

"You're very observing." He shrugged. "O. K. I thought you might want to get acquainted. Sorry." He stood aside and she passed him.

Thinking about it later, Cecily wished she hadn't been quite so cold. So far it had been a dull voyage. Basil looked like a lot of fun. The next time she saw him she smiled. He stopped short.

"Say, there's a movie tonight and a dance afterward for the A-deckers. Like to go?"

"All right," she said.

Before the evening was over she had practically forgotten her antipathy for him. He proved tremendously interesting and they had quite a gay time.

Thereafter she held herself in check. She was a little more reserved. Not that Basil made any advances. He didn't.

The evening before they were scheduled to dock at Liverpool, Basil asked her to come up on the top deck with him and look at the moon. She went, forgetting what soft moonlight sometimes does to you. For a long time they sat without speaking. Basil turned to her suddenly.

"It's no use," he said. "I can't help it."

"Can't help what?" Cecily asked.

"Telling you that I love you. I was a little afraid at first that it might be one of those romances that ocean liners sometimes are responsible for because of the forced companionship and feeling of intimacy. But it isn't. It's real. I love you. I can't bear leaving you tomorrow."

Cecily caught her breath. "Or the countess either, I suppose?" she said without thinking.

"Countess?" He frowned. "Countess de Villegby? The redhead whose dress you tried on that day? I don't get it."

"Redhead?" Cecily's eyes opened wide. "Why, she is a redhead, isn't she? Flaming red. And I'm brunette. That means you couldn't have mistaken—" She broke off, biting her lip. And when he seemed on the verge of asking a question, she forestalled him by a method that was, though not unique, quite effective.

"Never Retire," Says Man at 104

"Never retire. When you work, you give up the friendships and contacts with life that spur you on." That's the rule for happy longevity passed on by Joseph V. Hart of Los Angeles as he celebrated his one-hundred-and-fourth birthday. He added: "I gave up the most intense thing in my life when I retired—hard work. I now live to die."

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

Presidential Straw Votes.
BOHEMIAN GROVE, CALIF.—Every baby, as I've always heard, is born with a soft spot in its head, and once in a while there's one who never gets over it, but grows up and, in presidential years, goes around taking straw votes on railroad trains in order definitely to find out which ticket will be elected.

He is a kindred spirit to the other fellow, who, to settle the whole issue right now and avoid crowding at the polls in November, offers to bet you a cool thousand that his man beats your man, and then, before leaving, tries to borrow five dollars from somebody so he can get his laundry out of hock.

Having met both Irvin S. Cobb types within the ten days before coming here and being fearful that both species is going to multiply rapidly during the ensuing three months, I'm thinking seriously of taking the veil until after the campaign ends. Politics certainly breeds tricks.

The Little Red School House.
YES, in my early days we also had the little red schoolhouse. Maybe the reason we liked it then was that it got its red tone from the paint on the outside and not from the teaching staff on the inside.

Likewise, in those unprogressive times, we thought the youth of the land should be taught to cherish the American flag for something besides private hissing purposes. Hopelessly old fashioned, eh, what?

The Dictator Business.
IT LOOKS as though, when the battle dust lifts from that distracted country, Spain will have a dictator, dictators being fashionable.

It seems to be comparatively easy to make a success of it, too. Just follow a formula: Make it a blasphemous violation of the first commandment for anyone to assign you second place.

Be sure all sentences personally uttered begin with the capital letter "I" and end with the pronoun "me."

Convince yourself that, in order ever to behold any human being who is your equal in moral and mental stature, you must carry about with you a full-length mirror.

Never permit yourself to be photographed in your nightshirt, but always in full uniform.

On arising, lock the jaws and clench the fists and leave 'em that way all day.

And—this is very important—have a dependable police force and somebody to pick on, preferably somebody without any friends.

Oxen Versus Onions.
WITH no aim to set up as a specialist in human behavior, I think I've stumbled on a significant, timely discovery. I found in a scientific work this statement: "Each living growth has to begin in a single microscopic cell. Moreover, every future thing of either animal or vegetable kingdom contains in that first cell a fixed number of even more infinitesimal bodies called chromosomes. In the ox, the guinea pig, the man and the onion, the number is the same invariably."

I contend this natural kinship in classification may explain why, in campaign years, some of us are bellowing oxen, some are docile guinea pigs and most of the rest of us are just plain onions.

Household Questions

Custard pies should first be started to bake in a hot oven. Set the crust, then the heat of the oven should be quickly reduced so that the custard may cook slowly.

Never beat or stir cereals or rice with a spoon. It makes them pasty. Use a silver-plated fork.

After washing white silk stockings or gloves and rinsing them thoroughly be sure to hang them in the shade to dry. This will keep them white.

If the chicken is well rubbed inside and out with a cut lemon before being cooked it will make the meat white, juicy and tender.

Left-over cauliflower can be dipped in cracker crumbs and egg and fried in deep fat and served for luncheon or supper.

When blankets are washed at home do not wring them dry. Instead hang them outdoors on the clothesline to dry.

Before heating milk in a saucepan rinse the pan with water so the milk will not scorch so easily.
